Bomb Throwers Are 'Bums' PM Tells Quebec Audience

ST. GEORGES DE BEAUCE, Que. (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau wound up a successful half-day visit to this community Friday mixing his usual carefree elan with some hard words for a minority of "bums" who throw bombs.

It was a date Mr. Trudeau was more than a month late in keeping.

The local St. Jean Baptiste Society had invited Mr. Trudeau to attend its June 24 celebrations after the society branch in Sherbrooke withdrew its invitation in the face of terrorist threat and a bomb explosion.

"You don't back down because of a few thugs who set off bombs and that's why I wanted to meet you," the prime minister said in French.

The people here were obviously keen on meeting Mr. Trudeau. More than 3,000 turned out to cheer when he was introduced by Richard Busque, president of the local branch of the St. Jean Baptiste Society.

Mr. Trudeau later flew to Roberval, 100 miles north of Quebec City, to open a 25-mile marathon swim today at Lac St. Jean.

He was showered with kisses, smiles and handshakes as he drove in an open convertible to the arena where he was to speak in St. Georges de Beauce, about 55 miles south of Quebec City.

One incident was noticed.

PULLED KNIFE

Mr. Trudeau turned and the man pulled what appeared to be a hunting knife from his pocket, lifted it and glared at the prime minister. The event passed unnoticed by five Mounties in a car close behind.

In his speech, Mr. Trudeau said:

"We need you and Canada needs Quebec. Quebec is the heart of Canada. Without Quebec, Canada will not have its heart and Canadian life will end.

"As long as we have people like you in this country, it will be safe."

He added, however, that when elected politicians permit a small minority of "bums, a small minority of maniacs" to push them around, freedom is on the way out.

No Chance for Diplomacy As Long as Mao in Power

By HARRISON SALISBURY
(New York Times)

Premier Tsedenbal of Mongolia, whose country is in the front line of the Sino-Soviet dispute, spoke openly with me of Chinese attempts to overthrow his regime and of actual Chinese aggression along his frontier.

He believes Mao is determined to bring Mongolia once more under Chinese sway, and he thinks there is no longer hope of resolving the quarrel by diplomatic means.

Mao is not to be reasoned with. So long as he remains in power, the danger to Mongolia, to Russia, to all of China's neighbors, will continue.

Tsedenbal—a veteran of the war against Japan—recalls the similar threat that the Japanese posed to Mongolia and the Soviet Union in the heyday of Japan's Kwantung Army.

And he notes how that threat was met by the savage defeat inflicted on Japan's Sixth Army by Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov in the summer of 1939, and then eliminated by the lightning thrust of Soviet and Mongol forces in a two-week campaign in August, 1945.

Last in a Series

Tsedenbal's thinking is echoed in Moscow, where books, military studies and memoirs pour out about the Zhukov campaign at Khalkhin Gol River in eastern Mongolia, and about the Soviet blitzkrieg against Japan by Marshals Vasilevsky and Malinovsky at the end of the Second World War.

It is no coincidence that Russia's tank forces today are deployed in the same positions they occupied in August, 1939, and August, 1945.

MORE GLOOMY

Will there be a new Khalkhin Gol? That is the question debated behind the scenes in Moscow.

The party leaders are more and more gloomy over the chance for a peaceful or diplomatic solution with China. They share Tsedenbal's view that there is no hope as long as Mao lives.

Whether the situation might improve with Mao's death is a question for argument.

Some of the older leaders, men no longer in power like Anastas I. Mikoyan and Nikita Khrushchev, are said to believe there is a chance that, once Mao is out of the way, China will moderate her policy and some kind of modus vivendi might be worked out.

MAJORITY

But younger leaders, possibly a majority of the Politburo, seem to have lost hope for a peaceful solution. Soviet military men speak

Nixon Cheered By Romanians

Bucharest Visit Irks Russians

BUCHAREST (AP) — President Nixon arrived in this Communist capital today to the most enthusiastic welcome of his world tour, with thousands lining the streets.

He told them the United States is ready to help set up a Europe "free from the fear of war or threats of war."

So great was the outpouring of Romanians that the motorcade carrying Nixon and President Nicolae Ceausescu was stopped three times en route from the airport to downtown Bucharest. Nixon left his car to shake outstretched hands.

Along the route he called out in Romanian: 'Long live Romanian-American friendship' and there were cries of 'Hoo-rah' while others tossed bouquets at him. The throngs waved U.S. and Romanian flags.

Ceausescu had welcomed Nixon on his arrival from Pakistan stressing peaceful co-existence as "a safe way of building a climate of confidence."

Nixon, the first American president to visit a Communist capital, was once or twice shoved off balance by the people pressing around him, but he never lost his footing.

CAME IN FRIENDSHIP

Nowhere in the six Asian nations Nixon visited earlier on his 25,000-mile tour did the greeting crowds seem so genuinely friendly. Some Romanians appeared moved to the point of tears. Nixon obviously was elated.

In his airport speech, Nixon declared: "Let us agree at the outset to be frank with each other. . . . but nations can have widely different internal orders and live in peace. The United States believes that the rights of all nations must be equal."

In his welcoming remarks, Ceausescu said he recalled with satisfaction the meeting he had with Nixon two years ago.

He said the frankness of those meetings will prevail during their talks today and Sunday.

He stressed the necessity for the development of friendly relations and peaceful coexistence as "a safe way of building a climate of confidence."

U.S. WILL RESPOND

With his words translated into Romanian as he spoke, Nixon began reading from a prepared text for the first time on the trip. He said, the United States stands ready "to respond firmly and positively to sincere and concrete initiatives that others make."

The road from the airport to Bucharest 12 miles away was lined with soldiers armed with automatic rifles. Above them the American Stars and Stripes

Papal Visit, Peace Bid Concluded

KAMPALA (AP) — Making no announcement of success in his efforts to arrange peace talks for war-torn Nigeria, Pope Paul left for Rome today after spending three days in Uganda on his eighth trip abroad as Roman Catholic pontiff.

The pope talked with a three-man delegation from the secessionist Nigerian state of Biafra just before ending his visit but there was no announcement of any progress toward peace.

Augustine Okwu, Biafra's diplomatic representative in East Africa and one of three Biafran representatives who are here to help Pope Paul get peace talks going, said he had a "friendly, fruitful and understanding" meeting with the pontiff Friday.

Okwu said he thought the pope's efforts had been helpful, but added that "nothing has been excluded and nothing has been decided yet" on the possibility of peace talks.

Pope Paul also met with a federal Nigerian delegation and with a Ugandan team led by President Milton Obote, who has taken a leading role in trying to get talks started.

Perfect Gift For Wedding

When Abel Rosal and Ruth Maria Vieira arrived home after their wedding ceremony, they discovered a cardboard box with holes punched in it among a pile of presents waiting to be opened.

Inside was an infant boy and a note reading: "Present from a mother in no condition to educate this baby."

McGEER'S PLEDGES DRAW PICNIC CHEERS

He made the pledge while meeting with youngsters at a picnic here on his election campaign tour of the Interior to build support for the August 27 vote.

Later, he promised a finance authority to enable municipalities to market bonds and called for a study of education in independent schools in B.C.

Today he was scheduled to stump in Kimberley, Fernie and Cranbrook.

Old Faithful Rise —With Difficulty

By JOHN DRISCOLL

KELOWNA—They rose to give him a standing ovation as he entered the Elks' Hall here, and for many it was a physical struggle to get up.

These were about 100 old friends gathered to give Premier Bennett his 10th nomination as a candidate in South Okanagan.

This was not a young crowd.

Many had been at the first nomination 28 years ago.

The candidate looked campaign-fit as he made his way to the platform. Giving no evidence that age has any justification as an election issue, he flashed the smile as brightly as ever, and on cue.

Handling a barrage of questions after the meeting and enjoying his own election answers, he appeared fresh and eager for battle.

Premier Bennett will be 69 on Sept. 6.

No matter who wins the election Aug. 27, Friday may have marked the beginning of the end of an era in British Columbia.

If a majority government is returned in August, Bennett could be 74 at the next election.

This could be his last campaign.

When asked last week if he had any thoughts about retiring, Bennett quickly replied "as long as God gives me the strength, I'll continue to serve the people of this province—it's my life."

Friday his speech betrayed

Bennett Promises Pension Increase

By Times Reporter

KELOWNA — Opposition election promises paled Friday before Premier Bennett's offerings for everyone in the province if Social Credit is returned to power Aug. 27.

"Dividends of progress" he called the vote-catching program, which he promised would be included in the next budget.

Before about 100 of his hometown supporters at his nomination meeting, Bennett's enticements for another term included:

- ● Grants to people who want to buy older houses.
- ● Increased old-age pensions.
- ● Increased social assistance allowances.
- ● Increased educational grants on all levels.
- ● Increased funds for health services and hospital construction.

"This will all be done without any increase in taxes," he said.

After the meeting Bennett refused to elaborate on how the new schemes would affect the 1970 budget.

"More will be said during the

50-Year Veteran Leaves City Hall

By SUSAN RILEY

James Marrs jabbed out his cigar and walked out of Victoria City Hall Thursday just as he has done every day for 50 years and five months.

But this time he wasn't coming back.

The all-time, longest, City Hall employee retired at 64, ending a career which took him through 13 administrations and several different bosses and co-workers.

"At one time I knew everyone here," said Marrs before he dashed off to a farewell ceremony Thursday.

"Now I don't know many of the office girls. They seem to come and go."

Marrs was Collector of Water Rates, the third the city has ever had. In some murky, unwritten legend Marrs' former boss is supposed to have held the job a long time.

But not as long as Marrs has.

When he started in 1919 at the age of 14 he wasn't a rookie kid, straight out of school. It was his third job. He started working when he was 12.

City Hall was different then. Quebec heaters were used to heat the building. Tax notices and water bills were written by hand, and there was no Centennial Square.

"I remember when they brought in the first cash register," said Marrs.

It was around 1921 or so. One old fellow said it was the beginning of the end and quit in protest.

Marrs, who lives at 723 Selkirk, isn't a person who discusses only the past and he isn't laying down the pencil and heading straight for the golf course either.

He is managing director of Holyrood House and will make that a full-time job now.

"Ah, I've travelled and lay around beaches many times in the past," he said. "I don't want to rest now—you become inactive."

"I have lots to do and now, I got some time to do it."

CIGAR IN HAND, James Marrs, all-time, longest City Hall employee leaves building for last time as retirement winds up 50-year job that began in 1919 and ran through 13 administrations.

with confidence of their ability to deal with China quickly; a swift strike, as was carried out in 1939 and 1945; a pre-emptive nuclear blow at the Chinese nuclear facilities; the seizure of Peking within 10 days or less; and the replacement of the "mad" Mao regime with one a genuine Communist, friendly to Moscow.

It is a tempting scenario for statesmen weary of polemics and worried about the population and growing nuclear swat of China, not to mention the unresolvable ideological struggle.

It is the kind of temptation that Japan's military men dangled before their government in the days before Japanese involvement in the Chinese morass.

No one knows for sure whether there are those in Moscow who recall the Japanese adventure—the brave Japanese hopes and the disaster that followed—or who realistically relate a Soviet blitzkrieg to China's population of 800 or 900 million; to the highly politicized Chinese masses; to the militarized leadership of the Mao regime; to the patriotic chauvinism that war with Russia would stimulate; to the existence of Chinese plans to fight a 100-year war, if necessary, against a nuclear power; to the ability of China to absorb and contain the elite Soviet missile and armored forces; to the potential that China possesses for nuclear retaliation.

And what about the ease with which a "short, swift war" on the Mongolian frontier might escalate to embrace all of Aisia and the world?

The Russian peoole, with their deep instincts and profound abhorrence for and fear of war, have shown that they do not trust the Kremlin's ability to abstain from military adventure.

When reports of the Ussuri fighting reached Moscow last spring, there was a brief but poignant panic. Ordinary Russians suddenly became possessed of the fear that war with China might be at hand.

Some rushed to the stores and bought canned goods and sausage — war has always mant a food shortage in Russia. Others rather pathetically sought out Americans and asked whether the United States would stand with Russia in the event of war with China.

It is a question that may demand an answer sooner than many Americans think.

SETTLE DIFFERENCES

Washington has explored the dilemma only in superficial terms, although Russian diplomats have, for at least three years, urged that the United States and Russia settle their differences so they can present a united front to the "China danger."

The United States occupies a key position in the Sino-Soviet conflict. Both Russia and China have indicated (the Russians bluntly, and the Chinese in very subtle fashion) that, if it comes to war, they would like the United States to be on their side — or at least neutral.

Continental war between Russia and China, employing nuclear weapons, would place North America in grave peril of fatal nuclear fallout. The U.S. would face direct involvement in the conflict if, as would seem likely, it spread to other Asian states, notably India, Pakistan and Japan.

An increasing number of Washington specialists have begun to urge that the United States employ its diplomatic and military weight, not to give favor either to Russia or China, but to try to avert the conflict and halt the prospect of a world catastrope.

To do so would require radical changes in U.S. policy vis-a-vis China. At present, the United States has virtually no contact with the Chinese Communists, and, if American influence is to be utilized effectively, it will have to be felt both in Moscow and Peking.

No one understimates the difficulties this presents. But the results could make the difference between continental Armageddon and global security.

Fish Strike Ordered

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's 4,000 salmon net fishermen have voted in favor of a strike Aug. 9, by a 70 per cent margin, the Fishermen's Union announced Friday.

The decision was the result of a coast-wide ballot which began July 23 among the fishermen, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Native Brotherhood of B.C.

The fishermen have turned down several offers for salmon prices made by the Fisherieries Association and said Friday all salmon net fishing will cease Aug. 9 if an agreement is not reached.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The southern regions were clear overnight while the rest of the province was generally cloudy, with a few showers persisting on the north coast. Cooler air associated with an upper level disturbance now over the north coast will move eastward into the central interior. This will keep cloud with showers and thunder showers into much of the interior today and again Sunday. Behind this system cloud now along the coast will clear giving sunny skies.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

All the proof my family and I will ever need about air pollution from autos we have obtained by the device of moving from one area to another within the city limits of our town. Our former house was once situated 100 feet from a hidden country road that became a roaring six-lane defence access highway. Over the 13 years we lived there, we were aware of the gradual increase of auto engine exhaust fumes, to say nothing of the traffic.

Then we built a house two miles closer to downtown, but two miles north of the way the population trend was moving. Our new place is an enclave of 16 blocks of 10 acres each, divided by dusty, unpaved streets for horse riding. There is, of course, little traffic from the outside.

Our weather, in spite of the dust, is better than the weather in the place from which we moved. We don't smell auto fumes. When we visit our old neighborhood our friends say they are so used to the smell of hydrocarbons they don't notice it any more, though they breathe it.

campaign. It will cost millions, but tonight I'm only painting the broad picture."

He explained the new homeowner grant was designed to assist the renter who can't afford a new home and wants to buy an older house.

"There will be an option between a cash grant and a second mortgage at less cost than the federal government's first mortgage rate."

The government now offers a $1,000 grant or a $5,000 second mortgage but this is restricted to people buying new homes. "That program has been a fantastic success," said Bennett.

Bennett described his announcements as "a peek into some of our policies for the 70s."

"We're in the financial shape to do it," he said.

He claimed B.C. is the only government in North America that doesn't owe money to banking institutions.

OWE MONEY

"Banking institutions owe money to you through us," he said.

He said the debt-free Socred government receives 8.22 per cent on short terms loans and this interest is being used to carry out programs.

During his 40-minute nomination speech, Bennett ridiculed criticism of his election call during the third year of a five year mandate.

"They call it a snap election. How can they call it a snap election if it comes regularly every three years?"

"The other parties later said to stop playing cat and mouse and call an election.

"They were bluffing when they asked for an election and they'll be bluffing election day too."

Bennett said the NDP policy of taking over the B.C. Telephone company indicated that leader Tom Berger is "either stupid or politically dishonest."

"Because it's a federal corporation he can't take it over, and if he does he couldn't finance it."

Berger would be unable to sell bonds anywhere, Bennett predicted. "I've occupied the pasture in that field."

Glancing at his watch Bennett said it was exactly the same time, 8:45 p.m., 17 years ago that he was gathering his group of "untried people" and hustling them up to government house to be sworn in as his cabinet.

"Looking back over 17 years not even the most ambitious Social Credit member would have believed we could accomplish so much."

Bennett recalled the days before Social Credit when the province had "wonderful pioneers, resources and location but no government leadership."

He then listed the achievements during Socred rule, winding up with the establishment of $130 million in trust funds during the last legislature.

"And after we had done all that we still had $50 million in cash."

WORKINNG MAN

Bennett issued the oft-repeated warning against socialism. "If you let those NDP people in, who are they going to hit first — the working man, and right in his pocket book."

He said the opposition has priased his government for past achievments but keeps insisting a new age has dawned.

"This is a new day, And that is why we have asked for a mandate for the great thrust into the decade of the 70s."

Bennett speaks again tonight in Vernon that rally to climax the Socred 17th anniversary celebration there. Sunday he flies to Quebec City and a three-day provincial premiers' conference.

Thursday he is back in Vancouver where he is expected to unveil plans for his campaign tour.

. . . OLD

no hint of retirement. But it was laced with reminiscences all the way back to 1941.

"Years ago I found it difficult to speak in public," said Bennett. "Years later I found it too easy.

"I still find it difficult to speak here in Kelowna. I'm not going to let go tonight or my emotions will get the best of me.

"I've been in public life since 1941 and you have continued to support me even though I've changed once or twice."

Grey heads nodded silently.

He recalled 1951:

"When I walked across the floor of the legislature I came home to Kelowna to report. We had to hold two meetings in the old Empress Theatre and both passed resolutions unanimously supporting my stand."

MORE NODS

They remembered with applause and more nods.

He recalled 1952 when he first ran as a Socred. "A friend told me that with four names on the ballot there's 'no room for you Cece'."

That was the year the Socreds made their stunning appearance on centre stage in the B.C. political theatre.

"We are the reform movement within the free enterprise system. That's why we've lasted so long," said Bennett.

Then he was off again, the dam builder, innovator, talking about bigger projects for the 1970s.

His nominator, Henry Mohr, a Summerland truck driver, was applauded several times as he talked of "the good job our premier has done all these years."

The grey heads leaned forward as Bennett's local campaign manager since 1948, Ted Dobb, warned them about apathy.

BIG INCREASE

"There has been a 45 per cent increase in the voters list in this riding since the 1966 election," he said.

But the people at the meeting were not worried abouth South Okanagan, where in 1966 Bennett polled four times the number of votes of his combined opponents.

When the Premier accepted the candidacy by acclamation, the people who had been with him through 10 nominations stood for another ovation, and most of them took some time to get to their feet.

and Romania's red, yellow and blue national flag fluttered.

Romanian authorities had prepared a friendly, but not over-enthusiastic welcome, apparently not wanting to irk Moscow more than necessary.

But workers were let off today three hours early to see Nixon. All hotel rooms in Bucharest were reported full, and the Nixon schedule appeared geared for maximum public exposure.

The Soviet Union has indirectly criticized Nixon's visit in its official newspapers. A Soviet naval detachment recently visited Cuba in what was generally regarded as the Kremlin's response to Nixon's "intrusion" into Eastern Europe.

Nixon will hold lengthy talks with Romania's Communist party chief, Nicolae Ceausescu, whom he last met on a 1967 visit to Bucharest as a private citizen. On that fact-finding tour Nixon was cold-shouldered in Moscow and was refused a visa to Poland.

Victoria Jaycees today named Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Green from Newark, N.J., tourists of the week.

Green, 25, is an aeronautical engineer.

He and his wife, also 25, will stay at the Red Lion Motor Inn, eat at the Victoria Room, the Oak Bay Marina and the Douglas Hotel and be escorted around the city by Miss Victoria, Laurie Paul and Jaycee President Stan Wallis and his wife.

Swimming Lessons Set

Lessons will be offered for children six years and over who want to learn to swim at the YW-YMCA.

The classes will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings or Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. Cost is $5 for six lessons.

TWICE AROUND NETS GOOD HAUL

MIAMI (AP) — "Hey buddy, we're back again," a gunman announced the second time he robbed bartender Ed Gardner Friday in two stickups netting about $13,000. Gardner, manager of the Harmony Lounge, said two men with pistols robbed his bar of $100 around 8:15 a.m. About 2 p.m., Gardner said he looked up and saw the same two men with guns. Gardner said he opened the safe and dumped some $13,000 in small bills into a cardboard box held by the robber.

TRAWLER MISSING AFTER EXPLOSION

ROEDBYHAVN, Denmark (Reuters) — The 14-ton Roedbyhavn trawler Tabor disappeared after hitting a mine five miles southwest of this southern Danish port today, police said.

Trawlers from the area put to sea in search for the crew of two reported missing.

The crew of another ship only 500 yards away said they heard a terrific explosion and saw a huge cloud of smoke billowing up from the sea. When the smoke disappeared there was no trace of the Tabor, they said.

The area is studded with mines and official warnings have been issued to shipping to enter it with caution.

U.S. Farm Pesticide Under Attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pesticide he said was first developed as a German nerve gas in the Second World War has crippled thousands of American farmers and migrant workers, the president of a research firm told the Senate on Friday.

Jerome B. Gordon, head of Delphie Systems and Research, testified before the Senate subcommittee on migratory labor about parathion and related pesticides.

More than 50,000,000 pounds of the pesticide are being spread unchecked on farms and gardens in the United States, Gordon said.

"The result is that uncounted thousands of the nation's migrant farm workers, farmers and suburban homeowners have been fatally overcome or seriously crippled," he said.

Charles C. Johnson, administrator of the consumer protection and environmental health service of the department of health, education and welfare, said studies indicate that in general workers using pesticides are exposed to relatively small fractions of what is considered toxic dosages.

He said that when use of pesticides result in residues on a crop, the department withholds registration until a safe tolerance has been established.

Dr. Samuel Simmons of the food and drug administration told the senators that 150 to 200 persons may be killed by pesticides each year and an estimated 100 times that number may be injured.

Gordon said that big users of what he described as the nerve gas sprays are commercial fruit-crop growers in California and cotton producers in Mississippi and Texas.

Gordon said the pesticides are called organic phosphors and appear under such trade names as parathion, methyl parathion, TEPP and—in less lethal doses—as malathion. He said they are first cousins, chemically, to the nerve agents GB and VX involved in the current chemical and biological warfare controversy.

Scholarships To Americans

TORONTO (CP) — American students received one of every 12 graduate fellowships granted last year by the Ontario government, a department of university affairs official said Friday.

The fellowships are for $1,500 each and about a quarter of those issued went to landed immigrants, said Lin Peebles, the department's director of information. He said about a third of the landed immigrants were Americans.

The government spent $4,511,000 last year on graduate and supplemental fellowships and $376,000 of the tatal was paid to Americans, Peebles said.

The figures were announced by the department after a report was released charging that several departments at the University of Waterloo have become too greatly Americanized.

Fast-Braking Policeman Thrown on Car

Gerald Cox, a Victoria motorcycle constable, was injured Friday evening when he skidded after braking sharply to avoid an abruptly-braking car.

He is "in "fairly good" condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital with a fractured right pelvis, two broken ribs, and back injuries.

He was pursuing a car driven north on Fernwood by Robert Caldwell, 2624 Fernwood, when Caldwell braked sharply for an amber light at the intersection of Gernwood and Bay.

When Cox hastily applied the brakes on his motorcycle, it went into a skid and he was thrown head-first on the trunk-lid of Caldwell's car.

The motorcycle itself did not come into contact with the car, police said.

Damage to the motorcycle was estimated at $150, and to the car, $50.

Two small girls are in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today as the result of an accident at Friday afternoon.

Wheat Price Guaranteed

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's answer to Prairie pressure for a better deal on wheat farming is a guaranteed floor price for domestic sales and a reduction in the minimum payment for all other sales.

Introducing a two-price system for Canadian wheat for the first time, a government announcement Friday night said sales of wheat for human use in Canada must adhere to a scale of prices based on a minimum $1.95½ a bushel for premium No. 1 Northern wheat in position for delivery from Fort William-Port Arthur.

The domestic guarantee, which compares with a current world price of about $1.88 a bushel for the premium grade, would apply to between 10 and 15 per cent of the total Canadian crop.

For the rest of the new crop, the minimum price guaranteed to farmers in the annually-established initial payment for crop deliveries is reduced to $1.50 a bushel from $1.70 for the premium grade in the face of depressed world prices.

AID STEPPED UP

In an announcement made jointly by Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin and Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, the government also decided to step up its allocation for food aid by $20,000,000 to $85,000,000 in the current financial year.

Almost all of the food purchased under the aid program is wheat and flour, the announcement said.

● The federal government also plans to provide full support to the Canadian Wheat Board for promoting sales, Mr. Pepin said.

Funds would be provided in addition to $6,000,000 already made available this year for reducing the interest rate on credit sales of wheat to developing countries. Mr. Pepin said he could not say how much more would be available for subsidizing credit sales.

The government's decision to authorize a floor price for most domestic sales other than for poultry and livestock feed means millers and other Canadian consumers would have to pay the minimum scale of prices agreed under the year-old International Grains Arrangement, although that scale has been undermined internationally by exporting countries under pressure of a world wheat glut.

NOT JUSTIFIED

Both Mr. Pepin and Mr. Olson emphasized, however, that the higher domestic prices would not justify an increase in the price of bread in Canada.

Mr. Olson said there has been no reduction in bread prices in the last 18 months, although prices of wheat in the same period have fallen from a high of $2.18 a bushel to a current $1.88 for No. 1 Northern wheat.

The reduced guaranteed for the bulk of the harvest in the crop year that began Friday results from establishment of a lower initial payment to farmers on delivery of grain to the wheat board.

In addition to the 20-cent drop in the initial payment for premium wheat, rates for standard grades of oats and barley also are reduced.

The initial payment for No. 2 Canadian Western Oats at the Lakehead goes down to 60 cents a bushel from 65 cents. No. 3 Canadian Western Six Row Barley at the Lakehead drops to 91 cents a bushel from $1.06.

SLIGHTER PROSPECTS

The reduced initial payments mean that the prospects of the federal government being obliged to cover deficits incurred by the wheat board are slighter.

The initial payment, an instalment to the farmer from the wheat board on grain delivered, amounts to a minimum price to the farmer.

If the average price obtained finally works out at more than the initial payment, the farmer receives additional money from the wheat board. If the average price is lower than the initial outlay, the federal government makes up the deficit to the wheat board.

The 20-cent drop in the guiding initial payment for wheat restores a rate that prevailed for five years from the 1962-63 crop year until 1967-68, when the $1.70 rate was introduced.

Final average rate for wheat in the crop year that ended Thursday will not be determined for some time. Expectations are that the farmer will get little, if anything, additional because world prices have fallen.

The government statement said the initial-payment rate had to be reduced because world prices have fallen.

Mr. Pepin said Canadian officials have been working "almost frantically" at talks in London to get agreement among exporting countries on price rates to stabilize world wheat markets.

Warning that a continuing price war could further reduce prices, Mr. Pepin said "we are involved in a dangerous situation."

BERLIN (Reuters) — West Berlin authorities said 96 policemen were injured early today when 1,000 police battled left-wing student demonstrators in the city's worst outbreak of violence this year.

The students said at least 25 demonstrators were injured. Three were critically hurt, including a 22-year-old student whose jugular vein was cut when he went through a car showroom window and a 17-year-old girl with a fractured skull.

Police made more than 70 arrests.

Scene of the fighting, the fashionable Kurfuerstendamm Avenue, looked like a battlefield.

Demonstrators smashed the windows of two nearby police stations, damaged 31 police cars and trucks, injured several police horses, built barricades across the avenue and set fire to construction vehicles, police said.

Leftist student organizations charged police with using "Fascist methods" against the demonstration, provoking the students to resist.

The demonstrators were protesting the extradition Sunday of several federal armed forces deserters from West Berlin to West Germany.

Lunar Lab Chief Quits In NASA Policy Clash

By VICTOR COHN

HOUSTON (WP) — Dr. Wilmot N. Hess, science chief at the Manned Spacecraft Centre, abruptly announced his resignation Friday at the height of one of science's great adventures — examining rocks from the moon.

The lunar Receiving Laboratory where the rocks are now being studied and their future distribution to scientists are both under his direction.

Hess is the second scientist in two days to announce leaving the lunar lab. Thursday, Dr. Elbert King, curator of the lunar lab protested a plan to give samples of moon dust to foreign heads of state because it was "very precious" for science. King is leaving in September to head the University of Houston's geology department.

Hess will become director of the research laboratories of the U.S. Environmental Sciences Service Administration at Boulder, Colo., next month. "This has been in the works for a while, the timing is a coincidence," an official here said.

But it is no secret among scientists and associates that he has been at odds with other manned space officials.

Among the issues, other scientists say, have been:

The "weak voice" scientists, as opposed to engineers, have had in planning space flights. Scientists would like to see far more "real science"—experiments to learn about space and the universe—done on space missions. For example, they want to see studies of the moon done from the command ships during future Apollo flights, while the command vehicle is orbiting the moon, waiting for moonwalkers to return.

● The difficulties Hess and associates have had in getting this centre and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to plan future lunar expeditions from a standpoint of learning the most about the moon, "rather than just flying there."

● Promises, not kept, of more personnel in his division, this space center's Science and Applications Directorate.

Hess was not available for comment. In a formal statement, he said: "We have put the lunar receiving laboratory into operation and it is performing its mission well. We have placed instruments on the moon successfully and have the scientific programs for the next several lunar missions well organized."

The lunar lab has been having some problems and its rock-handling has been delayed at least three times for some hours. A colleague said: "these things are by no means unexpected in this new kind of operation and have nothing to do with his resignation."

Committee Checks For Wheat Exporters

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Major wheat-exporting countries, including Canada, agreed today to set up a watchdog committee to find ways to avoid a further price clash and reduce market raiding in disposal of huge surpluses.

Senior officials, completing two days of private talks, said the technicians who will be involved in the watchdog group will meet here Aug. 11 to work under joint instructions provided by the conference delegates.

These senior authorities included representatives of the United States, Australia, Argentina, the European Common Market as well as Canada. Canadian authorities played a leading role in bringing the conference to a successful conclusion.

An American official said, however, that while the technical body, through appraisal of daily exports and the conditions of trade, will help stabilize the world wheat market, it will not be able to eliminate all the current difficulties.

However, he observed that this will be the first time in many years that the major exporters have been able to agree to make a full disclosure of their shipments in attempts to share the world market more equitably.

WILL WATCH SALES

The technical body would scrutinize daily sales by each of the major exporting countries, including prices paid, concessions granted and other charges involved, to decide whether the competing exporters were abiding by fair tactics in disposal of a huge international surplus.

What penalties might be involved if any exporting country broke its marketing pledge was still a matter of conjecture.

The U.S. and Canada already have lowered prices breaching the floor of the International Grains Arrangement, and the European Common Market has countered by increasing export subsidies to match the North American prices—but only in world markets in which the Common Market has special interests.

The restraint shown by the Common Market in narrowing concessions to a restricted sales area was viewed with satisfaction by the other major exporters. It helped remove tensions which were apparent at the opening of the two-day conference Friday when Dr. Louis Rabot, chief Common Market delegate, told reporters he could not see what the meeting would accomplish.

Don't Lose the Anchor

EVEN SOCIAL CREDIT SUPporters admit that the Social Credit government is not likely to outlast its leader very long. Both outside forces and internal stresses would see to that, for the Bennett regime has been predominantly a one-man exercise — take away the kingpin and its viability must be fatally reduced. The fallacy of Mr. Bennett's present attempt to polarize British Columbia into right and left political factions immediately becomes evident. For the inevitable decay of the government when the premier relinquishes active political life through age or choice—or perhaps even before that — would in that case leave only the NDP to carry on.

The clear fact is that the provincial political scene must have an acceptable middle group if a balance is to be preserved. The provincial Conservative Party has been obliterated. If now, due to the efforts of Mr. Bennett and the NDP, the Liberals were to be destroyed at the polls, the future fate of the province would be obvious.

Mr. Bennett needs to lose only four seats in this month's election to become a minority government—or, if no Liberals were returned, to lose the election to the NDP. His present tactic to try to eliminate the Liberal nucleus from the Legislature is therefore a strangely short-sighted one for so astute a political thinker as Mr. Bennett. It carries an implication of panic—augmented by the NDP success in Manitoba—and it certainly does not look beyond the August 27 election date. Mr. Bennett's present course, in fact, is a highly dangerous one both for his party and for British Columbia.

The province should elect a middle-of-the-road Liberal contingent to the House which will provide a very necessary alternative to the extremes which Mr. Bennett seeks to create, which will maintain a balance in the event that a minority government is elected, and which will constitute a progressive, moderate element which eventually can succeed to the government. Mr. Bennett's present campaign policy could put an NDP government into office two elections from now. Is that really what the people of British Columbia want?

'Cultural Genocide'

THE GROWING CONCERN that Canadian universities are becoming Americanized by the infusion of United States teachers and department heads finds its most recent expression in the criticism of a group of academics centred in Ontario. Their spokesman sees "the blueprint for cultural genocide" in the influence the American professors exert on undergraduates in Canada and says that Americans at Waterloo are receiving a major share of the Ontario graduate fellowships intended for Canadian students who will teach in Canadian universities.

Why is this Americanization taking place? Why did a member of parliament tell the Commons a few weeks ago that only 16 per cent of the posts filled by Canadian universities last year went to Canadians?

The conventional answer is that Canada is not producing sufficient university graduates to staff Canadian universities and that higher education is international. That case is supported by a familiar question: Should Canadian universities engage a Canadian of less merit than an outsider just because the former is a Canadian? Of course they shouldn't. But that answer is incomplete. While Canadian universities are placing a minority of their own people in posts, an unspecified number of qualified Canadians are going elsewhere for jobs.

They are leaving the country to take positions in American and other universities for a variety of reasons, and as they leave, outsiders, predominantly Americans, come in to fill the vacancies which they could have filled.

The problem, of course, cannot be argued on generalities. It may not matter where a mathematics or chemistry teacher comes from, for instance, provided he is competent in his field. Other elements enter the picture, however, when we consider Canadian history, literature, sociology or other subjects in which a knowledge of the Canadian background is essential. In such cases Canadian experience, methods, culture and environment are essential parts of the study.

It would be tragic if this country were to get a reputation for chauvinism in higher education. That would be another form of "cultural genocide." Nothing could be more stultifying intellectually, scholastically or spiritually in this era of broader understanding and expanding mental horizons. But as Canadians we must recognize that our Canadianism, whatever it may be, is threatened by our proximity to our giant neighbor. We should get the best we can from that relationship—and there is much of benefit to be derived—but we should not invite total immersion.

The best answer in the university field is not to set arbitrary nationalistic restrictions on candidates for teaching posts, but to determine, and then supply, the element which is apparently missing from such positions and causing Canadian graduates to seek professional careers abroad.

Not Just Boring Blacktop

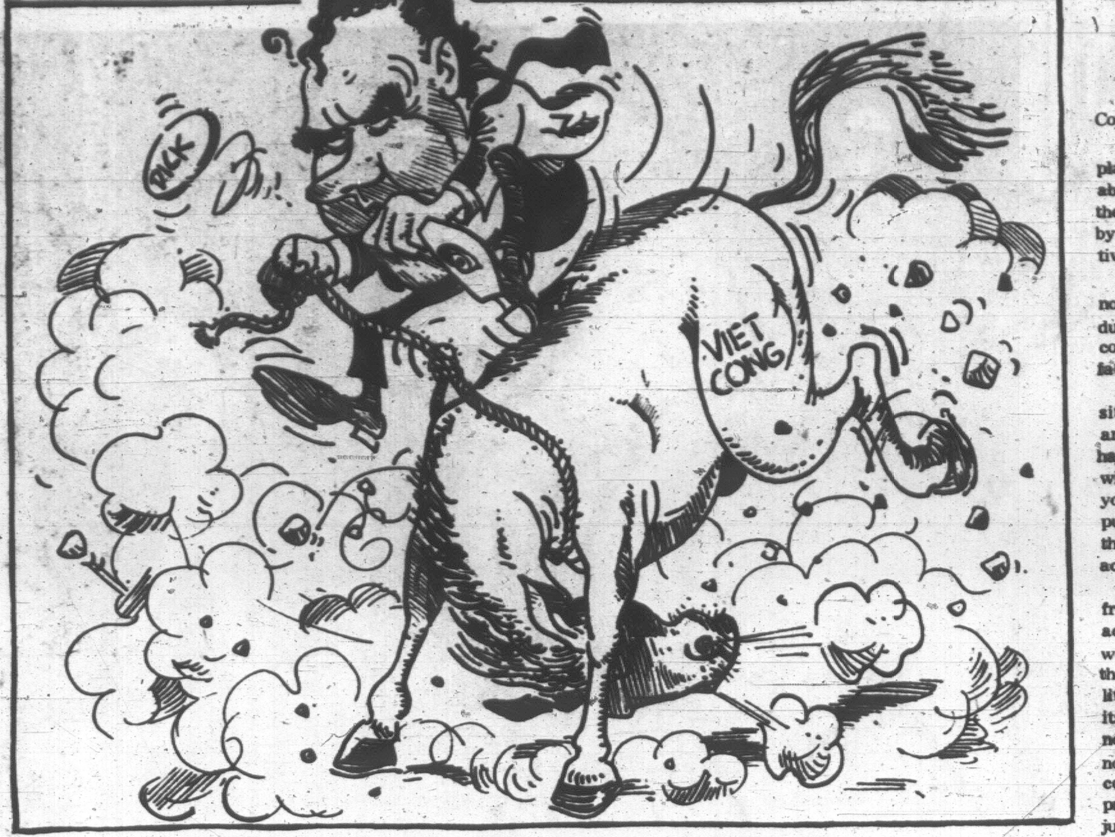
THERE IS MORE TO DESIGNing a modern highway than merely getting in an efficient way from Point A to Point B. Thoroughfares of today, in places where people take an interest in their environment, must also conform to some standard of attractiveness and visual comfort. Divided highways, landscaping and preservation of existing green belts have done much in progressive communities to make more bearable the necessary blight of blacktop.

The Pat Bay Highway — which Mr. Gaglardi once threatened to decorate solely with a white-painted line — is coming under increasing criticism. It is still not too late to make this busy road a pleasant means of travel rather than a channelled rat-race, but the application of imagination and good taste cannot be postponed forever.

In Britain, despite mounting traffic volume and population density, and the need to move large numbers of vehicles rapidly, it has still been possible to retain some beauty along the roadways.

Much of this attractiveness is attributed to the men who form an advisory committee to the British minister of transport on landscaping treatment of trunk roads. Retiring from the chairmanship of that committee is Sir Eric Savill, director of the Gardens, Windsor Great Park. But the loss of so admirably suited a chairman is eased by the fact that he will be replaced by Sir George Taylor, director of the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew.

In Britain it has been proved that highway design does not have to depend solely on the dictates of geometry. Artistic treatment can also be included. It is time we took note of the lesson the British highway authorities have provided.



"... for the last time ... you behave or I'm getting off ..."

Hypocrisy?

What superb hypocrisy Victoria City Council exhibits!

Over the years, hundreds of complaints from justifiably angry citizens, about the serious smoke pollution over the whole of our city are timidly evaded by our aldermen, supposedly representatives of the people.

Yet, a single complaint about alleged noise nuisance in Royal Athletic Park, during that Friday evening's youth concert brings forth the wrath of city fathers in all their self righteous fury!

In the earlier mentioned pollution situation, because big business profits are involved, we see this "hot potato" handled with the proverbial "kid gloves", while the very rare opportunity for our youth to enjoy their own music in a public park brings immediate and dire threats of refusals for any such similar activities in the future.

To be sure, the resounding echoes from 'rock' music are not always acceptable to the adult ear; but surely we can bear with it now and then for the sake of youthful energy. Victoria has little to complain about the majority of its young people's behaviour — up to now — serious individual problems, notwithstanding. It is to be hoped all on council will make renewed efforts to prevent further unfair miscarriages of judgment as we have witnessed here. — "Parents of Three 'Teens."

Ontario Moves to Streamline House Procedure

Greer

IN its deliberations thus far, the Ontario Legislature's Select Committee on Procedure, which was set up in June after a session in which the parliamentary system seemed to be falling apart, appears to be following the conventional wisdom that the way to reform parliament is to set time limits on its debates and proceedings.

Thus far, the eight Conservative, three Liberals and two New Democrats on the committee have agreed the daily question period should be limited to one hour with half an hour on Fridays; that the division bells on votes should be rung for only so long; that clause by clause amendments on legislation should be block voted rather than voted on separately; that the number of private members' hours be reduced; that a standing committee on supply be set up to remove detailed consideration of the government's spending estimates from the floor of the House and that a time limit for debating estimates be established by means of a formula which, fully exercised, could reduce the current consumption of time by 75 per cent.

They are also working toward and will probably achieve agreement whereby all legislation will be referred to the legislature's committees, as is done now in Ottawa, with much saving of the legislature's time — or so it is assumed — as a consequence.

Thus, as Osie Villeneuve (PC, Glengarry), a committee member and one of the hoarier Tories in the House declared, the legislature will become more efficient and "business-like," and maybe even the golden days when a session started in late January and ended before Good Friday can return.

Mr. Villeneuve is wrong about that, of course; the days of the short legislative sessions are gone forever. But the trappings of parliament are so time-consuming, and many of its processes so irrelevant, that he undoubtedly expresses a widespread popular sentiment in suggesting that reform can be found in cutting down on the amount of talk and "streamlining" the whole system.

Talkathons

As the recent filibuster over closure in Ottawa demonstrated this is a fallacy because it does not get to the heart of the problem. Parliaments are talkathons because the right to talk is the only meaningful power (apart from the right to be there) that the individual member of parliament has. If this is objected to, and if it is accepted that parliament should be something more than a mere rubber stamp for government policy, then reform can only lie in finding some substitute or supplement to the right to talk as the individual member's basis of power.

This arises because legislation can only become law when enacted by parliament, and it is only by delaying, or threatening to delay, passage by talking that the private member, or the opposition collectively, can hope to have any influence on its content or outcome. Meritorious arguments, appeals to reason, superior proposals rarely if ever prevail; but every session of parliament abounds with examples of the government's giving in, or changing its mind, because the opposition has dug in its heels and decided to obstruct passage by talking as much as the rules will allow.

There is nothing new about this, of course; it has been the modus vivendi of the parliamentary system ever since the development of political parties. It has become a modern problem of critical proportions merely because government has become so big, and each legislative session's agenda so heavy, that obstruction can no longer be tolerated, which in effect means — barring reform in the system — parliament is reduced to a ritualistic nullity.

Reform obviously lies not in negatively reducing the right to talk by time limits on debates and so on, but in creating opportunies for parliamentarians to make positive contributions, to be agents rather than reagents in the legislative process. Practically speaking, this means enhancing the independence of the government back-bencher and freeing him from the stern hand of the party whip.

The Conservative members of the Select Committee are so anxious to do this that they are even flirting with congressionalism. They are to hear an expert on how the congressional system works in Washington; they have agreed that the office, transportation and research facilities for private members must be vastly improved; they are thinking of recommending a permanent Speaker who will be free of government domination and they are even toying with a "state of the union" address by the premier to replace the Throne Speech at the opening of each legislative session.

Too Far

From the government's point of view, they have probably already gone too far. In order to get agreement on a committee of supply to consider the estimates, for example, they have agreed that the opposition parties may decide when the committee's reports to the house shall be debated and that such occasions may be used to raise any issue the opposition wishes to raise.

On the question of referring all legislation to committees, Eric Winkler (PC, Grey South) was so enthusiastic that he scared the Liberals into reservations. "If we want a congressional type of discussion, where members can speak freely, this is the closest we can come to it," Mr. Winkler declared. It was, perhaps, not the best chosen phrase.

Yet the enthusiasm of the Tory backbenchers is understandable. They are fed up and bored stiff listening to opposition members all the time; by enhancing the committee system, they can ask questions, develop points of view and in effect get in on the action. Premier Robarts may not like it but he is going to be hard put to say no to it.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

New Circumstances for Red China's Containment

AN historic effort to contain Red China, which began in the Acheson era nearly 20 years ago, is undergoing profound change. And the prospects for Asia may never again be the same.

Within the past year:

Frye

- The United States has set out to disengage from Vietnam, and has insisted that other Asian countries now dependent on America assume a much larger share of the responsibility for their future defence against China.
- Britain has announced that she is withdrawing from east of Suez, and hence from her role in the containment process.
- The Soviet Union has become deeply and violently involved in the containment of China along their joint frontier, and has called on Asian countries to band together for "collective security" against the common enemy.

What this means is that the United States and Britain are laying down much of the burden of containing Peking, and shifting it, or attempting to shift it, to the Soviet Union and free Asia.

Thus stated, the process may seem healthy and constructive to many Americans. It may, in fact, be healthy and constructive. But it is open to at least two serious questions.

A logical end result would be a military alliance of the Soviet Union with free Asia, and hence a major increase in Soviet political influence in the area. Moscow is already moving in that direction, and so are some Asians.

Is this really what the United States wishes to see happen?

And the new Nixon Doctrine of Asian self-help, while admirable in theory, may not work. The Asians may not be able to defend themselves against Chinese-sponsored "wars of national liberation" with nothing more from outside than American weapons, materiel and advice. South Vietnam could not have done so.

In this event, will Washington really be prepared to see them go down the drain?

In a word, are Americans ready for the full implications of a disengagement from Asia, if what it means is the delivery of that part of the world to Soviet or Chinese domination?

This may be an overly pessimistic appraisal of the prospects. American disengagement from Asia is not to be total or precipitate. There are qualifications in the fine print of the Nixon Doctrine which enable the United States to be flexible in the amount and nature of its assistance to an imperilled country.

There will, in any event, be a transitional period during which the Asian fledglings, so long fed by the American eagle, can learn to fly before President Nixon kicks them out of the nest.

It could take the United States five years to disengage from Vietnam in satisfactory circumstances, given the present pace of the peace negotiations and of American troop withdrawals. There will be that much time for gathering strength.

Moreover, Russia — without intending to be helpful — will in fact be contributing to Asian security during the transition period by diverting Chinese energies from South and Southeast Asia to the Sino-Soviet frontier.

Nixon's gamble, in short, could work. It could also have at least three potentially beneficial side effects:

1. It could relieve China of the fear of a "second front" against the United States in the event of a Chinese-Russian war, and thus embolden Peking — increasing, in the process, the likelihood of serious Sino-Soviet clashes.

American overtures to China in the area of trade and travel have the same effect.

2. It could, conversely, require the Soviet Union to make a larger contribution to an East-West detente if it wanted a display of solidarity with the United States for the purpose of helping inhibit Chinese "adventurism."

3. North Vietnam, which has never seemed persuaded that the United States genuinely intends to disengage from South Vietnam after having invested so much blood and treasure there, might at last be convinced Nixon was serious in his Paris peace proposals.

This is a big stake, worth a considerable game. Nixon and his highly regarded foreign-policy aide, Henry Kissinger, unquestionably know well what they are doing.

But there would be a better chance of the gamble coming off if American military disengagement from Asia could assuredly be accompanied by greater American economic engagement there — if nothing else, to help replace the funds which Nixon is insisting the Asians divert from their life-or-death battle against poverty to the potential battle against guerrilla insurgency.

Without extensive American economic help, free Asia may fall between two stools, losing the American props on which it has so long relied for its defence and building no satisfactory substitutes of its own.

In that event, the only real question would be whether Russia or China would be quicker to pick up the pieces.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

The hot days of summer make many changes in the color of the foliage and as you drive along familiar roads you notice many striking contrasts.

The Indian plums, with their long tapering leaves, are showing several different colors, ranging from a light green to a bright yellow. This plant is one of our earliest to show leaf and flower and now it is heralding the fall change.

It was but a short time ago that the roses were in full bloom. Then the leaves commenced to fade to a rusty brown. Now they are showing some new leaf shoots at the tips and the old leaves are becoming a dark brown.

It seems but yesterday that the ocean spray's creamy clusters brightened our hedgerows. They have changed to a light brown and as the leaves fall away the flower clusters will hang on most of the winter.

Its close relation, the hardack, still shows its purple flowers. It too will turn a dusky brown.

Take notice of the thistles. See how the Canada thistle is a mass of white fluffy seeds that will scatter on the wind, while the bullthistle is now putting forth its dark purple "shaving-brush" flower heads.

There are places where you can see some of the maples that have turned a pale yellow. Some of the leaves have already fallen and are a delicate brown with tinges of red in them. Even the old trees are showing signs on their leaves. Look closely and you will see dusky spots.

Some of the cottonwoods are changing their color. The leaves are a lot paler and at the tips of branches next year's leaf buds have formed, sticky to the touch.

Even the arbutus shows a change. During the winter most of the leaves were burned by the frost, then the spring rains freshened them. Now they have put on a leaf growth and the old leaves have fallen. Their glossy surface is quite a contrast to the other green foliage.

In places you can see the bracken turned brown. Close to it will be other growth that is still bright and green. This is possibly because of two different root stocks.

If you can spot a clump of bitter cherries you will see how the top leaves are turning a pale yellow. On some of the flowering dogwood the lower leaves are now a mixture of pink and gold, with the faint outline of the leaf veins still green. They are very dainty and beautiful.

Even the Douglas firs are changing color, though it is perhaps a little hard to see. On the ground you will find many of the old needles, replaced by new growth on the tree.

Look at the markings of the Garry oak leaves. See the dark brown tinge that is forming.

Yet in the low places where it is damp like the margins of a marsh you will fine the Douglas aster with its purplish flower in full color.

Riot-Proof University For Upper Middle Class

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. — In the mountainous hills above this seaside resort town the first attempt is being made to build a riot-proof university campus. The official printed statements don't advertise the University of California at Santa Cruz as a social bomb shelter, but that's one of the main objectives the people who put it together had in mind.

"We hope this is riot proof in the sense of students knowing other students and their teachers well enough so they can talk things out and not use other means," says Dean McHenry, Santa Cruz' chancellor (president) and educational architect.

"I don't know what these agitators could do here. We had an awful scare last October when the governor and the board of regents were here. Had we called in the police it might have gotten out of hand. It was very close."

The agitators recognize Santa Cruz as a challenge to their skill. Tom Hayden, the radical leader, has accepted several invitations to speak here this year and is reported to have said that a rebellion on this campus is important to show that not even in this academic Garden of Allah can there be tranquillity.

The Campus Is Beautiful

The campus is beautiful like few places you've ever seen. From its mountainside it looks down on the Bay of Monterey and the ocean beyond. Much of the campus itself is covered by virgin, redwood forest, and for once the engineers lost so the trees have been preserved. They're so compelling they could save bad architecture, but the design of the buildings here is better than average.

The campus is an immense 2,000 acres where you can wander in quiet privacy sucking up air so pure you get stoned just breathing it. Every indication is that the 2,600 students do love the place and appreciate it. Many of them enjoy getting high and taking slow, grooving walks through the forests and fields where they may come across marijuana patches put into cultivation by their fellow students.

The counter-revolutionary plan at Santa Cruz relies on more than beauty, however. Instead of the conventional organization of under-graduate studies, this campus is a honeycomb of small colleges (approximately 700 students in each) where people eat, live and study in small, nearly self-contained academic villages.

Personal Contact, Social Control

Four of these little colleges are open now. Another will be open in the fall in a progression that may finally see 20 of these homey, pedagogical enclaves. The purpose of this arrangement is intimacy, personal contact, closer student-teacher relationships, and the social control they provide.

The plan is meant to answer the attacks against enormously large state universities for being humanly indifferent personnel factories. It was the picture of the student as the IBM machine's victim that gave the great Berkeley uprising of 1964-65 much of its force and which influenced some of the planning that has gone into Santa Cruz, a campus where no student has valid reason for complaining he's treated like a punchcard. Such issues, however, aren't the ones detonating this year's upheavals. Santa Cruz has built its defences for the wrong revolution — they're not attacking from this direction in 1969.

This package has cost the university about 20 per cent more per student than the traditionally organized campus. The difference in cost has been made up by gifts from such outfits as the Crown Zellerbach and the Carnegie corporations. The result is a great bargain for upper middle class families who're getting colleges in every way comparable to the best New England liberal arts schools at low, tax subsidized prices.

Santa Cruz is socially exclusive, probably much more than most of the fancy New England schools which try and succeed at diversifying their student bodies.

Santa Cruz achieves the opposite, first, by the simple device of price. It costs at least $2,100 a year, cheap compared to Princeton but too expensive for kids from the ghetto.

The second device for screening out the lower classes is demanding super academic proficiency to get in. Fifty-six per cent of this year's entering freshmen were "A" or "A plus" high school students as compared to the national average of 20 per cent for freshmen entering elsewhere.

Tiny Percentage Of Black Students

Half Santa Cruz' student body comes from families making more than $15,000 a year.

As you'd expect from the above, the percentage of black entering freshmen is a whopping 1.3 per cent.

"We're going out to bring in black students, but the Ivy League skims off the cream of minority kids and we can't get them," says Chancellor McHenry in a lame rebuttal that tells much about how the school interprets the state university's educational mission.

Officials of the State University of New York at Stony Brook, another upper middle class public school, offer exactly the same excuse for their equally poor record in getting minority group kids.

Against this background it's possible to see why some black students have felt justified in resorting to desperate measures.

Something Is Missing

Not that the Anglo-Saxon consistency of the student body pleases many of the students. "Up here on the hill we all have the same backgrounds. We meet ourselves coming and going on the paths. We know something's missing but we don't know what because we don't have different enough experiences to give us a framework for judgment," is how perspicacious Claudia, a 19-year-old freshman from Glendale, put it.

Santa Cruz' restrictive recruiting policies will probably be the cause of the rebellion the campus was designed never to have. An easy-going upper class treatment of sex and pot isn't going to be enough to keep the peace, because the kids who've been given preferential admissions treatment are the well-to-do sorts who've been most prone to precipitate something.

A quarter of this year's freshman class answered a questionnaire saying they'd already joined in protests against the war when they were in high school.

There's trouble in the Garden of Allah already. The kids have a movement going to name one of the new colleges after Malcolm X and make it into a black studies center. The chancellor is resisting, but several weeks ago the police kiosk at the campus' main entrance was fire-bombed and destroyed.

Raw Material Shortage Threat to Prosperity

By WALTER SULLIVAN

Those who wish to dramatize the population explosion point out that, if present growth rates continue, the mass of humanity in a few centuries will exceed the entire mass of the earth. What that shows, of course, is that there is a limit to the population that this planet can support. But what is that limit?

At a recent committee meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science a leading government scientist pointed out that there has never been a broad scientific study of this essential problem in all of its ramifications.

The psychic effects of crowding are often mentioned. It is known that some mammals under crowded conditions undergo hormonal changes that cut their birth rate. But if we can make the deserts bloom and thin out our more congested cities, we can greatly increase world population without this becoming a limiting factor.

Perhaps our political institutions are incapable of bringing about such a revolutionary redistribution of the population. This is uncertain, but what is definitely known is that the raw materials needed to support modern civilization are limited.

If we are to rebuild our economy, irrigate the deserts, industrialize the underdeveloped nations, vast amounts of energy will be required and, unless we can harness the power of the hydrogen atom, that energy depends on limited supplies of fuel.

To what extent, then, is world population limited by our finite reserves of fuel, metallic ore and other raw materials? A book recently published by Dr. Charles F. Park Jr., professor of geology and of mineral engineering at Stanford University, indicates that the world population may already be far beyond the level that, in the future, could be supported by this planet's resources.

False Comfort

Dr. Park's analysis is featured in the current issue of "Focus," a publication of the American Geographical Society. It is entitled: "Affluence in Jeopardy."

He says that we have taken false comfort in the argument that ample mineral resources lie under the sea or deeper in the ground. The world is already beginning to run short of some materials of great importance to a technological society, such as mercury, tin, silver and cobalt. The big drain, however, will come if and when the world population reaches its projected level for the year 2000 (roughly double that of today) and the nations of Asia, Africa and South America become fully industrialized.

In 1967 the United States had a per capita consumption of about one ton of iron. If global consumption reaches that level by the year 2000 and the population has doubled, the world's annual demand for iron will be 12 times what it is today.

In 1967 the American per capita use of copper was 18 pounds. If, by the year 2000, world requirements reach this level, the global demand will be 11 times what it is today, which Dr. Park, as an ore specialist, calls "staggering."

If the same formula is applied to lead, the needs will rise 16-fold. As it is, readily accessible lead ore in this country has fallen to such a level that most lead for American industry has to be imported. Bu the year 2000, according to Dr. Park, it "would be a difficult and probably an impossible task to obtain the indicated amounts of copper and lead."

Furthermore, he points out, these projections do not allow for any increase in per capita consumption by highly technological societies, such as that in the United States. Such stagnation is highly unlikely.

Those who believe atomic energy will prevent disastrous poverty, starvation and civil unrest during the coming century note that cheap electric power could be used to desalt seawater, irrigate the deserts and extract minerals from our waste materials. Our daily refuse would be sent to special plants for sorting by electric and other means, instead of being buried, burned or dumped at sea.

Mercury Problem

Dr. Park concedes that iron could be salvaged in this way, but he despairs of recovering such critical substances as silver and mercury. Some 31 per cent of American silver consumption (46.5 million ounces) goes into photographic film. The second most important industrial use is in electrical and electronic equipment (24 per cent). Other uses include silverware and jewelry (17 per cent), brazing alloys and solder (12 per cent) and batteries (7 per cent).

Mercury is used in temperature and pressure recording devices. Such substances, Dr. Park argues, are irretrievably lost in the vast amounts of daily refuse. "One cannot conceive of the reclamation of mercury from broken thermometers."

He also is pessimistic about the role of substitutes for scarce substances. Mercury is unique in being the only metal that is liquid at room temperature. It is possible, however, that photosensitive plastics may some day replace the silver nitrate used on film. Aluminum, which is comparatively plentiful, can replace many uses of copper. There are substitutes for some uses of cobalt, but only cobalt is suited to the making of permanent magnets.

Disaster Path

Thus Dr. Park argues that the popular concept of a constantly expanding economy and an upgrading of other nations to our living standards is a sure path to disaster, unless radical check in population can be achieved. Ocean resources and deep-lying deposits can be exploited but only at high cost, not only in dollars, but in energy, and our fuels are limited.

He scoffs at the export of people to other planets as impractical. Some believe mineral resources on the moon can be brought to earth, but this will depend on whether the moon has undergone the internal heating and differentiation that, on earth, has extracted from the primordial mixture of materials the veins of pure ore found on earth.

Energy Need

His argument also leads one to conclude that the long-term destiny of mankind depends, not only on halting the growth of population, but learning how to extract energy from the fusion of hydrogen isotopes. This fusion releases the unruly power of the hydrogen bomb.

Those in this country and abroad seeking to harness the fusion reaction are optimistic, but the solution to this problem is not in sight. Success would provide ample energy for the remaining lifetime of the earth and should enable man, under wise leadership and assuming some method of population control, to work out ways to live in equilibrium with his environment and its resources.

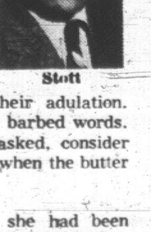
Scorpions in a Bottle— Is This the Way It Is?

By ART STOTT



Stott

The adage has it that two scorpions corked in a bottle will fight until they destroy each other. I've never seen two scorpions corked in a bottle, but the allusion provides a descriptive phrase to cover the meeting of a best-selling woman novelist and an acidulous critic on a popular television program this week.

The best-seller woman novelist had been given the conventional flattering introduction by the M.C. Two book reviewers, who played along with her, had added their adulation. Then came the critic with the barbed words. Did the woman novelist, he asked, consider her work art or trash? That's when the butter hit the fan.

The woman novelist said she had been tipped off that the critic would try to put her down. Her response was not a judicious assessment of her work in relation to the critic's question. It was the typical reaction of someone whose writing has been attacked. She adopted the tactic based on the belief that offence is the best defence. From that point on she poured scorn on the critic, scarcely allowing him an opportunity to respond. The attack was personal, denigrating his qualifications and capabilities, making fun of his name, which she pretended to forget and then mispronounced, oiling her vituperation with unconvincing praise of his personal appearances and showering his attempted rebuttal with a torrent of words. He shouted back and descended to vulgarity.

The mud flew thick and fast. The participants needed no help from one another to persuade me that neither was the type I'd want to go fishing with.

My impression was that if any constructive purpose had been served by the exchanges, it lay in an exposure of some trends of our times. If a person makes bags full of money by appealing to certain entertainment appetites of the day, what does it matter if the performance has or has not artistic merit? What greater artistic merit is there than making money? On the other hand, it disclosed a danger to those who seek to "put down" other people with calculated cruelty. They can have their own teeth kicked in if the person they try to put down is schooled in the verbal equivalent of a Pier Six brawl technique. This was no graceful exhibition of arts and letters.

Yet it may be the way it is in the society we have created. When parliamentary debate can degenerate into a snarling dog fight, when a child shows the lack of parental training by throwing rotten wheat into the face of the prime minister, and the prime minister reportedly replies by telling the kid with anatomical precision, where he should be kicked, we've certainly moved away from Chesterfieldian manners and an appreciation for consideration between human beings.

Civilization has taken on a new meaning for us. Courtesy and recognition of human dignity seem to have become those handicaps which explain why nice guys don't win. The meek shall inherit the earth, of course, but perhaps only when everyone else has discarded it.

Maybe the current mores differ only slightly from what went before. Simulated consideration for others and lip service to human dignity have often fashioned a pretty hypocritical cloak. Still, straight rudeness and the practice of "putting down" people seem to have become more acceptable than they used to be. You wonder if this is because more people are honest today or if, in times of changing values, virtues are being thrown out merely for the sake of change, whether it be for better or for worse.

You watch the popular comedians on TV and you can't help being struck by the trend among so many night club entertainers to be smart at the expense of somebody else. Sure there's room for barbs, for satire, for cynical humor. But isn't there any other kind? Aren't you getting a little tired of the performers whose stock in trade and sole merchandise is the lampoon of wives?

For my fellow pollyannas, there's a consoling thought. Human tastes and behavior seem to operate on the pendulum principle. When they swing too far one way, there's always a swing back. Or, put it another way, when you hit bottom, there's no way to go but up. That's an encouraging concept—until you think how insufferable the other extreme may be.

Education

but not in British Columbia Our children are grounded by a short-sighted education policy that inhibits the use of new methods, new equipment, new approaches to the learning process . . . while society as a whole is experiencing sweeping changes, our teachers and pupils are tied to the old ways by a Finance Formula that provides very little for research and experimentation. Do the schools in your area have ample materials? Teacher Aides? Computer-assisted instruction and administration? Closed-circuit television? Is your tax dollar being invested productively? Stink Recorders Return

By ROBERT MacKAY

TORONTO (CP) — The McKenna Mendelson Mainline Stink.

That's the name of the most recent album released by a Canadian pop group.

The McKenna Mendelson Mainline, a Toronto blues group, has just returned from a Euorpean tour during which it played at the Utrecht Pop Festival in The Netherlands along with such groups as the Pink Floyd, Jimi Hendrix and The Pretty Things.

It also spent about six months in Britain playing in nightclubs, cutting the Stink album and a single from it called Better Watch Out.

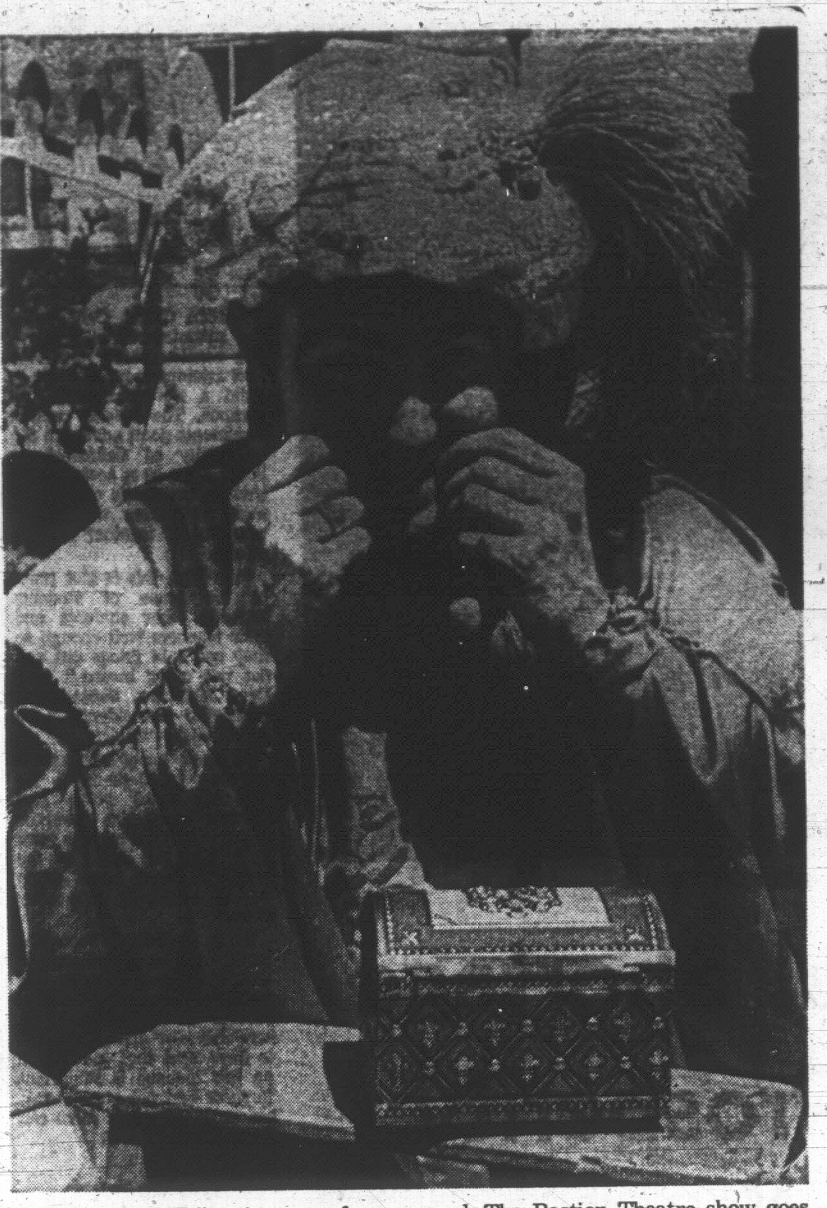
The red beard and long blonde hair of lead singer and guitarits Joe Mendelson, who stands six feet one inch and weights 220 pounds, make him look like an ancient Viking.

About a year ago he placed an advertisement in a Toronto newspaper saying he wanted to start a blues band. Next day he received a call from Mike McKenna, formerly of the Ugly Ducklings and Luke and the Apostles — two Canadain groups which almost made it — and the McKenna Mendelson Mainline was born.

FUTURE LIMITED

While in Toronto they played on the same bill as The Fuggs, the Canned Heat and John Lee Hooker. They were asked to go to Detroit and back Jeff Beck in the Grande Ballroom.

Why did they leave with all these things happening while they were based in Toronto? Mike Harrison, base guiatrist, says it was "because they (Canadian recording companies) haven't the money or the interest in the artist that a British or American company might have."



SOME SMILES suit some faces better than others so Bernarz, the Sad Magician in the children's musical, The Box of Smiles, tries one on for size because he's tired of being sad. The Bastion Theatre show goes on Monday through Saturday in Bastion and Centennial Squares at 12:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. respectively. (Photo by Stuart Baker)

'Sweet, Sour . . . Roller Coaster'

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The morning after he won the Oscar for his performance in Marty, Ernest Borgnine felt great. "I was telling myself, 'Borgnine, you really did it'," he recalls.

"I was sailing pretty good with my little bubble. Then I got a postcard: 'How could you accept the Oscar when everybody knows it belongs to James Dean?' "

Dean, 24, a teen-age screen idol killed several months earlier in the crash of his sports cars, was a posthumous 1956 nominee for East of Eden.

"I just felt terrible," Borgnine remembers. "I thought perhaps I had stolen it from a great talent."

That's the way life has been for the heavy-set Connecticut-born Borgnine—a roller coaster of highs and lows, triumphs and frustrations, sweet and sour.

The lows have included three divorces, the two latest from actresses Katy Jurado and Ethel Merman. Another low came when he was honeymooning with his present wife: a special-delivery notice that he was overdrawn $432 at the bank.

He blames that on bad business management. "In the year before, I made more than $300,000." But now he's riding the crest again. He showed blueprints of a 52-foot $100,000 motor yacht he's having built at nearby Newport Beach.

"I've a few pennies in the bank," Borgnine beamed. "I have a lovely home, a lovely wife, lovely children and two cars in the garage.

"Everything's coming along great. I coudn't ask more than that the good Lord will let me live long enough to enjoy it even more."

He had just finished Suppose They Gave a War and Nobody Came here and would leave in a few days for Italy and Vengeance Is Yours—his seventh picture in 23 months and 40th in 16 years.

Borgnine at 52 is a five-foot-11 212-pounder with heavy brows, greying hair thinning at the temples and a grin that shows gaps between his teeth. Hardly a visage you'd pick out from a crowd as a prospect for movie stardom.

Theatre Guild Has the Knack

Ann Jellicoe's youthful comedy hit, The Knack, is the choice of Victoria Theatre Guild to open its 1969-70 season at Langham Court Theatre, Sept. 13.

Young actors, either past or present students at University of Victoria, will appear in the cast.

Acting in an advisory capacity with this production, is Bert Farr, who had directed three of the actors in Victoria Secondary School productions.

Opening in October, the second production will be Out of the Crocodile by Giles Cooper, a comedy with a bit of fantasy couched in the style of the theatre of the absurd. This will be directed by Bert Farr.

Casting dates are to be announced and two men and three women are called for.

Membership fees and conditions have been revised for the new season.

Adult memberships will be $10 and will carry one admission ticket for each show. Voting members will pay an additional dollar. The same conditions pertain to junior memberships at $5.

Alex Signed To New Show

TORONTO (CP) — Alex Barris, former Toronto newspaper columnist and television performer, said in a telephone interview from California he has been signed as the head writer of a new United States television show and has written a book.

Mr. Barris was a show business columnist with The Telegram and last winter was host of a variety series on the CBC.

He said he has been signed as a head writer for the Barbara McNair one-hour weekly television series which will be seen in major U.S. cities.

HE WAITED UNTIL PUBLIC CAUGHT UP WITH HIM

By HOLLIE I. WEST
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — It's been said frequently that Thelonious Monk is unquestionably his own man.

The story goes that if he does not feel the need to create a new work, take part in a recording date or work with musicians strange to him, he simply does not do it. In short, he must be accepted on his terms.

Monk was overlooked during the be-bop movement in the 1940s. Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie were the acknowledged leaders.

Monk was thought of as some "far out," weird character who was the butt of various musical jokes.

EVEN LESS

He waited until the public caught up with him. Monk worked seldom and recorded even less.

Only in the middle and late 1950s did he emerge as a major figure known outside a coterie of musicians and knowledgable listeners.

The style of the pianist-composer was already cast in a finished mold when he moved into the limelight. He had written his ballad masterpieces, Round Midnight and Ruby, My Dear, and his faster-tempoed asymmetrical structures, Criss-Cross, Epistrophy, Misterioso and Four in One.

His playing was at a high in the 1950s. He recorded several solos that are jazz milestones.

Jazz critics began analyzing his work with new vigor and Monk even got his picture on the cover of Time magazine in 1964.

His career was sparked considerably by Orrin Keepnews, then of Riverside Records, when he signed Monk to a recording contract in 1955.

Keepnews put the hitherto ignored musician on a regular recording schedule in different kinds of formats that appealed to afficiandos and unhip listeners.

For five years this policy worked well and some of Monk's most important records were produced. But he left the small independent company and signed with Columbia Records in 1962.

Officials at Columbia seem at a loss for new and interesting ways in which to record Monk.

Except for two very good quartet albums in 1963 and 1964 and a big band concert recording in the latter year, his Columbia discs have been extremely disappointing.

MUCH VARIETY

Keepnews has said one of his aims in recording Monk was to get as much variety in the dates as possible, and he was able to do this because the pianist did not have a regular working group during the time of his Riverside contract.

Ted Macero, Monk's current recording director, has not shown much imagination in finding new contexts for his man.

Added to this problem is Monk's artistic statis. He has not composed anything of note in about nine years.

ANGULAR BEAUTY

It is a strange pairing. There is the angular beauty of Monk's piano set against the slick, almost amorphous Nelson charts.

Nowhere does Nelson succeed in meeting Monk on equal ground.

His ensemble writing, for example, has none of the double-edged spirit of the dissonant lyricism of Reflections.

His euphonious harmonic voicings and even rythms are out of place in Monk's musical environs, where discontinuous space and dissonance are natural.

Overton met the problem of scoring it by having an ensemble play a transcribed section from a 1954 Monk piano version of the composition.

This was a partial solution because the passage was too pianistic for horns to play, but at least he met the issue head on.

Keepnews said that Monk once expressed a desire to record with Lionel Hampton and Dizzy Gillespie on separate dates.

Monk conceivably could record with them in different sized groups. Such sessions might indeed produce epochal jazz and Columbia has the facilities to make the idea go.

Why not, Mr. Macero?

Classes For Actors Monday

Classes in basic training for inexperienced actors are being sponsored by the Country Church Players of Colwood.

There will be four sessions in St. John the Baptist Church Hall, commencing Monday and each Monday thereafter through August, starting time, 8 p.m.

Instruction will be by creative drama specialist, Peter McWhir.

Non members who wish to attend the classes may do so by payment of the club's annual fee of $2.

Further information is available from the president, Mrs. G. Chambers, 478-2770, or the secretary, Mrs. J. H. C. Palmer, 478-1959.

JOAN BAEZ

DAYBREAK, Autobiography of Joan Baez. Paperback by Avon Books, New York. 95 cents.

By AL FORREST

What is Joan Baez really like?

Is she a wild-eyed fanatic?

Is she the girl next door who just happens to be a folksinger and pacifist?

Or is she, as some of her followers insist, a saint who strolls the hills of Carmel, finding inspiration in the mystic waters of the blue Pacific?

The answer is not at all clear from this autobiography.

She paints herself as a rather sickly child who outgrew her Quaker upbringing by being intellectually seduced (at age 16) by pacifist Ira Sandperl to whom she clings (again, she insists, intellectually) from that day forward.

Once baptized to pacifism, her dedication is complete.

Tells Plenty

In Daybreak she holds back nothing from her younger life and in the process tells more about Joan Baez than I really want to know.

Item: "A Saint Bernard tried to play with me one afternoon and he rolled me down the hill. I was so terrified that I wet my pants."

Item: "I . . . ripped a dead gopher apart with the neighbor boy. He took the head and I took the tail and we pulled . . ."

Inner Fires

In her early years, she was probably more hurt by racial prejudice than she admits here.

She calls herself "skinny and very dark" (her father is Mexican) and she refers to several people in the neighborhood as men who "dislike kids, Negroes and Mexicans . . ."

Her hurts may help to explain the inner fires burning beneath a serene surface.

When I met Joan Baez during her visit to Victoria, I at first had difficulty picking her out of the crowd of people walking along.

She scores very low on charisma; you would almost not notice when she entered a room. When you became aware of her it would be a dark, skinny little girl (she's 28) who wears no make-up but has a very pleasant smile.

In Daybreak she calls it her million dollar smile. Actually it's more like a thousand dollar smile. It's her voice that's worth a million.

Fascinating Lyric

And it is on stage that Joan becomes larger than life, a saintly creature with brotherhood in her heart and heaven in her voice.

And in Daybreak, when she begins to relate conversations on war and peace, life and death with the young people she meets, the book becomes a fascinating lyric of man's search for a better life.

She says: "The point of non-violence is to build a floor, a strong new floor, beneath which we can no longer sink . . ."

And quotes the Bible: "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation. Neither shall they learn war anymore."

And on a more personal note: "I have often felt the presence of God very close. . . ."

The key passage in Daybreak comes when Billy, a young soldier who has decided to go to the stockade rather than kill, comes to Joan before turning himself in.

Billy asked: "Do you think we can end the wars?" As always with that question I waited for a sign or a voice to assure me that I was not going crazy, got no assurance, defied all reason, logic, common sense and history and heard myself say "Yes, I think we can end the wars."

"How?"

"I don't know yet."

"Don't say that," Billy said, and then he shook his head and looked up at the sky. Of course. Why should he come out into the world after five years as a convict just in time to be blown up with the rest of us?

"We're just beginning," I said.

Romantic Legend

All this is part of the romantic legend of Joan Baez.

Not this stuff from the early chapters of her book: "In second grade I ran to the girls' room and hung my head over the toilet to be sick . . ."

Daybreak would have been more satisfying reading if she had given us more Joan of Arc and less Baez in the biffy.

Old Guide For New Settlers

THE CANADIAN SETTLER'S GUIDE by Catharine Parr Traill. McClelland and Stewart. $2.95.

By R. G. LAWRENCE

This is not a book to rush out and buy for prospective migrants to Canada, since it was written in 1854. Not many settlers today will choose to make their own soap, candles, maple beer, or dandelion coffee. No Atlantic passage for 3-4-10 either!

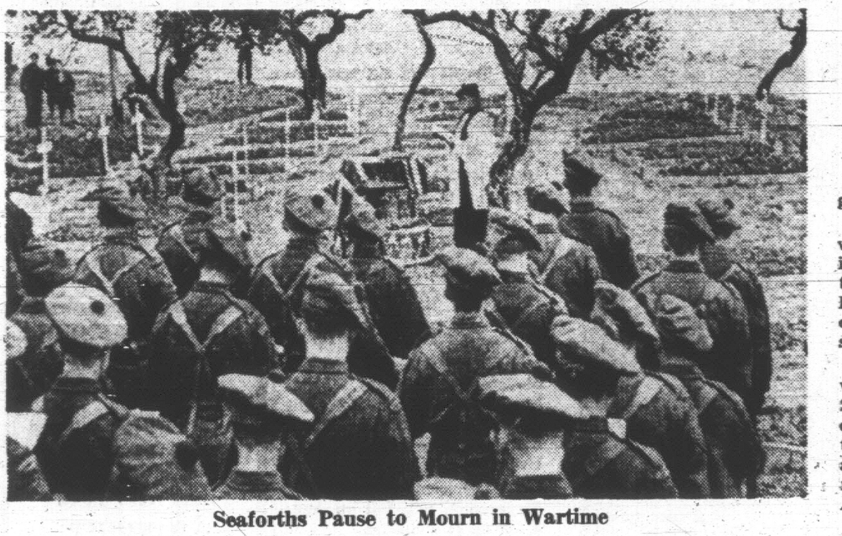
Unusally Fluent, Perceptive Pioneer

It is, however, a fascinating book. Mrs. Traill (1809-1899) was an unusually fluent, perceptive, and tolerant pioneer. Busy and resourceful, she found time during 18 years of roughing it to observe and collect hundreds of wild flowers. All readers will respond to her sensitivity towards the changing seasons.

One reads with awe her pages about preparation and materials for the long journey to Canada, the planning of the homestead, the making of household supplies, looking after the poultry, preserving meat and fruit for the arduous winter, managing the dairy, and on occasion fighting forest fires.

Makes Us Value Household Aids

A reading of this guide will make one really appreciate the advantages of running water and electricity in the home: "I would recommend a good cooking-stove in your kitchen; it is more convenient, and it is not so destructive to clothes as the great log fires. A stove large enough to cook food for a family of 10 or 12 persons will cost from 20 to 30 dollars."



Seaforths Pause to Mourn in Wartime

Seaforth Highlanders' Story of Achievement

By B. G. PARKER

It is a proud man that can say: "I fought with the Seaforths."

This regimental history by Dr. R. H. Roy, an associate professor at the University of Victoria, is an enthralling and factual story of this fine regiment with its splendid traditions.

From the dedication, by the Regimental Padre, R. C. H. Durnford, the history moves swiftly through the inter-war years, the call to arms, the years in Britain, the combined training — on, to the meat of the story — the regiment in battle. This starts with the invasion of Sicily on the 10th of July 1943, the fighting up through Italy and on to the campaign in the Netherlands.

Following the magnificent traditions set by the 72nd Seaforth Highlanders in the First World War, General Pearkes, who commanded the 1st Division in England, during the Second World War, writes: "I saw the battalion develop into one of the finest in the Canadian Army in England. In Sicily, Italy and the Netherlands, all ranks contributed to the magnificent record of the Seaforths in battle. Forged in war and upheld by a spirit of sacrifice in peace, the esprit-de-corps of the regiment shines like a beacon through the chapters of this book. Theirs is a story of achievement second to none."

His Royal Highness, Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, the present Colonel-in-Chief of the Regiment, following his presentation of the colors in 1962, said in part, "It takes more than men, drill and equipment to make a good regiment. The spirit of the regiment has to be built up over the years. It is made up by the service and sacrifices of everyone who has served with it or ever been connected with it in peace or in war. In times of stress or battle, the binding force of a regiment sustains the morale of all those members and inspires acts of courage and endurance far beyond the capabilities of any ordinary group of people."

General J. A. Clark, long time Colonel of the Regiment, quotes Sir Arthur Bryant, the famous historian, while referring to the Seaforths in his preface — "It has been the discipline, training and above all, the espirit-de-corps, which superimposed on certain basic and hereditary dispostions in our people, have enabled British soldiers to achieve the impossible when all the odds seemed against them."

This volume, of some 600 pages, can tell but in part, the story of the regiment in war and peace — of the tremendous pride and elan generated in all ranks, which included men of many national backgrounds.

Dr. Roy, himself an infantry officer with a Highland regiment, trained in Canada and England and having fought in Italy, has captured remarkably well the spirit of the men during the long wait in England, yearning for action, the training, hardening and honing of the regiment into a fighting unit, and above all their fine record in action.

The book is well documented with many excellent photos and maps, with index, footnotes and many quotations from letters and diaries which makes for exciting reading.

From the time they landed in Sicily, the Seaforths fought in every major battle in Italy.

Outstanding among these were the battles of Ortona, and the cracking of the Hitler and Gothic lines.

The regiment suffered some 1,500 casualities during the war which attests to the severity of the battles in which it was engaged.

My one criticism is, that so many incidents, amusing and otherwise have had to be left out for sheer lack of space.

This is a book that I highly recommend — a fine story of a proud and glorious regiment.

Cuidich'n Righ! Help the King!

Exploration and Survival in Amazon

HENRY WALTER BATES, NATURALIST OF THE AMAZONS, by George Woodcock. Faber and Faber, $7.

By HUMPHRY DAVY

The 19th century was a great age for explorations.

Once the Napoeonic Wars were ended, explorer-naturalists from Britain and Europe travelled to underdeveloped lands in search of new discoveries in the natural sciences.

They explored the large virgin forests of North and South America, the great deserts and rivers of Africa, the archipelagos of the Pacific and even penetrated into the mountain fastness of fierce Asian tribes.

In an age when there were no wonder drugs, and communications with the civilized world was almost nil, many died from tropical diseases, deprivation and want or were murdered by tribesmen.

Those who survived usually received, like today's astronauts, a hero's welcome on their return home.

One of these remarkable men was Henry Walter Bates, son of a Leicester hosier and a self-taught naturalist, who set off—almost peniless—for the Amazon in 1848.

Living by seling his specimens to museums and private collectors, Bates stayed for eleven years on the banks of the great river and its tributaries.

During his stay there he discovered more than 8,000 hitherto unknown species of insects, birds and mammals and other forms of animal life.

But it's a wonder that Bates lived to return to England. He overcame deadly tropical diseases, including cholera, and starvation when he went broke on one occasion.

He was reduced to such an impoverished state that he didn't even have the means to procure a pair of boots. He was thus forced to hunt for food barefoot, and you can imagine what that meant in a forest infested with snakes, ravenous insects and thorny plants.

However Bates pulled through all these hazards because of his ability to adjust himself to the native way of life — to accept their food and medicine. So many of his contemporaries failed to appreciate this and died as a result.

But why is Bates remembered today? He certainly ranks as a great entomologist, but knowledge of the man would be limited only to professionals if it rested on this alone.

It's his book — The Naturalist on the River Amazons — published on his return to England. It was a big success in his day and has since stood the test of time.

Woodcock in his admirable account on Bates points out that as a scientist he shines with a clear but small light beside his friends, Charles Darwin and Alfred W. Wallace, the two great naturalists of the nineteenth century.

But as a writer recording experiences he was undoubtedly their superior, according to the author.

In this century the book was appreciated by D. H. Lawrence, and 30 years later George Orwell wrote to Woodcock praising it for its "wonderful Arcadian atmosphere."

Once you have read this book, you will want to search the public libraries for Bates' Naturalist on the River Amazons.

Pearl Buck Keeps Going

PEARL BUCK

By ALBIN KREBS

PHILADELPHIA—She's 77 years old and far from wanting to hide it, and her once-vigorous voice sometimes falters a bit, but it would be a mistake to conclude that Pearl S. Buck can be counted out.

On July 7, only a week after her last birthday, the Nobel prize-winning author brought out another novel, "The Three Daughters of Madame Liang" to add to the list of more than 70 of her books published so far.

"When I say I'm a working writer, I accent 'working'," the silver-haired Miss Buck said in a recent interview. "My publishers have just received the second of two novels I wrote after 'Madame Liang,' and I suppose I have about two dozen novels, collections of short stories, and essays waiting for publication.

"Of course, one pays the price for being prolific. I sometimes feel quite guilty for being so, and heaven knows the literary Establishment can't forgive me for it, nor for the fact that my books sell. With some people, that's suspect, you know."

Miss Buck sat in the library of her town house in Philadelphia. Scattered about the huge room were handsome Oriental screens, pearl-inlaid chairs, Ming figurines and Chinese vases, collected by Miss Buck when she lived in China. (The town house serves as headquarters for the Pearl S. Buck Foundation, which aids "Amerasians"—orphans left behind in the Orient by their American servicemen fathers.)

Although the public identifies her with "The Good Earth," her best-known novel, it is far from her favorite. "I really don't have a favorite novel because each one represents a phase of my life or my thinking; I never re-read my novels," she said.

Miss Buck said critics don't understand her.

"American critics, accustomed to dealing with American writers, ought to face the fact that I am not a 100 per cent American writer. My concept of the novel is based on the Chinese novel, which has a simple, direct style. I read Chinese novels almost exclusively until I came to America to go to college," she said.

Miss Buck declined to say which contemporary writers she admires. Most of them, she said, are "boringly preoccupied with sex."

Miss Buck does her writing at great Hills Farm, her estate in Pekarsie, Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

She described the life of the writer as "the loneliest in the world, from an intellectual standpoint," but she expressed genteel anger over a recent magazine article that described her as a "rich, lonely old lady."

"I am old, of course, but I'm not vain about it," she said. "I was brought up in China, where age is honorable. And as long as I can work, I'm happy. As for being lonely, in the conventional sense, let me merely say that I have nine adopted children, plus 12 grandchildren, and they all live nearby. I also have four Korean girls who live at my house while being educated in this country. My house is full all the time, and so is my life."

If You Think It's Easy to Write Filthy Books...

By RUSSELL BAKER

Like many persons who haven't tried, Carstairs thought it would be easy to write a dirty book and make a million dollars.

Thus it was that last summer he notified his publisher, Jagger and Smurch, that he had decided to "go dirty" and intended to start work immediately on "Shriek With Lust," a novel that would make every work on the drug store bookrack as obsolete as "the Bobbsey Twins."

Jagger and Smurch were delighted. Carstairs had been writing clean for twenty years and with the change in reading tastes his popularity had declined until sales of his last novel, "Plenty of Soap and Hot Water," had been a scant 216.

The critics, moreover, had lately begun to sneer at his failure to explore the seamier side of the boudoir and to deride his abstention from bestiality.

The headlines of his reviews said such things as "Too Many Eight-Letter Words" and "Mr. Clean Strikes Again."

Sneering Critics

Jagger and Smurch were so excited about Carstairs's decision to do "Shriek With Lust" that they assigned Elroy Congdon, editor of the immensely successful "Satyr Bounding," to work closely with him.

Now, one year later, it appears that America will not have to lie awake nights, after all, worrying about its children getting their hands on a copy of "Shriek With Lust." Elroy Congdon's memo to Jagger and Smurch, reprinted here should explain why.

"After two months without seeing even a crude outline of "Shriek With Lust," I went to see Carstairs, and found that he hadn't put a word on paper.

"He told me that he had written a sizzling opening chapter set in a discotheque and had let his wife read it. His wife told him he ought to have his typewriter washed out with soap, and said she would leave him if he let such stuff be published.

"I talked personally to Mrs. Carstairs and explained that her husband had to write with brutal frankness if he was to be true to his art. She agreed to let him write brutal frankness as long as it was not so brutal or so frank that it would embarrass her with the Ladies Aid Society at her church.

Locked Manuscript

"With this stipulation, I got Carstairs back to the typewriter and he worked for six weeks. During this period he would lock the manuscript in a strongbox every night in order to prevent pages of it from falling into the hands of his children.

"The Carstairs house was burglarized near the end of Chapter One and the strongbox was stolen, along with a quantity of stainless steel spoons.

"Two weeks after the burglary, Carstairs was telephoned by the thief. 'How would you like your mother to know you've been writing stuff like I found in your strong box?' the thief asked, and proceeded to blackmail Carstairs for $150.

"'What's more' the thief said, after receiving his payoff, 'the manuscript is so cheesy that it doesn't deserve to be published'; and he told Carstairs that he intended to burn it.

"At this point, five months after our association began, Carstairs had to start all over. What with worrying about writing his book dirty enough to make a million but not so dirty that it would bother his mother and wife, he was trapped behind one of the fanciest cases of writer's block imaginable.

Dirty Laundry

"It was three months before he put a single word on paper and the draft of the first chapter has just arrived. This chapter introduces the characters, Lance LaRogue and Lola Gonzalez, and is set in the laundry room of a large apartment house. Need I say more?

"As the names Lance LaRogue and Lola Gonzalez suggest, Carstairs' idea of what should go into a brutally frank modern novel seems to have been acquired at an age when he was smoking cornsilk behind the barn and reading 'Spicy Detective.'

"He refers twice — believe it or not — to 'Lola's shapely limbs.' Lance, so help me, 'felt an untoward emotion upon glimpsing Lola's shapely limbs as she leaned over the automatic washer with her box of detergent.'

"A few lines later he writes 'Lance's breath came in thick short pants.'

"The entire chapter wheezes on in this vein — there are ten pages devoted to Lola's showing Lance how the washing machine's lint-catcher works — and at its end they make a date to go to an ice cream parlor.

"Philip Roth, John Updike, Henry Miller — any of a hundred writers could make that laundry room steam. Carstairs couldn't make steam on a locomotive on an August afternoon.

"He doesn't even realize that "shapely limbs' were replaced twenty years ago by "milky white thighs.' His characters are so reluctant to undress that even their breath comes in 'thick short pants.'

Clean Too Long

"It is painfully obvious from Chaper One that Carstairs has been writing clean for too many years. I suggest that we abandon 'Shriek With Lust' and urge Carstairs to take on that project about the history of the goosefeather pillow."

Tartuffe Can Launch Fair Into Orbit

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Tartuffe may just be the booster to put Victoria Fair into orbit—for years ahead.

At mid-point in the seven-week trial operation, that's an opinion formed on the basis of close observation, a weighing of achievement against intent and a sampling of public reaction.

Entry into the repertory Tuesday, of the Moliere comedy, Tartuffe, could turn out to be the deciding factor. Of the two plays that have alternated since July 11, the tragedy Hamlet has been dragging its feet on the popularity path.

Merchant of Venice, has been first choice for people planning on taking in one or the other and has been catching raves on all sides.

Does this mean, if box office is to be the main criterion, that the name of the game is comedy?

I'm afraid it does. "Afraid" because such a restriction imposes artistic limitations, always an unfortunate factor.

Unless we decide to make our festival a sort of high-falutin laugh-in.

Hamlet was chosen for the repertory in the first place on the basis that it was one of the best known Shakespearean plays and that Christopher Newton was available for the role.

There was some wrong-guessing there which could and probably would happen to any newcomer to the city, for theatre audiences in Victoria aren't like those found elsewhere.

In Victoria life generally is pleasant, soft, relaxing. Possibly people who go to the theatre—being among the average-and-slightly-above intellects and therefore a bit on the sensitive side—have somewhat guilty consciences about this good life.

This leads to a general desire to close eyes and ears against the harsher aspects—sorrow, catastrophe, sordidness, injustice, ugliness.

On the other hand, for the minority who are more profound in their theatre tastes and less squeamish, Hamlet was too trammeled an offering and would only attract their attention if a great, or controversial, artist was playing the Dane

To be fair, Newton brought some fine qualities to the role. He is clearly a gifted young actor, intelligent and in many aspects well trained for the classical theatre.

But neither his artistic stature nor his reputation—as yet—have reached a point to make him a commanding Hamlet for the connoisseur or the truly dedicated theatre-goer, for whom the tragedies and the serious plays must be slanted in this town.

Much more to the taste of Victorians and visitors has been the charm, the light mood and short span of Merchant of Venice.

People are loving it and talking about it, debating the differences in interpretation, excited to find so high a level of professionalism finally adorned their playhouse.

Whatever mis-step may have been made, whatever valid criticism can be leveled concerning the productions, there are sure and certain aspects that make Victoria Fair worthwhile, justifying the University of Victoria's initial venture in promoting it.

Uvic fine arts chiefs had in mind in planning this rather narrowly budgeted "first", a trial run testing the suitability of the Victoria climate for a major fine arts festival.

To my mind they have been answered affirmatively. For among residents and visitors who have seen the shows, there is talk, attention has been arrested, there is a thrill of discovery and surprise.

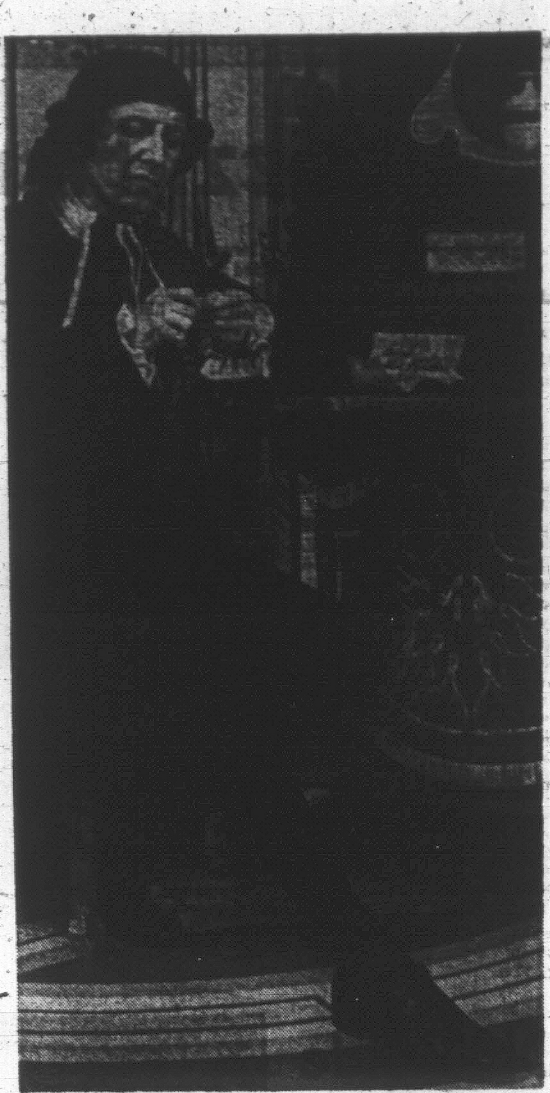
Inject some more high-powered (green tinted) fuel in the tanks of Victoria Fair and watch the attention grow and spread over the next couple of years.



HYPOCRIT and imposter, Tartuffe, played in the Victoria Fair production by Carl Hare, has taken possession of the mind and heart of wealthy, good-natured Monsieur Orgon, dominates his household and nurses villainous plans to dispossess him of family and wealth.

OPENING SCENE from the lively French (English version) comedy, Tartuffe, reveals magnificent setting, handsome period furniture, both designed by Robert Cothran and executed in Uvic workshop. Tartuffe joins Victoria Fair Repertory Tuesday, at McPherson Playhouse.

On-Campus Experiment Wednesday

An on-campus, somewhat experimental production, involving students and faculty in the theatre division of University of Victoria will have the first of six performances in the Phoenix Theatre, Wednesday.

Joel Miller, stage manager for Victoria Fair, who is assistant to artistic director Christopher Newton in Theatre Calgary, is directing a piece of "metaphysical vaudeville" entitled Tilt.

The play involves some improvisation and has in its cast, Allan Granstrom (chief of costume design), Marti Maraden (Jessica in Merchant of Venice), and Jim Leard and Jim Netherton, third year Uvic theatre students.

Tilt performances, after Wednesday, will fall on Aug. 8, 14, 16, 18 and 22.

POWERFUL

Changes in the cast of Tartuffe, bring John Krich into the role of Cleante, the brother-in-law of wealthy Orgon (Richard Galuppi).

Rod Symington who played the part in the original four-night run in March, is now on a Sabbatical in Europe.

Krich, a polished and powerful actor who this semester becomes a faculty member in Uvic's theatre division, is now appearing in all three Victoria Fair productions.

Summer Music Making To Climax in Concert

The trend toward Victoria becoming the scene of action as far as summer music making is concerned has taken on greater emphasis than ever this season.

On Friday an interesting concert will climax five weeks of study by an international group of students who have attended Victoria Summer School of Music sessions on the campus of St. Margaret's School.

Instructors Clayton Hare, violinist and conductor, and his wife, pianist Dorothy Swetnam, have prepared a versatile program to be presented at 8:15 p.m. in the Newcombe Auditorium.

Among Victoria students taking part will be violinist Ronald Comber and pianists Linda Marshall and Heline Barker.

Younger performers will include Gwendy and Desmond Hoebig of Vancouver, the exceptional young brother and sister who astonished adjudicator and audiences at last spring's Victoria Music Festival.

An orchestra, two string quartets, a piano ensemble and string and piano solos will be featured.

A composition for orchestra and a piece for piano by the Russian-American composer, Vladimir Padwa, recent winner of the ASCAP award in New York, are included.

The orchestra will also play a Concerto Grosso by Corelli, the great Fugue in G minor by Bach arranged for strings, and a rarely performed work by Mozart—an entracte from his incidental music for the drama, Thamos, King of Egypt.

Students attending the summer school in its fifth year have come from Massachussetts, Maine, Oregon, Washington, Ontario, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

The concert is open to the public.

'Gleason the Great' Eyeing Competition

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The word from the camp of CBS-TV's Jackie Gleason is that The Great One will be going all out to fend off the new competition of NBC-TV's Andy Williams this fall.

Gleason has been a rock of ratings consistency and power for CBS-TV for years, and the NBC-TV move of confronting him head-on with Williams' variety hour will be watched closely by the trade as well as the public.

A Gleason spokesman says the comedian will offer at least 10 new one-hour musicals based on The Honeymooners characters that are the anchor of the series.

This means clearly, says the spokesman, that Art Carney, Sheila Macrae and Jane Kean will be back with Gleason. The Carney confirmation, which seems solid at this point, according to the spokesman, is pivotal to the success of the series.

For there is little doubt that without Carney the series would be severly weakened and that the Williams competition would become even more formidable.

In addition to The Honeymooners musicals, says the spokesman, there will be at least 10 other programs, original, in the musical-comedy style, in which Gleason will offer some of his other characters — such as Reggie Van Gleason, Rum Dum, Fenwick Babbitt, The Poor Soul and The Loud Mouth.

SEASIDE ROMP

Under the direction of Betty Farrally and Arnold Spohr, the 1969 edition of the Banff School of Fine Arts Festival Ballet promises to be a gay and exciting presentation.

It will be seen at McPherson Playhouse, Aug. 14.

Two ballets choreographed by Gwynne Ashton, Royal Winnipeg ballet mistress, will be performed.

The first, Sur la Plage, is a delightful seaside romp that opens with a fine piece of mime by Jock Abra of Calgary as the solitary beachcomber.

Entre Jeux, the second ballet, is in a more classical tradition. Set to music by Bizet, it will feature Laura Gray of Kelowna in partnership with Peter Garrick, a student from Columbia, S.C.

Miss Gray has appeared in several previous Festival Ballet productions and is now a student with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet School.

She danced with the company on their spring Sol Hurok-managed tour of the United States and Canada.

Garrick is also with the Royal Winnipeg.

Eva von Gencsy is again teaching jazz ballet at the Banff School and will be featured in Here and Now, her own ballet which she will dance with Michel Boubot.

The dance is in two parts, the first called Then features jazz of the "gold old days."

Bill Martin-Viscount, one of Canada's most internationally distinguished dancers, and ballerina Linda DiBona are again at the Banff School and will dance in Spring Waters and the bravura Esmeralda pas de deux.

A PAS DE DEUX sequence from Gwynne Ashton's ballet, Entre Jeux, is rehearsed by Banff Festival Ballet principals Laura Gray and Peter Garrick. The company will dance at McPherson Playhouse, Aug. 14.

'Church Joining Folk-Group And Folk-Group the Church'

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Sing round the year. 18 carols selected and composed by Donald Swann. Gal S4000.

"New music in church is part of a swing back to the people, the church is joining the folk-group and the folk-group the church" and Donald Swann is effecting this pendulum swing more than any other living composer.

Advocating a plan to punctuate the church year with frequent festivals of rejoicing, Swann devotes most of his time to composing, performing and distributing songs of praise and joy.

He hopes they will help to teach people an awareness of their world citizenship and stop them fighting and destroying one another.

Seeing no reason why sacred music should be limited to the serious, he incorporates into all his songs a bright vitality.

The tunes are charming, often catchy, sometimes deceptively simple, and always, the message in the words is as important as the music conveying it.

Diamond In the Groove

Though he reveres the great English cathedral tradition, he points out that only a "steeple culture" would insist that church music must remain classical.

"In God's orchestra there is always room for a tin whistle" he says in his revealing book of reflections, The Space Between the Bars.

Accordingly, the songs on this record are accompanied by organ, piano (or both) guitars, bass, triangle and tambourine; some are unaccompanied and the Venite has a whistling chorus.

Feeling that in turning away from Formalism man is more aware of suffering, Swann writes many sharply satirical, self-critical songs.

Lines like: "We are Christian men and women but we're keeping what we've got Sir; We are Christian men and women, always willing never able ..." really grab the conscientious Christian.

A pacifist in his youth, Swann admits "I don't like war, I don't like war films. I can't get used to Indians and white men carving each other up.. James Bond's toughness angers me." then adds disarmingly, "I'm a weed."

The obvious reprimand in "The Devil Wore a Crucifix," sung here with youthful sternness epitomoizes his feelings on this point.

If men need to suffer they also need consolation is another of his precepts, so many songs are of God's kindness and mercy and the sheer joy of living. Every star shall sing a Carol, speaks of universal priase, Jubilate Domino has a robust gaiety which is underlined by a tambourine and Christmas is wholly consolatory.

Many of the tunes seem familiar. The children go dancing up the aisle singing Here we go up to Bethlehem (to the tune of Here we go round the mulberry tree.) Judas and Mary is as ballad-like as Henry Martin and Praise the Lord as hymlike as Men of Harlech.

A man who could view the blundering rhinocerous as a philanthropic canopener would naturally be drawn to the Stork Carol which explains that storks bring babies because one was kind to the infant Jesus.

Admitting to no categories or exclusions in songs, Swann brings infinite variety of style into this collection.

An exact performance of the book of words and music printed several years ago as Sing Around the Year, except that the record lacks the scriptoral readings which gave unity to the song cycle in print, this record should be of great interest to all those concerned with the training of the young within the framework of the church.

Fiddle Fest Sell-Out Seen

SHELBURNE, Ont. (CP) — A sell-out, standing-room crowd of about 5,000 persons is expected to watch the finals of the Canadian open old-time fiddlers' championships here Aug. 9, a contest spokesman said.

The championships, to be held Aug. 8-9, will attract fiddlers from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario, Manitoba, British Columbia, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New York and Indiana.

The championships started in 1951 as a Canadian title event but has developed into an international event, the largest of its kind in the world. A total of 138 contestants participated last year and more are expected to perform this year.

The Shelburne Rotary Club started the contest and has raised more than $100,000 for charities.

Museum Grants From Gov't Urged

TORONTO (CP) — The director of the Royal Ontario Museum says the federal government should provide $40,000,000 to improve museums across Canada.

Peter Swann said in an interview the federal government "is not doing the job it should across the country" to provide museums with trained curators, new purchases and capital development.

He suggested that two funds be set up—one of $20,000,000 for capital development and one of $20,000,000 for purchases and training staff.

It's Spooky Stuff And All Hard Work

By GORDON RICE

Enigmatic. Puzzling. That might describe the common characteristic of works by three artists, Alistair Grant, Sarah Gersovitz, and Pat Martin Bates, soon to be displayed at the Print Gallery in Oak Bay. Viewers will find the work difficult, perhaps, but worth the effort.

This show of prints, which runs from the 5th through the 19th of August, also evinces another consistent quality, hard work. And where hard work is evident, one's attention is usually rewarded in some way.

Alstair Grant's color etchings are things to be seen in close. The images appear to be simple, but at close range certain deeply embossed areas, and grainy colors, reveal some of the most interesting aspects of his work.

The imagery seems to take off from nature somewhere — seed pods, moth wings, rocks — but arrives at a picture which seems to call forth neither animals, vegetables, or minerals. Nor is one reminded of advertising art imagery, or anything mechanical.

Curious to See

So where are we? Into something personal, no doubt, and very relaxed, and hard to talk about, but curious to see. His brief forms stand forth odd, but clear, without repetition, gentle and quiet. The color is quite subtle.

The colored etchings of Sarah Gersovitz come across as odd stuff, too, with certain qualities of mystery, perhaps even conveying a kind of distress or anxiety. But here again, another's interpretation might be a bit different. Rock forms appear in all of her pictures here, and some of the rocks become, or begin to become odd sorts of faces and bodies.

It's spooky stuff, which seems to tread dangerously close to cartoon-movie images at times, but escapes that kind of bagging by unusual twists and turns.

Again, the hard work is there, and these works, like a peculiarly charming sort of fungus, might easily grow on one.

Pat Bates takes us off to another kind of mystery, this kind of a more metaphysical order. By that I mean that they seem to suggest, or talk about, not just peculiar, isolated, individual moods and incidents, but rather something of a more universal and general character.

Symbolism

For one thing, her forms tend to be harmonious, symmetrical, and geometrical. Carefully considered squares and circles, and variations on these shapes, are very important to her. A heavy stamped image (as in a coin), and a pitted sort of texture, on pure white or pure black paper; these very unusual characteristics set Pat Bates' work apart from any other artist's.

Squares, circles, crosses, and other geometrical forms, these are the forms seen so often in the art and symbolism of Eastern religions, especially in objects meant for meditational viewing. Bates' prints can be looked at in this same way. They are pure, precise, simple, definite, and clear. Their restraint and care in execution can't be missed.

If one cares to look with the same care and concentration on her works, their mysterious aspect opens out, and calls forth the deeper and more universal mysteries of life.

Patience and consideration will be required of viewers of the pictures of these three artists, but this is not the kind of artistic demand that damages one's mind. Contemplation of work, unusual or difficult or mysterious, can only strengthen and refresh you.

Big Band Draws

OTTAWA (CP) — For the second time this month, the middle-aged nostalgic crowd turned out joyfully to see and hear a big band.

A couple of weeks ago it was Duke Ellington, and this week in the opera house of the National Arts Centre it was Count Basie, a big-band leader since 1934.

The 2,300-seat house was nearly full but there was a much heavier sprinkling of youngsters than for Ellington. The 16-man band played some of the Count's old favorites, such as Frankie and Johnny and Cute, which Basie said he first recorded 64 years ago.

The most frequent soloist was big Eddie Lockjaw David, a saxophonist, who blew Cherokee and I Don't Stand a Ghost of a Chance, among others.

Barbed Wire Devotees On Increase

NEW YORK (Reuters) — While millions of people around the world collect stamps or coins, a growing band of American hobbists are devoting their spare time to tracking down rare specimens of barbed wire.

Many of the devotees are in Texas, where the hobby is so popular that two magazines are published to explain it. But collectors' groups also have been organized elsewhere in the country.

No one knows exactly how many varieties of barbed wire exist, but one catalogue lists more than 600.

The wire, cut into 18-inch strips, is mounted on wooden or plastic display boards. Barbed wire enthusiasts, like other collectors, either buy specimens from dealers or swap with fellow collectors.

Prices can range from well under a dollar for a common type of wire to $80 or more for a rare variety.

Famous Players Buys Theatre

TORONTO (CP) — Famous Players Canadian Corp. says it paid $5,250,000 in cash, notes and warrants to acquire the interest of N. A. Tylor and Associates in 31 movie theatres earlier this month.

Famous Players said the purchase price consisted of $2,000,000 in cash, $1,750,000 as a five-year, eight-per-cent note, 250,000 share purchase warrants for Famous Players stock, which are valued at $1,000,000, and an additional $500,000.

Famous Players already had a 50-per-cent interest in most of the Taylor theatres.

Toronto Market In Puppet Role

By NICK FERRIS,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets played the puppet this week, Wall Street the puppeteer and the United States economy the strings.

Following New York markets, Canadian markets continued their June-July slump Monday and Tuesday. But a combination of rumors and fact gave investors their first glimmer of hope in about a month.

The rumors — that a major U.S. bank was about to lower its prime rate — were floated Wednesday and picked up enough believers to turn what looked like another sharp setback into a small advance.

Although the rumors were denied, the momentum carried over into Thursday when tentative approval by the U.S. Senate of a six-month extension of the 10-per-cent tax surcharge was reached.

The surcharge could help bring inflation under control, and possibly enable lowering of record-high interest rates in the U.S. and, in turn, Canada.

The battle on inflation by both Canadian and American governments created a tight money situation which sent North American markets on their two-month plunge.

The upswing of prices attracted courageous bargain-hunters who snapped up blue-chip stocks at relatively low prices.

Hopes were that markets had reached their bottom and now would move into a sustained rally.

But volume, although heavier than the previous week, was light. Many still remembered the fate of the markets' previous attempt at a rally in the first week of July.

However, there have been signs of a slow-down in the rate of inflation.

Statistically, on index at Toronto, industrials gained 1.92 to 171.40 and western oils 2.31 to 230.43. Golds fell 31.04 to 172.32 and base metals .11 to 101.45. Volume was 11,658,000 shares, compared with 9,763,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 454 to 313. On the Canadian and Montreal exchanges, the composite index gained 2.50 to 168.97. Combined volume was 3,643,000 shares, compared with 2,894,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 212 to 114.

OTTAWA ANNOUNCES BUDGETARY SURPLUS

OTTAWA (CP) — The finance department Friday announced a $32,000,000 budgetary surplus for June, compared with a $142,000,000 deficit in the same month last year.

Budgetary revenues in June this year were $903,000,000 and expenditures $871,000,000.

In June, 1968, government revenues totalled $630,000,000 and expenditures were 762,000,000.

The surplus for the first three months of the year was $648,000,000, an increase from the $13,000,000 surplus for the same period last year.

Wall St. Volume Shows Big Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Sliding easily through an important psychological level, the stock market appeared headed for another steep loss. But it turned abruptly in midweek and rallied briskly the rest of the way to finish the week a winner.

The Dow Jones industrial average, after two days of loss that saw it close Tuesday at its lowest level since Jan. 4, 1967, slid through the 800 level in the first half-hour of trading Wednesday.

Analysts said the 800, like other hundred levels on the Dow indicator, was "important psychologically to some because when you penetrate such a level it has a bearish significance to some investors, and you get selling."

By noon that day the Dow Jones was off more than 9 points; then turned, overcame its loss, and finished the session with a small gain. It then went on to gain more than 11 points in each of its next two sessions and finished the week up 8.53 at 826.59, compared with a 27.86 point loss the week before. It was the first time the Dow Jones had finished ahead since the week ended July 4.

How long or how far the advance will carry is not sure, but some analysts think it might go to the 860 level on the Dow Jones before running into resistance.

Turnover for the week on the Big Board totalled 70,261,890 shares, compared with 41,036,990 shares the week before. The volume was the heaviest since the week ended May 2, when 72,666,410 shares were traded.

Of 1,720 issues traded on the Big Board during the week, 857 advanced, 759 declined, and 104 were unchanged. The previous week saw 1,340 declines, 238 advances, and 116 unchanged.

There were two new highs for the year and 1,096 new lows, compared with five new highs and 727 new lows the week earlier.

The five most-active stocks on the New York Exchange during the week were:

GM Leads Fight Against Steel Hike

WASHINGTON (WP) — General Motors Corp. Friday indicated that it would resist the steel price increase of 4.8 per cent announced Wednesday by U.S. Steel, but the U.S. government remained silent, awaiting a decision by President Nixon on whether to press for a rollback.

Meanwhile, Bethlehem Steel Corp., second largest producer, announced increases similar to Big Steel's, while other industries chimed in with price boosts in copper, aluminum and gypsum that promised further complications for an already worrisome inflation problem.

GM's surprise move was in the form of a telegram from its Fisher body division to U.S. Steel, instructing that processing and shipment of its steel orders be suspended "pending re-evaluation of the competitive situation with respect to steel prices."

The potential impact of GM's resistance was difficult to evaluate. The Ford Motor Co. later said that it was "studying the effects" of the price increase, while Chrysler Corp. said it was buying at a normal pace.

GM, which consumes about 10 per cent of total steel production, sent similar suspension orders on its purchases to other steel companies that raised prices.

Although Vice-President Agnew said this week that the Nixon administration was "not happy" with the price increase in steel, there was nothing to suggest Friday that the government was preparing background material or memoranda to support the notion of a rollback.

Informed officials indicated there was no change in the basic position frequently outlined by economic council chairman Paul W. McCracken that "jawboning" against price increases is neither morally defensible nor much real use in controlling inflation.

In view of Agnew's statement that any rollback decision would await President Nixon's return, however, it was thought likely that there would be some kind of White House statement later on.

Meanwhile, Rep. Henry Reuss (D—Wis.) charged that the administration had a blind spot in its refusal to consider some kind of wage-price guideposts. He introduced a bill that would direct the economic council to formulate wage-price guidelines.

So far, in addition to U.S. Steel and Bethlehem, Inland Steel, Kaiser Steel Corp. and the Armco Steel Corp. have raised steel prices. The price boosts on sheet steel widely used in the auto industry are about the same, but some of the increases on galvanized steel were less than U.S. Steel's hike.

Ottawa Aids Venezuelan Development

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal mines department will help Venezuela in its minerals development through provision of technical advice and general information, a mines department official said this week.

Venezuelan Mines Minister Hugo Perez la Salvia, who visited Canada earlier this summer, announced in Caracas that Canadian government and private enterprise interests will join in a fresh approach to the development of Venezuelan mineral resources, so far heavily concentrated on petroleum.

The mines department official said the principal problem to be overcome in Venezuela is diversification of its mining industry. While Venezuelan mineral output is much greater in value than Canada's, 95 per cent of it is in oil. Canada has a wide diversification, producing 60-odd minerals commercially.

One of the principal avenues of Venezuelan mineral development is in iron ore in the Orinoco region, which Candian officials said is much like Labrador and northern Quebec in its mineralization.

DISPLAYED MATERIALS

While Perez was in Canada, mines department officials gave him introductions to the heads of major Canadian mining exploration and development firms and any deals he made with them are commercial ventures, of which the government disclaims any knowledge.

The Caracas announcement said Canadian private interests along with the Canadian government would be involved in the development.

General Dynamics Reports Big Loss

NEW YORK (AP) — General Dynamics Corp. reported Friday a loss of $19,372,000 for the six months ended June 30.

The company said the loss was caused by the writeoff of excess costs of $59,044,000, after taxes, on long-term surface ship and submarine construction contracts.

Of this amount, $53,144,000 was charged against 1969 earnings and the remainder to a previously established reserve.

Pipeline Net Income Shows Drop

TORONTO (CP) — Net income of Trans Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. for the six months ended June 30 was $5,012,000, or 61 cents a share, about 28 per cent down from the $7,047,000 or 86 cents a share, earned in the comparable 1968 period.

The company said the decline was caused by the shut down of the northern Ontario section of the Trans-Canada pipeline this spring for testing and upgrading.

However it said the effect of the closure on the year's results will not be significant.

The plan to improve efficiency of the line, which brings natural gas from Alberta to eastern Canada, will cost about $8,000,000 this year and require total added facilities worth about $45,000,000.

REVENUE UP

The company said its operating revenue for the first six months of this year was nearly 15 per cent more than in the similar 1968 period, total sales for 1969 are estimated at slightly more than 600,000,000,000 cubic feet compared with 516,000,000,000 cubic feet last year.

It said it plans to submit an application for "just and reasonable rates" to the National Energy Board soon, since present return on gas sales is not sufficient to finance future expansion.

"The adverse effects of increasing costs, particularly that of borrowed funds, can no longer be offset by increased efficiency alone," J. W. Kerr, chairman, said in a statement.

Bell Canada

Bell Canada's earnings for the quarter ended June 30 were 76 cents a share, down four cents from the corresponding period last year, it was announced Friday.

The company's quarterly financial report stated net income for three months was $26.8 million, down from $27.9 million in the same period of 1968.

Operating revenues were $207.3 million, operating expenses $132.3 million.

Bell chairman Marcel Vincent announced in the report that, for the first time, the company intends to raise capital through short-term borrowing. Promissory notes of less than 365 days would be issued at current interest rates in denominations of not less than $100,000.

Gulf Oil

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. had net earnings of $22.5 million or 50 cents a share for the six months ended June 30 compared with $21.9 million or 48.5 cents a share in the similar 1968 period.

The company said earnings before taxes dropped $745,000 from last year, but a $1.4 million tax reduction on development drilling costs resulted in the over-all improvement.

Borden

Borden Inc., reported Friday an increase in sales and earnings in the three months ended June 30 over the corresponding period a year earlier.

The producer of dairy and food products and fertilizer earned $13.8 million or 49 cents a share, on sales of $460.5 million in the 1969 second quarter. This compares with $10.6 million or 38 cents a share, on sales of $437 million in the 1968 period.

Atlantic Richfield

Atlantic Richfield Co. has reported second-quarter net earnings of $52 million—a 14-per-cent increase over $45 million for the same period a year ago.

Share earnings for the quarter were 94 cents a share, against 83 cents for 1968. Sales and other revenues for the three-month period totalled $812.2 million—up 22 per cent from $664.4 million in 1968.

Domtar

Domtar Ltd. reported Friday net income of $6.4 million, or 43 cents a share, for the six months ended June 30, up from $5.1 million, or 33 cents a share, in the corresponding period last year.

Earnings for the second quarter of 1969 were $4.4 million, or 30 cents a share, up from $4.2 million, or 27 cents a share, in the same period in 1968. Newsprint, pulp, packaging and construction materials accounted for the higher earnings, the company statement said.

Dofasco

Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd. had net income of $22 million or $1.40 a share in the six months ended June 30 compared with $15.4 million or 96 cents a share in the same 1968 period.

For the three months ended June 30 net income was $10 million or 65 cents a share compared with $8 million or 61 cents a share a year earlier.

Seaway

Seaway Multi-Corp. Ltd. has reported a net profit of $1,7 million or 52 cents a share for the first six months of their fiscal year ended June 30.

Last year, under different management and the name Seaway Hotels Ltd., the company showed a loss of $248,206 for the similar period.

Canadian Industries

The half-year report of Canadian Industries Ltd. shows consolidated sales of $176.27 million, a 13-per-cent increase from the same period last year.

Net income of $8.997 million for the first six months was equivalent to 91 cents a share, compared with 71 cents a share for the first half of 1968, representing an increase of 27 per cent.

Hudson's Bay

Hudson's Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. had net earnings of $12.78 million or $4.24 a share for the six months ended June 30 compared with $9.46 million or $3.36 a share in the comparable 1968 period, an increase of 35 per cent.

The figure includes a $1 million gain on the sale of investments. Last year the company made a $210,000 gain from this source.

Approved Lenders

Canada Permanent Mortgage Corp. and Fidelity Trust Co. have been designated as approved lenders under the National Housing Act, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. announced Friday.

Canada Permanent Mortgage is a national loan company with head offices in Toronto. Fidelity Trust is a provincially-incorporated company in Manitoba with head offices in Winnipeg.

IBM Consolidates Processing Services

TORONTO (CP) — IBM Canada Ltd. said Friday it will begin charging for much of its systems engineering and computer program services and customer education courses, effective immediately for all new orders.

For customers with machines already installed or on order, the charges will become effective Feb. 1, 1970.

The company's parent in the United States had previously announced it will begin charging for certain systems and engineering activities. The U.S. justice department has filed an anti-trust action charging that IBM has limited computer programming development by quoting a single price for computer systems, programming and related support.

IBM Canada says it is also reducing the leasing and purchase prices of its data processing equipment by about three per cent, effective on equipment bought on or after July 25, 1969, or leased after Nov. 1, 1969.

The company said the data processing charges and equipment price decreases will probably balance out for the majority of cutomers.

The company also said it will consolidate its data processing services into four support centres to be established in Toronto, Ottawa, Vancouver and Montreal. Customers in other parts of Canada can "plug into" the centres through the company's communications network, IBM officials said.

Anti-Trust Suits Filed Against ITT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government, following up on earlier warnings, filed two separate anti-trust suits Friday to prevent International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. from acquiring Hartford Fire Insurance Co. and the Grinnell Corp.

The combined assets of the latter two firms, more than $2,000,000,000, would be the largest in history ever taken over by another corporation through mergers.

Attorney-General John Mitchell said both suits were filed in U.S. District Court in New Haven, Conn. They asked for injunctions to bar ITT, the 11th-largest industrial firm in the United States, from consummating the twin deals.

Also sought were preliminary injunctions to hold up the proposed acquisitions, protective orders to ensure the independent operation of the companies during expected lengthy litigation and permanent orders blocking the mergers.

The government contended the proposed combine would violate anti-trust law by encouraging illegal reciprocity, by discouraging actual and potential competition and by tending to spark other consolidations by other companies seeking to protect themselves from the impact of the new super-giant.

ITT, which had revenues last year of $4,100,000,000, multiplied its assets through a series of more than 35 mergers and acquisitions since 1960.

Morse Corp.

Robert Morse Corp. Ltd. Friday reported net operating income of $927,000 for the six months ended June 30, up from $249,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Net earnings per class A share were 87 cents, up from 9 cents, and for class B were 82 cents, up from zero.

The increase stemmed from record first-half sales of $60.4 million, up 27 per cent from the corresponding 1968 period.

Agreement Reached in Steel Strike

TORONTO (CP) — A tentative agreement was reached Friday night by officials of the Steel Co. of Canada and representatives of the 13,400 members of the United Steelworkers of America who had walked off their jobs about 23 hours earlier.

Terms of the new contract will be announced at a meeting of Local 1005 at Stelco's Hilton plant in Hamilton. No date has been set for union members to vote whether they will accept the company offer. The old contract had expired midnight Thursday night.

Picket lines had blocked the gates to the giant Hilton plant at 12:01 a.m. Friday and it was at 2:15 a.m. that a disappointed mediator Carl Goldenberg had emerged from a bargaining session in his hotel suite to announce that talks had broken off indefinitely.

The diminutive labor lawyer from Montreal was prepared to check out of the hotel when company and union negotiating teams asked him to stay on while details of a settlement were discussed.

Making his announcement in the evening, Mr. Goldenberg said the terms were fair to both sides and represented "a happy ending for almost four weeks of very hard effort."

FAR APART

The union's initial demands, presented to the company last February, were for a two-year contract with an increase in wages and fringe benefits of $1.40 an hour. The initial company offer, rejected by the workers, was for a three-year contract providing an increase of 80.6 cents an hour.

Average hourly wage at the Hilton plant under the old terms was about $3.12.

Stelco accounts for close to 40 per cent of Canada's basic steel production. The settlement will affect not only the company's Ontario operations in Hamilton, Toronto, Brantford and Gananoque, but also in Quebec and Alberta.

Its impact will also be felt in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., where a three-year contract between Algoma Steel Corp. and the 6,800 steelworkers of Local 2251 expired at the same time as the former Stelco pact.

Algoma steelworkers have yet to complete a conciliation period before they may legally go on strike although some union members staged demonstrations outside the company plant Friday morning.

A strike against both Stelco and Algoma, together with the continuing work stoppage at International Nickel Co. of Canada operations in Sudbury and Port Colbourne, would have put the Steelworkers' union in the position of having more than 36,000 members off the job at the same time.

About 18,000 Inco employees, members of Steelworkers' Locals 6200 and 6500, have not been at work since their contract expired July 10. Negotiations over wage demands have not produced a settlement.

Bond Market Stages Late-Week Rally

TORONTO (CP) — Moderate trading dominated the Canadian bond market this week with long-term Canadas up considerably and short-terms down slightly.

Corporates were mixed while provincial remained generally unchanged throughout the week.

The market seemed to be following the trend of the North American stock markets with declines the first part of the week but a joint rally toward the finish.

The two new government bonds issued Monday sold quickly and traded actively during the week.

An analyst from Burns Bros., and Denton, Toronto investors, said the Canadian bond market had little trouble absorbing the new $150,000,000 Government of Canada bond issue.

The issue which consists of $40,000,000 in 7¾ per cent bonds due Oct. 1, 1973, attracted a broad investor demand and both maturities are trading at premiums over the issue price.

BOTH INCREASED

The 7¾-per-cent Oct. 1, 1970, issue posted at $99.85 closed this week at $100.05 bid and $100.10 asked and the 8-per-cent Feb. 1, 1973, issue posted at $100 closed at $100.08 bid and $100.25 asked.

In the long-term Canadas, the 4½-per-cent Sept. 1, 1983, issue gained ½ to 74 bid and 75 asked and the 5½-per-cent Oct. 1, 1975, issue ½ to 88¼ bid and 89¼ asked.

In the short-term Canadas, the 7-per-cent Dec. 15, 1970, issue was off 10 to 99.10 bid and 99.40 asked and the 6¼-per-cent April 1, 1971, issue 5 to 97.60 bid and 97.80 asked.

In corporates, Systems Dimensions 5, 1989 was down 10 to 85 bid and 90 asked and Inland Natural Gas 6¼, 1983 was up 2½ to 78½ bid and 86½ asked.

Day-to-day money closed at 6¾ per cent down ¾ from Thursday. The apparent reason for the drop was a decrease in borrowing by investors.

Inglis Company Has New President

TORONTO (CP) — Conde G. Maiden, director of Whirlpool International Corp., has been elected president and chief executive officer of the John Inglis Co. Ltd. Maiden succeeds Harold Nuttall who is returning to the United Kingdom. The move coincides with the acquisition by Whirlpool Corp. of 33 per cent of outstanding Inglis common shares.

Ottawa Considers New Pension Rulings

OTTAWA (CP) — The revenue department announced Friday it will reconsider allowing expense deductions for company contributions to shareholder pension plans under severely-limited conditions.

Admitting major shareholders and their immediate families to employee pension plans in closely-held corporations, usually family-owned, become a widely-used practice after the government moved in 1964 to prevent dividend stripping.

Dividend stripping was a corporate way of paying major shareholders some of the profits of a corporation before the remaining profits were distributed as dividends to all shareholders.

The revenue department notified pension plan managers in 1968 that it would not register shareholder pension plans after Oct. 1 that year. It now is prepared to consider plans which were submitted for registration before that date but which were not then registered.

It now is also prepared to consider allowing payments to such plans as a legitimate business expense, though they were previously disallowed, when strict conditions are met.

Among other conditions, the payments must be made by July 31, 1970, and irrevocably vested in the pension plan so that no benefit can be had by the company or the shareholder except as a retirement pension.

Revenue Minister Jean-Pierre Cote said in a statement the department's policy has been reviewed after detailed study and numerous representations.

But the department will continue its policy of not allowing special payments to be deducted from income when they are not permanently vested in a pension plan or fund, and will accept no new applications for approval of such shareholders' plans, the satement said.

Lebanon Ripe For Upheaval

By RALPH JOSEPH

BEIRUT (CP)—Cabinet crisis in Lebanon come a penny a dozen, but the present one in which the country has been three months without a cabinet is obviously the gravest.

The talk here of the danger of "a change of regime" is probably unreal as long as the army remains loyal to the system.

The greatest danger seems to be that of an armed insurrection. The Lebanese fear that many of the Palestine guerrillas, armed infiltrators entering the country from Syria under the guise of commandos, are probably left wing insurgents directed against Lebanon.

The cabinet crisis itself piles on the fuel for a popular explosion. The crisis, like that in 1958, is rooted in the country's history.

Lebanon started out to be a Christian Arab state half a century ago. The French helped try to achieve this from the Christian majority areas around Mount Lebanon when the Ottoman empire disintegrated after the First World War. But when they added Tripoli, a Moslem majority territory, to the new state Lebanon ended up with a 50-50 Christian-Moslem population.

That was fuel enough for trouble. There was a Moslem move in 1936 for union with Syria. This erupted again in 1958 when Moslem rebels demanded union with the newly formed United Arab Republic (comprising Syria and Egypt). That crisis was solved by the landing of American troops.

Rebel Passions Calmed

When the former army commander-in-chief, Gen. Fuad Shehab, was elected as president in September of that year he did much to calm rebel passions by including rebels in his cabinet. Rebel leader Rashid Karami was his premier.

Over the years, the fictitious nature of the six-five ratio of Christian-Moslem representation in the Lebanese parliament has been steadily increasing, with the migration of Lebanese Christians (mainly to Latin America and the United States) and the rapid growth of the Moslem population. This probably prepares the ground for another showdown.

Also Lebanon is rather far to the right in its economic set-up, in sharp contrast to neighboring states. The fear today is that any internal conflict this time will be between extreme right and left.

Once again Syria seems set to play a part, not only because it has never quite abandoned its claim to Lebanese territory but also because the left wing Baath regime in Damascus will probably not miss an opportunity to export revolution if it can.

The Palestine guerrilla presence would make it easy for left wing insurgents to pose as commandos and win the sympathies of the population.

Certainly the attitude of the commandos themselves has not been helpful. Yasser Arafat, the Palestine guerrilla leader, in a meeting with Lebanese officials, made it abundantly clear that any attempt to force the commandos out would result in an army-commando conflict.

Delicate Balance Teeters

It is against this delicate balance that the present cabinet crisis is set. Lebanon's dozen-odd political parties are roughly divided between the right wing predominantly Christian Triple Alliance (which includes former president Camille Shamun and Phalangist leader Pierre Gemayel) and "the rest." No compromise cabinet is complete without the various groups being represented, since the omission of any brings thinly veiled threats of taking the problem into the streets.

There are also sharp antagonisms among the personalities in each group, making it almost impossible to bring any sort of workable cabinet together.

The fact that the government continues to function, with or without a cabinet, goes to the credit of Shehab who during his six-year term purged the administration of corrupt elements, reorganizing and enlarging it to make it the going concern it is today.

In the process he also introduced planning in the economy, to the satisfaction of the left-of-centre groups. Shehab was so admired for his reforms that in 1964 the Lebanese parliament, contrary to all its traditions, offered him the presidency for a second term running. Shehab turned it down as unconstitutional—he was against changing the constitution on principle.

Today there is another call to put Shehab in office after the term of the incumbent, Charles Helou, expires next year.

Police Warn Of Thefts At Thetis

Swim[illegible] in Thetis Lake Park should start paying close attention to where they leave their belongings, Colwood RCMP warn.

A rash of car break-ins in the last week or so have plagued the swimming spot's parking lot.

"Numerous" cars have been entered to steal cash and valuables, a policeman said.

"People leave their money and possessions in their cars while they swim, and don't bother to lock their doors and roll up their windows," he said.

"It's a serious mistake. There have been quite a few thefts there recently."

A plainclothes officer caught several of the thieves in the act, but cars are still being entered.

DDT Harmless: Biochemist

TORONTO (CP) — An American biochemist said Friday his tests on DDT have convinced him the pesticide is harmless to man.

Dr. Weyland Hayes, chairman of the biochemistry department at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., made the statement in a report to a joint industry-government advisory board to the Ontario department of health.

Police Seek Connection In Slayings

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — Police are seeking to determine whether a Canadian-born motorcycle enthusiast charged with killing a co-ed whose body was found a week ago is linked with six other unsolved slayings of young women in southeastern Michigan.

John N. Collins, a muscular six-footer, was held today without bail after being charged Friday with strangling Karen Sue Beineman, 18, an Eastern Michigan University freshman last seen alive July 23 as she got on a motorcycle with a young man after leaving a wig shop.

Police said Collins, an Eastern Michigan senior in education who said he planned to teach elementary school, was being investigated in the six other slayings in the Ann Arbor-Ypsilanti area in the last two years, but as yet they could not connect him to them.

Collins was born in Windsor, Ont., but moved to Michigan when he was a year old.

A co-ed who lived near Collins said:

"He loved motorcycles. He's even got pictures pinned on his wall of him sitting on different motorcycles. I think he liked riding better than he liked girls."

Return to Grace

PARIS (AP) — President Francois Duvalier of Haiti has named his son-in-law, a man once sentenced to death for having plotted against Duvalier's life, as ambassador to France. The new ambassador, Col. Max Dominique, presented his credentials Friday to President Georges Pompidou in a ceremony at the Elysee Palace.

Kennedy Inquiry Sought At District Court Level

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — His plea for an inquest rejected in one court, District Attorney Edmund Dinis has turned to another to seek a full-scale inquiry into Senator Edward M. Kennedy's accident in which a Washington, D.C., secretary was killed.

Dinis first asked Chief Justice G. Joseph Tauro of the Massacusetts Superior Court to assign a judge for an inquest, but Tauro turned down the application, saying the power to conduct inquests rests with district courts.

Dinis then sent letters Friday to Chief Judge Kenneth L. Nash of the Massachusetts District Court system and to Judge James A. Boyle of the Dukes County District Court in Edgartown.

Kennedy appeared in the Edgartown court July 26 and pleaded guilty to a charge of leaving the scene of an accident, which occurred when a car he was driving plunged off a narrow bridge into a tidal pond on Chappaquiddick Island. Judge Boyle presided and imposed the minimum sentence, two months in jail, and then suspended it for a year on probation.

In Boston Friday night, en route to Hyannis Port, Kennedy was asked by a reporter if he thought the attempts by Dinis to get an inquest "smacked of an attempt to get publicity."

Kennedy replied:

"No, I wouldn't categorize that of Mr. Dinis. I think he has a responsibility. I respect him for fulfilling his responsibilities. I'm just hopeful we can get back to work and get back to the Senate."

In Washington earlier, Kennedy said he would "co-operate in any way" possible, but said he did not understand the purpose of holding an inquest.

Dinis is a Democrat, but is not regarded as a member of the Kennedy faction in the party.

In Lucerne County, Pa., District Attorney Blyth Evans said Dinis called him Friday about the possible exhumation of the body of the victim, Mary Jo Kopechne, 28, who is buried in Plymouth, Pa.

SHEDS BOMBED NEAR DUBLIN

DUBLIN (Reuters) — Two bomb explosions minutes apart wrecked milking sheds worth £30,000 (about $78,000) today on a dairy farm north of Dublin.

Police threw a cordon around County Meath after the explosions, presumed part of an extremist campaign against ownership of farm lands by foreign nationals.

Bill WALKER

It's the summer of 1965.

It's not that much different from any other summer over the past 15 years.

You are between seasons in your particular avocation. You have an off-season job, as usual, and that pays the bills. You are playing a little golf, which means as much as you can. And you are doing some thinking.

A lot of thinking.

You are Bill Shvetz, professional hockey player, employed by the Victoria Maple Leafs of the Western Hockey League. You are now 35 years of age and the bloom has long since left the rose.

Your future? What about your future? The thought strikes a responsive chord as you bend over a putt on the fifth green, and a decision has its birth as you blow the six-footer.

You recall some other summers when you made Calgary home. You remember working with machinery, repairing and servicing small motors, and as a stock man, and you shiver a bit as you think that next year you will be 36.

Hockey soon will be a thing of the past, a past that has been good to you, and one in which you have been a credit to the game.

An idea formulates and grows upon you through that next hockey season and, by spring, you have finalized that plan.

As a start, you will apply at Colwood for a job on the greens staff.

You get the job, and then the real work begins.

For here is a challenge that, for you, only matches the one you had in 1950 when you left Bellevue, Alta., for North Bay and the Chicago Black Hawks training camp.

You were all of 19 years of age then, and had never been further than Moose Jaw in your whole life.

And you met that one squarely, with head up, and firm intent, just as many hockey players were to remember you in the intervening years.

Then comes the tough part — back to school and the study needed to pursue your goal.

And so you buckle down to the books that fall of 1966 and take a correspondence course from Washington State College on Turf Management and The Natures and Properties of Soil.

You study hard for four months, and play just as hard for the Leafs as you are proud of a championship recently won.

Next spring you apply and are accepted as a gardener with the City Parks Department. During that summer you take more courses, some of which are compulsory part of a lecture series, and you absorb that knowledge.

BILL SHVETZ

Suddenly it is fall again, and not only has the name of the team changed to Phoenix Roadrunners, but for you, Bill Shvetz, so has the name of the game.

It is no rap against you, but slowly the spark has died, little by little, and you are finding it increasingly tough to "get up" for a game.

Twenty-six games later, your hockey career spanning 18 years as a professional and four years as an amateur has come to an end voluntarily.

You recall a few highlights as you persevere in your task, while applying for a position at Gorge Vale.

Such as that first long train ride, four years as a defenceman, then 10 years as a left winger before returning to the hitting post.

And you hit a few people in your time. For example the league high of 161 penalty minutes with Montreal Royals in 1954-55 is your personal statistic in the NHL record book. Leaf fans will best recall your 184 minutes in 1964-65.

There were others who could hit too, the slight difference being that you never backed up doing it.

You remember well three league championships, your 25-goal season with Calgary in 1956. But what always sticks in your craw is that not once did you ever get a hat trick.

You think, too, that with expansion, there is a better chance for the young fellow breaking in, and that given that same opportunity you could have made it big. And you observe that the young player of today appears to lack aggressiveness. Hockey to him is only a means to an end.

And you recall the year out from hockey necessitated by a disc infusion in your back. But it doesn't trouble you at all now, even though the adhesions caused discomforture for a time.

You remember all this, but most important now is that you no longer are Bill Shvetz, No. 6, defence, but rather, Bill Shvetz, gardener (1).

And your life ahead is one of mowers, equipment, drainage, soil conditions, moisture and fertilizers.

And you are told, and you get to believe it, that every type of grass has its own personal character, and to be a success you must get to know them all better.

But now its May, 1969, and Gorge Vale needs a greenskeeper, a head greenskeeper. You application is on file. You are accepted.

All's Well With McLain As Tigers Claw Chisox 8-0

By The Associated Press

Dick Williams took $500 out of Carl Yastrzemski's pocket. Billy Martin settled for the shirt off Earl Weaver's back.

Williams, Boston manager, benched Yastrzemski for loafing on the basepaths during the Red Sox' 4-3 loss to Oakland Athletics Friday night and then fined the American League's 1968 batting champion $500.

Minnesota manager Martin caught two Baltimore pitchers with tattered shirtsleeves, evening an old score with Orioles' pilot Weaver, as the Twins won a 10-inning battle of AL division leaders 4-3.

Detroit's Denny McLain, in a hospital with bronchitis two days ago, bounced back to become the first 16-game winner in the major leagues as the Tigers mauled Chicago White Sox 8-0.

New York Yankees stopped Seattle Pilots 4-2 on a combined two-hitter by rookie Bill Burbach and veteran Ken Johnson, Washington Senators scored three runs in the ninth inning for a 5-3 victory over California Angels and Kansas City Royals blanked Cleveland Indians 6-0, behind rookie pitcher Dick Drago's five-hitter.

The Red Sox scored two first-inning runs for Jim Lonborg at Oakland, but lost a chance for more when Yastrzemski was thrown out at the plate on George Scott's bases-loaded roller, which could have gone for an infield hit.

There Was Time Out for Tailoring

Williams pulled Yastrzemski in the second inning and the Athletics finally caught up with Lonborg in a three-run ninth inning rally, led by Dick Green's tie-breaking single.

"Yastrzemski was taken out for not hustling, and he was fined," Williams said after the game. "So far as I'm concerned, the incident is closed. He will play tomorrow."

Martin twice stopped the Minnesota-Baltimore game, won by the Twins on Leo Cardenas' triple and Rod Carew's infield single in the 10th inning, to complain that Orioles' relievers Marcelino Lopez and Eddie Watt were wearing sweatshirts with holes in the sleeves, contrary to the league rules.

Plate umpire Bill Haller held up the game in the fourth inning while Lopez' sleeves were cut down. Watt, given a similar edict in the eighth, chose to change his shirt.

"Most of our players thought that was pretty small," Weaver said.

The Twins' skipper claimed Weaver did the same thing during an earlier series.

The top of the National League's Western Division is getting more crowded than a subway during the rush hour. But the fifth-place Houston Astros are still climbing aboard.

The Astros won their sixth consecutive game Friday night, whipping Montreal Expos 5-3 on a pair of two-run homers by Curt Blefary and a bases-empty shot by Jimmy Wynn. The victory, combined with Atlanta's 5-4 loss at New York Mets, left the Astros a mere 3½ games from the top.

CONCENTRATION was thing at Oak Bay greens Friday for these contestants in singles event of annual Greater Victoria Lawn Bowling Association holiday tournament. Reaching today's final for singles title were Oak Bay's John Green, who ousted Tom McKeachie in one semi-final, and Burnside's Alex Donald, who defeated Jimmy McGregor. Gaining triples final were Nanaimo trio skipped by Tommy Dixon and Andy Dickie's Burnside threesome. Finals in all events were being played today.

Vollmer Running Away From Alberta's Field

CALGARY (CP) — Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver took a five-stroke lead in the second round of the Alberta open golf championship Friday with a one-under-par 70 for a 36-hole total of 136.

But the defending champion blamed putting difficulties as one reason for not extending his lead to a greater margin in the $5,000 tournament.

Vollmer had a two-under-par 33 after the first nine holes Friday, then took a one-over-par 37 when he scored a seven on the par-five 18th hole on the back nine. Combined with his 33-33—66 Thursday he was six under par in a bid to capture the $1,200 first place prize money.

Tied for second were Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., and Bob Cox of Vancouver with 36-hole totals of 141.

Panasiuk shot a three-under-68—Friday's best round—on nines of 34-34 to go with an opening 73 while Cox matched Vollmer's 70 after an opening 71 over the 6,550-yard Earl Grey club course.

Alvie Thompson of Toronto was at 143 after matching par in the second round.

Tied at 144 were Victoria professional Vaughan Trapp, who came back with a 70, Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg who has turned in two 72s, Calgary pro Neil Green with 73-71, and Don Graham of Medicine Hat, Alta., who opened with a 71 and came back with a 73. Graham is the low amateur.

Another Victoria golfer, Bill Wakeham came in with a 74. Tagged onto his first-round 76, it gave Wakeham a 150 total—three strokes better than the cutoff figure of 153.

Two other Victorians missed the cut. Pro Dick Silverberg of Glen Meadows missed after shooting 79-83—162, as did Colwood amateur Gene Williams, 80-79—159.

Amateur Jack Wilkes, who fired a brilliant 69 Thursday, blew to an 82 for a 151 total but still managed to make the cut.

The winner qualifies for the Canadian golf tour final in Quebec City later this year. Other qualifiers for the final will be decided on points gathered on the tour.

Royal and Ancient Decides Old Putting System Is Best

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's Royal and Ancient Golf Club has revoked the continuous-putting rule and the provision that a ball lying on the green may be lifted only before the first putt.

The rules were introduced last year at the suggestion of the United States Professional Golfers Association in an attempt to speed up play.

The British club considered the new rules had not been as effective as hoped.

There had been widespread objections from professionals to the new rules on the grounds that varying weather conditions, particularly morning dew, unfairly penalized the early starters.

The club announced Thursday that it would re-introduce the 1964 rules from Jan. 1 next year, enabling golfers to return to the familiar drill of marking the ball and cleaning or wiping it after each putt if they wish.

Joe Survives Boos To Trip All-Stars

CHICAGO (AP) — Joe Namath was a thousand boos from Broadway, but he got enough passes out of his system to lead New York Jets of the American Football League to a 26-24 football win over the U.S. College All-Stars Friday night.

Namath made his first big public appearance of the season, only 10 days after reporting to training camp. The crowd of 74,208 was critical.

The brittle-legged hero of the Jets' Super Bowl upset of the National Football League's Baltimore Colts ignored the booing.

None of his passes went for a touchdown, but they set up field goals of 43, 42, 18 and 16 yards by Jim Turner, and scoring runs of three and 35 yards by Matt Snell.

The cheers of this National Football League city crowd went mainly for the all-stars' quarterback Greg Cook of Cincinnati, runners Altie Taylor of Utah State and Jerry Levias of Southern Methodist.

They combined to nearly upset the Jets in the last half, when the collegians scored all their points.

Brothers to Call Signals for Lions

By The Canadian Press

Four of the five Western Football Conference teams see action this weekend, two of them looking for a change in fortunes.

Saskatchewan Roughriders will seek to change their record of three losses in four pre-season exhibition games when they meet B.C. Lions in Regina. The game, regular season opener for Saskatchewan, will be televised on the CTV western network.

The B.C. team still is hurting from a 32-7 loss to Calgary Stampeders in their season opener, including a leg injury to rookie halfback Jim Nicholson.

Lions coach Jim Champion will call on Paul Brothers for quarterback duties and hopes Brothers will receive more back-up help than he did against Calgary.

Rains Delay Tennis Meet

TORONTO — Heavy rains Friday washed out men's and women's singles matches in the Canadian close tennis championships, forcing re-scheduling of quarter-finals for today.

In the featured men's contest, top-seeded Mike Belkin was to meet Tony Bardsley. Other matches sent John Sharpe against David Brown, Keith Carpenter against Brian Flood and Peter Burwash against Don Fontana.

Hydro Pilot Bails Out As Boat Catches Fire

SEATTLE (AP) — Bill McCormick bailed out into Lake Washington Friday as his unlimited hydroplane caught fire while crossing the finish line at the end of a two-lap speed trial.

The fire apparently started when the Phoenix boat Miss Atlas threw a rod. McCormick escaped injury and the boat's pit crew indicated another engine would be installed before Sunday's Seafair Race here.

Miss Atlas clocked 113.684 m.p.h. in the run, good for third-place money of $300.

Taking the $1,500 first prize was Miss Budweiser of Tampa, Fla., with a lap of 117.647 m.p.h. Second place money of $700 went to Notre Dame of Seattle and Detroit, with 117.137.

Ten of the unlimited hydros to race Sunday were qualified.

Gilmours Reach Industrial Final

Gilmours are "in" but Kents and Bapcos have to go another lap to decide the Industrial Softball League's final playoff picture.

Gilmours defeated AB Drywall 15-5 to sweep their best-of-three semi-final in two straight. League champion Kents deadlocked the second series 1-1 by defeating Bapcos 9-4.

Kents and Bapcos meet in the deciding game Monday at Macdonald Park, starting at 6:30 p.m.

WORLD RECORD DRAGSTER . . . . . . AT VAN ISLE SUNDAY

Big Power in One Dragster

There'll be something new at Van Isle Dragways Sunday when approximately 650 horsepower will be turned loose in the chassis of one machine.

All that fuel-gulping power belongs to Burnaby driver Jim Grant and it's all wrapped up in the Canadian II, which is scheduled to become the first world drag-racing record-holder to appear at the Cobble Hill strip.

Basically, the Canadian II is a highly modified 1964 Valiant, which is strictly used for the standing-start, quarter-mile acceleration test. Up front is an injected 426-cubic-inch hemispherical Chrysler powerplant.

The car goes through the quarter-mile consistently in the nine-second bracket with speeds of over 145 miles per hour.

Grant set his world class record (for B-altereds) at Vancouver's Mission Raceways last year, when he covered the distance in 9.48 seconds.

Back at Mission in July 12 and 13 of this year, Grant lowered the speed mark with a super-swift 9.29 seconds at 147.21 m.p.h.

Grant will run a best-of-three match race with Nanaimo's Doug Murray. Murray pilots a 426-cubic-inch hemi-powered 1949 Anglia and will be ridding his "bohemian" of any extra frills in an attempt to get a better weight-to-power ratio.

Even then he will receive a handicap start.

A full program of eliminations will take place on the same program, which starts with time trials at 10 a.m.

WOULD YOU MIND STANDING AT THE OTHER SIDE OF THE HOLE, TOM?
NOT AT ALL, GARY! BUT WHY?
BY HAVING YOU STAND ON THE LEFT SIDE OF THE HOLE, I HAVE A DEFINITE MARK TO AIM AT, WHICH IS FAR BETTER THAN JUST TELLING MYSELF TO AIM A FOOT TO THE LEFT!
ALWAYS GET YOUR CADDIE, OR WHOEVER IS HOLDING THE FLAG, TO STAND ON THE SIDE YOU WANT TO PUTT ON. THIS WILL BE A GREAT HELP TO YOU!

OPTIMISTS, NANAIMO ON COLLISION COURSE

VANCOUVER—A group of Victorians and a "part-time" Victorian kept Vancouver Island's two entries alive in the provincial Connie Mack baseball championships Friday.

But the end was in sight for one today as the once-beaten Victoria Optimists and Nanaimo headed for a meeting in the losers' bracket of the double-knockout competition.

Victoria kept its hopes going Friday as the once-beaten club blanked Ridge Meadows Alouettes 2-0. Nanaimo, also beaten earlier, rebounded for a 5-0 shutout over New Westminster as Lonnie Miles, who plays junior hockey with Victoria Cougars, tossed a sparkling three-hitter for the Island team.

Kevin McLean also tossed a sharp, three-hit performance for Optimists. The Victoria club broke a scoreless duel with a two-run splurge in the final inning as Ralph Anderson doubled and Bill Wheeler followed with a lusty triple.

Nationals Roll Into B.C. Final

The National League all-stars will carry the Victoria district banner to the B.C. Little League baseball tournament which gets under way Sunday at Whalley.

Nationals punched their ticket Friday after defeating Hampton's representatives 8-1 in the deciding game of the district playdowns.

Nationals will play West Vancouver Jaycees in the first round of the seven-team, double-knockout provincial final. Winners of the B.C. tournament will advance to the Canadian finals scheduled to be held in Hampton Park later this month.

BEATEN ONCE

The district champions suffered only one loss in the area finals at Hampton Park—an 8-1 setback to Lake Hill.

Nick Christianson, shelled from the mound in their only defeat, gained some measure of revenge Friday by going the distance against Hampton. He gave up four hits, but was tough in the clutch with a seven strikeout performance.

Two of the hits off Christianson, by David Blower and Dale Marshall, provided Hampton with its only run and a first-inning 1-0 lead.

Nationals tied it in the fourth, pushed across the winning run in the fifth, and clinched the district title with a six-run splurge in the final frame.

Kevin Gill and Dave Newsome collected the winners' only hits but Nationals made the most of walks and errors.

Brazil Leads British Team In Davis Cup

From AP Reports

Thomas Koch and Jose Edison Mandarino sent Brazil into a 2-1 lead over Britain at Wimbledon, England, Friday in the inter-zone semi-finals of Davis Cup tennis competition.

They defeated Mark Cox and Peter Curtis, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, in the doubles, halted for an hour by rain.

Brazil now needs to win one of today's two remaining singles to move into the inter-zone final against either Romania or India, who are playing at Bucharest.

Romania grabbed a 2-0 lead Friday as Ion Tiriac defeated Premkit Lall, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2, in the opening singles and Ilie Nastase conquered Jaideep Mukerjea, 6-2, 6-4, 4-6, 4-6, 6-1.

The doubles was scheduled today with the reverse singles on Sunday.

Layritz Shades Parksville Crew

Layritz cleared the first hurdle in the Vancouver Island Pony League baseball tournament, but Friday's 8-6 triumph over Parksville at Carnarvon Park could hardly rate as a classic effort.

Playoff tenseness was obvious as each club committed seven errors.

Victory sent Layritz against host Carnarvon this afternoon. Losers go against Parksville this evening (6 p.m.) in the double-knockout competition between the three clubs. The tournament winds up Sunday with a game at 2 p.m. and, if needed, at 6.

Jeff Price led off with a triple in the seventh inning to set up Layritz' winning run. Don Cambridge added the insurance run with the help of two errors and a stolen base.

Burrell Helps B.C.'s Victory

B.C. defeated Alberta 12½-7¾ to win the annual event for the third time in five years.

Kliffer led scoring over 54 holes with a 226 total while Burrell scored 228. Larry Kemshead of Red Deer was Alberta's best with 227.

Greene Stands for Go —But Slowly, He Says

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP)—Golfer Bert Greene is not one to count his birdies prematurely.

"I'm not going to think about winning until I have a two-stroke lead going into the final hole in the final round," Greene said Friday after taking a one-stroke lead into today's third round of the $250,000 Westchester Golf Classic.

Greene, looking for his first professional tour victory, said his four birdie putts from four to 25 feet encouraged him to a 69 Friday for a 36-hole total of 136, eight under par for the 6,677-yard, par-72 course.

One stroke back and in contention for the $50,000 first prize were first-round leader Tommy Bolt, who scored 71; Tommy Aaron, Canadian Open winner, 67; Don Bies and Paul Harney, both of whom scored 69s.

Two shots behind Greene are Dan Sikes, 67, and 1967 Masters champion Gay Brewer, who came in with 65, the low round of the day.

Bert Yancey, 68; Australian Bruce Devlin, 72; and Tom Weiskopf, 69, were next at 139.

Seventy-one players in the field of 156 scored 145 or better and qualified for the final two rounds. Jack Nicklaus carded 73 for 144, even par, and Arnold Palmer just made it with 74 for 145.

Familiar Act Pacing Bates

Harvey Stevenson's bat warmed up a few weeks ago. Now Bob Holness has caught on, and it's like old times in the Major Men's Softball League.

A potent one-two batting combination in the league two seasons ago, Stevenson and Holness thumped away in fine style Friday to carry leading Bate Construction to a 5-4 victory over Langford Drywall at Central Park.

Batting third, shortstop Holness banged out two singles and a double, scored once and drove in another run. Stevenson, batting fourth, went two-for-three and also scored once and drove in another run.

Gary Aiken and Doug Gregory also collected two hits apiece to help pitcher Barry Jackson to mark up his 10th pitching triumph of the season.

Wade Burns' two-run homer proved to be Langford's big blow as the victory virtually settled all positions in the league standing.

Boxing Injury Proves Fatal

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters) — Welterweight boxer Mario Paladino died Thursday from head injuries received in the final minute of a 10-round bout against Omar Gottifredi here Wednesday night.

The 25-year-old boxer banged his head violently on the canvas after being floored with a left uppercut.

Paladino never recovered consciousness.

He had lost only once in a promising career.

Money Seen Prime Topic at Coming Conference of Premiers

QUEEBC (CP)—That perennial topic, money, is expected to take up a good deal of time at the 10th conference of Canadian premiers that starts Monday.

And while it may not have the drama of a federal-provincial confrontation, the private two-day conference may reach some concrete results in such fields as urban renewal and pollution.

Urban renewal and pollution are main agenda topics, but a Quebec government source said the conference may be a sequel to the two-level Ottawa talks in June.

At that time, general agreement was reached that the provinces should be allowed to levy indirect taxes. And it was agreed Ottawa should undertake a shared-cost program with the provinces only if, in some undefined way, a favorable national consensus is achieved.

Prime Minister Trudeau said the federal government was ready to negotiate a rearrangement of taxing and spending powers on the basis of any reasonable formula the provinces could put forward.

It is not unlikely, then, that the nine premiers—only Newfoundland's Joseph Smallwood is not expected—will try to establish a joint position preparation for the next federal-provincial meeting in December.

Premier W. C. Bennett of British Columbia, in a pre-conference statement, said he will attend bursting with goodwill and with determination to forge a link in Canadian unity.

"This unity should be assured, not by squabbling in the federal House, but by unity among provincial premiers."

Ontario's Premier John Robarts, not expecting "any issues this year about which the provinces feel that strongly," feels one result could be a formal agreement for interprovincial co-operation on pollution problems.

Studies on the subject were begun by the provinces following last year's July conference in Waskesiu, Sask.

Pollution and urban renewal recognized no political boundaries and needed discussion on a cross-Canada basis.

Other topics are a review of inter-provincial co-operation in education, health, culture, transportation, consumer and investor protection and mineral resources.

Although not on the agenda—and in view of recent federal legislation—Indian affairs is expected to be of major interest. Ottawa would turn over all responsibility for Indians to the provinces.

There'll be newcomers to watch at this conference: Just-elected Ed Schreyer of Manitoba, Quebec's Jean-Jacques Bertrand and Harry Strom of Alberta.

Mr. Schreyer's triumph over the incumbent Conservatives has heightened national interest in British Columbia's Aug. 27 election in which Mr. Bennett's Social Credit government, in office since 1952, faces a strong NDP challenge.

The other premiers attending will be Alex Campbell of P.E.I., G.I. (Ike) Smith of Nova Scotia and Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick.

Ottawa is sending three observers—Edgar Gallant and Frank Carter of the privy council office and Tom Shoyama, secretary of the finance department's committee on economic and fiscal problems.

Montreal Tourism Rise Follows Slump in '68

MONTREAL (CP) — With a strong boost from Montreal's baseball Expos and a fresher Man and His World exhibition, the city's tourist and convention business is pulling itself out of a dismal 1968 slump.

Cab drivers, hotel owners and tourist bureau managers agree that 1969 is no bonanza year for the tourist trade. But the influx of American visitors brings back memories of the hustling Expo 67 summer.

"The Americans flocked to Montreal in 1967," said one cabbie, "because they were very interested in seeing the World's Fair.

"But in 1968, they decided to go somewhere else. This year they've come back."

They're flocking to Jarry Park, home park of the Montreal Expos of the National League.

The United States vacationers also are drawn to Man and His World, where new and improved pavilions and attractions have been set up in the second summer of the continuing exhibition.

TOURISTS 'WAY UP'

A fair spokesman said that occasional checks of car licences at Victoria Autopark shows the number of American tourists to be "way up" over the same period last year.

More American currency also has been circulated on the fair site.

Attendance at this year's version of the exhibition, which will run two months less than in 1968, is 9,265,000 for 1½ months. Total attendance for the five-month period last year was 12,500,000.

Frank Bloodsworth, general manager of the Montreal Convention and Visitors Bureau, said the city was "back in the big league" in conventions.

"Between January and June, 1969, there were 105 conventions in Montreal compared with 84 for the same period last year," he said.

Ten of these conventions brought in an average of 2,800 delegates each.

Hotels also are feeling the press of tourists.

A spokesman for the Queen Elizabeth Hotel said June "was the best month we've had since Expo 67."

PROSPECTS BRIGHT

It was operating at between 90 and 95 per cent capacity, and the prospects for August seemed equally bright.

Paul Jolicoeur, president of the Montreal Hotel Association, said the city is popular with "impulse tourists"—those living about 200 miles away who suddenly decide to make a weekend trip.

More than 300 groups—each comprising a family of four or five—turn up daily at two offices of the Montreal Tourist Bureau, according to bureau Director Lucien Bergeron.

"They ask questions about hotel and motel accommodations, camping facilities, restaurants, nightclubs and guided tours.

"It seems as if the tourist dollar is being spread around."

Canada's Osaka Pavilion Features Discovery Theme

TORONTO (UPI) — Soon after the visitor enters the Canadian pavilion at Expo '70 in Osaka, Japan, which opens March 15, he will be confronted by a sign flashing the word "discovery."

The word, the pavilion's theme, will be spelled out in six languages.

As he tours the six exhibition areas of the $11.2 million pavilion, the visitor won't have to do much more reading — just seeing, absorbing and discovering — Canada in its many dimensions, as displayed by the latest of multi-media techniques.

This was the way Patrick Reid, the pavilion's commissioner general, described it Monday on the eve of his departure for Japan. Reid, Deputy Commissioner Jean Octeau and a number of other pavilion officials held a last major Canadian press conference on the pavilion at the Royal York Hotel here.

In front of a six-foot square model of the pavilion, which will cover 103,000 square feet at the Osaka site, Reid explained that the pavilion's purpose was to show that "Canada has a sophistication all of its own — an identity which we are still trying to fully discover."

Reid, 44, said Canada was especially trying to reach the Japanese young and establish in their minds this nation's "Pacific posture."

Reid offered the first public hearing of the pavilion's theme song — an unnamed rock-and-roll number, which he said would attract the younger people to the Canadian site.

But the main Canadian message will be conveyed on an array of far-out media that included spinning drums, slatted panels, huge glass transparencies, films on a triangular 48-by-26-foot screen, and slides.

Most impressive however, will be the exterior of the pavilion.

The four main exterior surfaces slope at 45-degree angles to produce the over all effect of a truncated pyramid. The slopes, covered with mirror slats, will suggest "arctic ice, the mass of mountains, vast prairie sky and the glitter of Canadian waters."

The interior courtyard, which shows a Japanese influence in its design, will feature five 50-foot "spinners," or multi-colored dish-like shapes on poles, which will reflect the sun, stars and moon with mirrors.

The actual exhibit areas are listed as: entry and orientation; challenge of the land; land bridging; urban environment; social environment; and heritage and discovery.

Pollution Checked in Fish Deaths

GOLDEN MEADOW, La. (AP) — Pollution experts studied water samples today for clues to the cause of a huge fish kill over a wide area of the Gulf of Mexico.

"In some places dead fish are so thick it's like a carpet floating on water," said Robert Dennie of the state wild life and fisheries commission. "The tides left them in a heavy layer all around."

Clark Hoffpauer, commission director, estimated Friday that 100,000,000 to 200,000,000 fish died in a 30-square-mile area around Timbalier Island and Wine Island Pass, about 150 miles southwest of New Oreleans.

Water samples were collected for lab tests to determine exactly what killed the fish, identified mainly as menhaden.

Students Pardoned

WARSAW (AP) — All but three of about 15 Warsaw students and lecturers, convicted of organizing anti-state campus demonstrations last year, have been freed under an amnesty marking the 25th anniversary of the Communist regime, an informed source said Friday.

TUDOR PUB

Haven for Thirsty

BRADFORD, Ont. (CP) — The Tudor-style inn on Highway 11 between Toronto and the northern lakes district has been a welcome stop to travellers for years, but there's a catch.

The pub, called the Village Inn, is in Bradford, Ont., even though it looks unquestionable British.

Built in the 1930s the pub was an "oasis in the desert" for cottagers heading to the Muskoka lake district from Toronto, says barmaid Gwen Demchuck.

"It was and is the only place a person can buy a beer between Toronto and Barrie," recalls Barney Campbell, 71, whose cousin helped hew the wood beams and planks and apply the stucco.

"Most of those fellows is gone now," says Barney who remembers the first owner, Ken Morse, who bought the Chinese restaurant in the 1930s and styled it Tudor both inside and out.

The sturdy Tudor inn at the crossroads of highways 88 and 11 is still a haven to the parched traveller caught in a weekend traffic jam which sometimes extends from Toronto to Barrie, 55 miles north.

BCHIS Needs Speeding Up

By JIM HUME

In October hospital officials from across British Columbia will meet in Vancouver to discuss the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service—What? Why? How?

Even this far away those respected hospital experts can be told that the half-day they plan to devote to the topic will not be enough.

The BCHIS is that wondrous arm of the provincial government in charge of hospital affairs. It does things, but slowly.

Hume

It has been said that the BCHIS makes the slow-grinding mills of God look like a dragster. And it isn't a bad description.

Last Wednesday the Regional District Hospital Board bubbled with enthusiasm as it was reported that 620 extended-care beds had now all been approved by the BCHIS and that organization's fearless leader, Health Minister Ralph Loffmark.

Board directors were whistling past the graveyard—and they knew it.

It is now more than a year since Dr. Harvey Agnew took the covers off his master-plan to end hospital problems from Sooke to the Gulf Islands. And it is eight months since the people went to the polls to approve more than $9 million in hospital construction.

That the regional district and its hospitals' advisory board have moved with decisive speed in allocating the extended-care beds and selecting a Central Saanich hospital site, is not in doubt.

But the fact remains that to date not a single new hospital bed had been brought into action, not even at Jubilee where 170 beds stand empty, cheek by jowl with existing crowded wards.

Some 50 mentally-ill patients in the Jubilee Bay Pavilian can be transferred to the Eric Martin Mental Institute once that gleaming monument opens its doors. That move will immediately provide Jubilee with 50 extra beds for sub-acute patients.

When will that be? Some time this year, hopefully, but precisely when nobody knows.

When will the first new hospital beds be built?

Not likely before next year.

At St. Joseph's, plans are moving ahead to construct 50 new sub-acute beds for $410,000. That sounds like a relatively simple program, but nothing can be simple when the BCHIS enters the picture.

The betting here is that the 50-bed prefabricated extension will not be available to the public this year.

Down at the Gorge Road Hospital the BCHIS is still haggling over sketch plans for 150 extended-care beds. They've been haggling for weeks. Once they get those sketch plans sorted around the call for working drawings goes out—and then the haggle starts all over again before a call for tenders goes out.

Even if BCHIS acts with uncustomary dispatch it will be late October of early November before tenders can be called.

Add a month for contractors to prepare bids and, presto, there's the good old Christmas-New Year system which, says the Amalgamated Construction Association, is not really the best time of the year to plan the start of a major project.

The British Columbia Hospital Insurance Service—What? Why? How?

Three good questions.

$300 Wardrobe Saves Ghetto Scholarship

NEW YORK (AP) — Gordon Right, a 13-year-old Harlem student, won a $3,370 scholarship to exclusive Gorton School and his world seemed bright.

Then he learned of the extensive wardrobe the Massachusetts prep school required and feared he would have to forfeit his chance. His family is on welfare.

But a group of welfare workers have pooled their resources and promised that Gordon will have the full wardrobe down to seven dozen name tags.

"I never heard of Gorton until a few months ago, then I was spending days preparing for the tests, then I won it, and then comes the clothes list," Gordon said. "I figured I'd lose it all."

"It was alarming," Dora White, Gordon's cousin and guardian, said Friday. "Here he had this opportunity and we didn't have the money."

The notice from the school said Gordon would need three sport jackets, slacks, luggage, towels and blankets, but a social worker who checked found that Gordon owned a pair of sneakers, a pair of dungarees, two shirts, two sets of underwear and little else.

Under new welfare rules that went into effect in New York this month, special grants for clothing and other items have been eliminated.

But workers at the St. Nicholas Social Services Centre in Harlem raised about $300 and will continue to aid Gordon during his years at the school.

Hearing Aids On Trial

VICTORIA: In the past a great deal of criticism has been leveled against the hearing aid industry. This has been due primarily to high prices, poor service and the fact that a free trial period was practically non-existent. In many cases a person dissatisfied with the hearing aid was unable to obtain either satisfaction or refund.

This situation has now been corrected by a company manufacturing hearing aids in Victoria.

By dealing directly with the manufacturer a saving of fifty per cent is realized on a high quality hearing aid with two weeks free trial, thus eliminating cause for dissatisfaction.

Also available is after sales service by government certified technicians at Audiotronics Enterprises Ltd., 1326 Government St., 385-0911.

ROAR of some of the hottest dragsters on the Island will engulf the Mill Bay dragstrip Sunday. One of the featured cars will be Doug Murray's "Bohemian". The Nanaimo "hemi" powered Anglia attains speeds of more than 120 miles an hour in less than 11 seconds.

EARLY CUT ON POWER

LAKE COWICHAN — Electrical power will be off in Lake Cowichan area on Sunday so servicemen can relocate poles and circuits along the Lake Cowichan highway now under construction, B.C. Hydro said today.

The scheduled interruption will come between 5 a.m. and 7 a.m. and will affect Lake Cowichan village, Youbou, Mesachie Lake, Honeymoon Bay and Caycuse.

Craft to Hover for Scientists

Victorians will get a sneak preview of a new British experimental hovercraft prototype in operation Aug. 19 at the Patricia Bay naval base.

A 10-seat CC-7 Cushioncraft, currently on trial for the British Ministry of Technology, will make test runs and demonstrations at the seaplane slip of Utility Squadron 33.

The hovercraft employs a radical new technique in propulsion that makes operation of the vehicle feasible in densely populated areas.

One of the chief drawbacks of earlier models, powered by a propeller-generated cushion of air, has been excess noise.

A proposed hovercraft operation was rejected in Oak Bay on the grounds of noise.

The British experimental craft, however, is powered by an ST-6 gas turbine manufactured by a Canadian aircraft firm, and uses ducted air propulsion.

According to British information services the result is a highly manoeuvrable machine with a great decrease in noise.

The CC-7, weighing an easily transportable 3,000 lbs., is being currently researched for performance under varying conditions in Canadian arctic and marine environments.

A feasability study for operation on the Mackenzie River delta is being done, and after the Victoria tests and demonstrations the craft will be shipped to Panama for trials in a hot humid climate.

Although the CC-7 will be on public view at Pat Bay, however, the greater part of its operational time will be in the hands of scientists and others who will be studying the craft and its system in specific experiments to determine potential applications of the new technical features.

Doctor Promises 'No Lollypops'

Incumbent MLA Dr. H. R. McDiarmid was elected by acclamation at the Socred nomination convention while, in Nanaimo, the Liberals selected Bob Plecas, 24, president of the association.

Dr. McDiarmid will be seeking his second term as an MLA. He was elected in 1966.

"I'm not going to promise a lot of lollypops, but instead make serious commitments," he told the meeting.

He noted that he had been the first one to talk of the pollution problem in Port Alberni in 1966. Since then MacMillan Bloedel had spent more than $4,000,000 in pollution control measures, he said.

Plecas said while his family was strongly socialistic, he felt socialism was a curse.

Socialism tended to hold the individual down and prevent him from progressing at his own rate he said.

The dandidate also said he favored vocational schools and regional colleges in areas which needed them.

Day Trip To Jordan River

The B.C. Historical Association, Victoria Section, will hold its annual field day at the Jordan River electrical generating plant Aug. 9.

Participants should assemble at the B.C. Hydro parking lot at Cormorant and Blanshard at 9:45 a.m., and may leave their cars there for the day.

Cost is $2.50 per person, and everyone should bring a picnic lunch.

Open House At Camps

Open house will be held at Easter Seal Camp, Lake Cowichan Aug. 17. The camp is sponsored by the B.C. Society for Crippled Children.

Special invitations are being sent to all organizations involved with handicapped children and adults on Vancouver Island as well as members of the provincial legislature, camp administrator Ray St. Dennis said.

The open house will he held 2 to 5 p.m., and a short ceremony will take place at 3:30 p.m.

Other B.C. camps for crippled children will hold open houses this months.

Easter Seal Camp Chehalis at Harrison Mills B.C. will be open to visitors Sunday afterhoon, and Holiday House at Cedar Cottage, Vancouver, will be open the afternoon of Aug. 20.

Here's Choice for Area Voters

Nomination of Liberal candidates for Victoria riding Friday night gives the three major parties full slates in the four capital-area ridings.

All members of the last legislature are running again. Area candidates are:

VICTORIA: (two seats) Social Credit, Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings and Public Works Minister William Chant; Liberal, Ian Stewart and Mel Couvelier; NDP, Peter Bunn and Phillip Fawcett.

OAK BAY: Liberal, Allan Cox, member of the last legislature; NDP, Jack McKenzie; Social Credit, G. Scott Wallace.

Nominations for the Aug. 27 election officially close Aug. 13 with advance polls scheduled for Aug. 21 and Aug. 23.

ALDERMAN, BUSINESSMAN

11th-Hour Move Fills Grit Slate

By STEVE HUME

Last-minute decisions played a major role in the nominations of Liberal party candidates for the twin-seat riding of Victoria Friday night.

Alderman Ian Stewart, undecided two hours before the nominating meeting, came around at the 11th hour and let his name stand. And 26-year-old party-worker Jim Bigsby chose not to run when two other names were put forward.

STEWART
. . . individual first

Couvelier's nomination came as a surprise to many. His name had not previously been mentioned among those likely to run.

Couvelier is owner and managing director of Maplewood Poultry Processors Ltd. and lives on Campus Crescent in Saanich. He told association members he was not prepared to make a speech, but that next time he would have his "homework done."

Couvelier and Stewart, who lives on Beach Drive in Oak Bay, were the third and fourth lower Island Liberals to be nominated by acclamation. The others were Allan Cox, member for Oak Bay in the last legislature, and lawyer Louis Lindholm who is running in Saanich and the Islands.

Liberal candidate in Esquimalt is Fred Phillips.

LIBERALS FIRST

"I wanted to see this seat go Liberal very badly," Bigsby told association members at the Inn, 1588 Cook St.

"I decided not to run when I saw the calibre of the candidates you have tonight.

"I am more interested in this seat being Liberal than in running myself."

Stewart, a lawyer who has served 2½ years on city council, said his decision to run came after consideration of the alternatives left to voters if the Liberal party did not make a bid.

"The polarization that will result if the Liberal party does not go before the voters will mean the end of individual expression in this province," he said.

COUVELIER
. . . running mate

"The government bigness on the right, and the NDP bigness on the left is already excluding the individual."

He accused Bennett of making a "callous decision" in calling the Aug. 27 election when people would be most disorganized and vacationing.

MOTION OF WEAKNESS

"It was a motion of weakness, not of strength, and it's a motion that is going to be turned on him at the end of the month."

Stewart said that, as an alderman, he came to recognize changes taking place in society as "automation, technology, big business and big labor" posed a threat to the individual man.

The government should be insurance to make sure the individual is not forgotten and lost in the shuffle, he said.

For 36-year-old Stewart, it is a second crack at a provincial campaign. In the 1963 election, he ran fourth behind John Tisdalle's 10,657-vote Social Credit sweep in the old riding of Saanich.

The NDP ran second in that election and the Progressive Conservatives third. Stewart got 3,049 votes.

Saanich Signed As New Democrat Bright Spot

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich is sign country—New Democratic Party signs.

They dot the landscape of the peninsula, principally on front lawns and the backs of cars.

This is the constituency the NDP has high hopes of winning Aug. 27, and party leader Tom Berger spent the day with local candidate Don Johannessen.

During five hours of campaigning Friday afternoon, not one Liberal sign was seen and only half a dozen in support of the Socred's John Tisdalle, who has held the constituency since 1953.

It takes more than signs to win elections, yet plentiful signs were the hallmarks of NDP victories in byelections in Nanaimo and Vancouver South—coupled with heavy door-to-door canvassing.

Berger met Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and held a press conference at his office in the legislature, before heading into the riding after lunch.

First stop was in the neighboring Esquimalt constituency—where his sister, Mrs. Susan Brooks and his mother, Mrs. M. T. Berger both of Colwood, are helping NDP candidate Jim Gorst at his campaign headquarters on the Old Island Highway.

Well-Prepared for Election

Party workers were still putting the headquarters office into shape—nailing up orange and black signs.

Then over to Saanich headquarters on Brunswick Place—quiet, well-organized and well-prepared for the election.

A well-paced tour through the Peninsula took him to visit Mayor Archibald Galbraith of Central Saanich, Mayor J. B. Cumming of North Saanich and Mayor Arthur Freeman of Sidney.

The visits were brief—half an hour or less—and the mayors were guarded in their comments later.

"They are very nice, pleasant people—you can't say much more than that, can you," said Mayor Cumming—the man who nominated Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm in Saanich constituency Thursday night.

The mayors and Berger talked about local problems and municipal affairs.

In Sidney, they dropped into the offices of the weekly newspaper, mainstreeted along Beacon Avenue and table-hopped in the beer parlor of the Sidney Hotel.

This is the new-style campaingning—no big public meetings (or not many anyway), but plenty of person-to-person contact with the people, where they work, where they relax where they live.

A Priority Constituency

The people he met along Beacon Avenue and in other places reacted favorably—not just politely—to him and his party. A good number of them came right out and said they would vote for the NDP.

In the evening, he chatted with shoppers at Town and Country, which marks the southern end of Saanich and the Islands constituency.

This morning he headed up-Island—with stops at Parksville and Alberni, Courtenay and Campbell River on Sunday, Nanaimo on Monday and then back to Vancouver before heading to Prince Rupert and the northland.

As he munched a supper of hamburger and french fries Friday evening, he said Saanich and the Islands constituency is a priority one.

"It is one of the seats we have got to win if we want to form a government," he said. "I think we will win it."

But to win, the NDP must roll back the strong showing by Social Credit in the 1966 provincial election.

At that time, Tisdalle polled almost twice as many votes as the NDP, with the Liberals only 420 votes behind the NDP

Against this is the fact that Johannessen not only kept the NDP vote intact in the Trudeau sweep of 1968, but increased his party's vote by nearly 2,000 over the 1965 showing.

Teachers to Give Election Stance

The B.C. Teachers' Federation will announce details of its participation in the Aug. 27 election campaign at a press conference in Victoria Tuesday.

The federation has drawn up a platform of what it considers are the most vital issues in education today. Past-president Bob Buzza and general secretary Charlie Ovans will be present.

DIPLOMATIC . . . BUT EVASIVE

Dr. Bruce Partridge, making his first public appearance Friday as president of the University of Victoria, proved a diplomatic but evasive speaker.

Dr. Partridge appeared before some 200 students and faculty members taking part in a two-day symposium on The Learning Society.

Speaking of the "legitimacy of the university," he said universities must function by steering a compromise course between two extremes: those for whom change is not coming fast enough, and those who would like to keep the rate of change at a minimum.

"We will continue to satisfy some of the no-no people and some of the go-go people, and somewhere in between the university will achieve some kind of legitimacy."

But some listeners felt the new president was playing it safe.

Commented one faculty member:

"From what you're saying, you could say the war in Vietnam is legitimate because it fails to satisfy either the doves or the hawks."

Several students tried to get him to say what kind of role the university could play as a source of social change.

The audience seemed frustrated as Dr. Partridge countered questions with questions, asking for definitions of such generalized terms as "Ivory tower," "liberal-arts degree' and "social change."

"To the extent that any institution fails to satisy the needs of a society, that institution dies."

He said change in universities comes not from large, earth-shaking decisions, but from hundreds and thousands of little decisions made by individuals in the schools.

"If it could be changed overnight this would be good—but in five years when the dust settled a whole generation of students would have been sacrificed."

Ask the Times

Q.— How big is the capital region, what is the regional district board, and the regional hospital district?—R.C.

A.—Generally speaking, the Capital Region stretches from Port Renfrew to Sidney with the foot of the Malahat acting as its northern boundary. The Capital Region Planning Board is available for planning advice in all areas of the region but is mostly used by unorganized areas or small communities lacking their own planning staff.

The Regional District Board is a level of government, now in its third year. It is responsible throughout the area for financing regional parks, new sewer construction and firecracker control.

The Regional Hospital District is responsible for all new hospital construction throughout the area, plus hospital construction in the Gulf Islands.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

TELEPHONE VOTE KNOWN MONDAY

A decision on whether or not the B.C. Telephone strike will end will be known Monday.

That is the day when ballots will be counted in Vancouver following votes by members of the Federation of Telephone Workers of British Columbia.

Close to 400 of the 500 Victoria strikers voted Friday night at a meeting in the Victoria Curling Club where general secretaries of the plant, traffic and clerical division explained a settlement proposal.

Local president Ken John said he would "hate to hazard" a guess at the vote, calling it a "complete toss-up." He said there was "a lot of feeling against" the settlement proposals.

B.C. Tel has increased its across-the-board salary increase offer to 19.8 per cent, as well as other features, in a new two-year agreement with the union, following renewed negotiations urged by federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

No Bids On Refit Draws Ire

The two major West Coast shipyards have protested to Ottawa about the $3.3 million conversion job on the destroyer-escort HMCS Gatineau which will be handled in the navy's HMC Dockyard.

J. W. Hudson, executive vice-president of the Burrard-Yarrows group with yards in North Vancouver and Esquimalt, said the government decision is "almost unprecedented."

He said the government dockyard is taking work normally handled by commercial shipyards "without the commercial shipyards being given a chance to submit a bid. We are certain that we can do the job in a more efficient manner and at a competitive cost."

He said he had been informed by the minister's executive assistant that the protest has been considered and cannot be accepted.

Dockyard is also to overhaul the submarine HMCS Rainbow.

Hudson said that four years ago, the federal government forecast future government requirements in the shipbuilding field which would enable commercial shipyards to plan ahead.

At the time, the government made a commitment that the first three of six planned destroyer-escort conversions would take place in West Coast yards, he said.

Eighteen months ago Burrard Dry Dock submitted the low tender on the first of the conversions, but the work was then postponed.

HMCS Gatineau is to arrive here in mid-August. She will be provided with variable-depth sonar, a rocket-assisted homing torpedo system and improved radar and electronic equipment.

Between 300 and 400 workers will be needed for the refit which should take 15 months. Work on the Rainbow is estimated to take eight months.

The destroyer refit is part of a $50 million modernization for four ships of her class.

The first, the Terra Nova, has rejoined the Atlantic fleet after being refitted at Halifax dockyard. Contracts for the other two, the Kootenay and Restigouche, will be awarded after tenders are called on a nation-wide commercial basis.

CITY LOGGER KILLED IN RUNAWAY TRUCK

Dead is James Maurice Moreno, 103 Pine, an employee at the Franklin River division of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.

Lake Cowichan RCMP say the accident happened after Morena had driven a load of logs to the top of a hill around noon. He turned the truck and was on his way down the hill when he lost control. The truck rolled down a 140-foot embankment.

Moreno was thrown out and died instantly. He is survived by his wife, Linda.

Arthur Mayse . . .

LIKE MANY ANOTHER Victorian who pilots a car and hopes for the best, I have watched what started as a minor traffic nuisance grow to problem proportions. This is hitch-hiking, and I think it's high time the laws against a dangerous intrusion on street or highway were enforced.

I am not prepared to be sentimental about this infestation, and like most drivers, determinedly ignore the juvenile or older person who seeks to hitch a ride.

This isn't always easy to do, since non-interference has encouraged the ready-thumb brigade to dangerous boldness. On several recent occasions, I've had to swerve wide to avoid hitch-hikers who were well out on the blacktop.

I have every sympathy for the kid whose parents can't or won't supply him with transport where necessary.

But driving is tough enough, and getting tougher, and past experience with the hitch-hiker has convinced me that I'd much sooner not have him riding with me.

It's most unlikely that the thumber will break a car door handle, as one little old lady managed to do when alighting after 30 miles of bitter complaint against the state of the world. Nor is there much chance that he'll turn distinctly sinister, as did one young man whom I contrived to leave behind at a coffee stop. Still, I prefer to shun his company.

The best way to make the law work—and save our amply occupied policemen a further load—is to keep the right-hand door closed to the hitch-hiker.

SOMEHOW, I EXPECTED better of Mars than another batch of craters. But such evidence as Mariner 6 has picked up in its lonely mission through space doesn't indicate the presence of life on the warrior planet.

Disturbing though I find the thought, it may turn out that in all the universe, earth alone has been dowered with life-forms.

If we knew that dismal supposition were true, perhaps we'd get on with some of the things we should be doing here below. Like outlawing war, for instance, and tending our dear green orb like a very garden.

However, by a projection that out-ranges the space-ships, let us suppose that future exploration brings man to a planet most remarkably like earth.

Its atmosphere, vegetation, and all else matches ours, and it has a humanoid population whose technological development hasn't yet advanced from the stone age.

Now comes man, by comparison wise and powerful as a god, to this planet that offers him a second chance.

How would he use that chance? Would he prove that history does repeat itself, or would he proceed to crowd the original inhabitants into reserves, foul the rivers, shrink the lakes, smog the sky, and shed his brother's blood?

It's an interesting question. And who knows but what one day our species will be given a chance to answer it?

FROM THIS DEPARTMENT, a warm hello to our American visitors, and a hope that you're getting the kind and courteous treatment that I've unfailingly received in your country.

If you want a fine view of this city, and its surroundings, enquire your way to the top of Mt. Tolme, which is not really a mountain, but a hill.

If you'd like to buy one of the finest sport sweaters made anywhere, shop around for one of the bold-patterned beauties made by Indian knitters and sold locally.

If you enjoy an evening of live theatre, a university sponsored comedy, 'Tartuffe,' will be playing at our McPherson Theatre on Tuesday, August 5. Curtain time, 8 p.m., and reservations at the box office. Phone 386-6121.

When you're home again, you might like to take pen in hand and give me your impressions of our city—what pleased you, and also what didn't.

Have a good trip, and accept my assurance that you're welcome here.

When baby goes out driving . . .

Perhaps we hadn't been keeping up too well with what's new for the "carriage set" of late . . . anyway, it was a real eye-opener for us when we discovered the remarkable baby accoutrements on the 7th floor at Standard Furniture . . . and we're convinced that babies . . . not to mention mothers . . . never had it so good! . . . There's a folding padded car seat . . . complete with shoulder safety belt . . . which fits neatly into a sturdy, light-weight stroller (also folding) . . . equipped with mud shields on the front wheels, and an underneath shelf arrangement to hold parcels . . . All mother has to do is lift the seat, complete with baby, out of the car and onto the stroller . . . reverse the process when she's finished shopping . . . fold up the stroller and drive off! . . . This has got to be the greatest . . . and is well worth its $35.50 cost . . . Then there's a bucket car seat with head rest . . . shoulder strap safety belt and padded bumper front which sits snugly over the transmission hump of a car with front bucket seats . . . it hooks behind the seats for complete safety for baby . . . folds up completely to be stowed away when not in use . . . This is tagged at $23.95 . . . a pretty small price to pay for baby's safety and comfort, don't you think? . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

Utterly utter sleep and loungewear! . . .

We're really stymied about what to call the new see-through lingerie items we saw at Saba's this week . . . Are they sleepwear? . . . loungewear? . . . Guess, actually, the answer is both . . . Anyway, they're the sexiest garments we've seen in many a moon! . . . One set consists of a "body suit" with straight camisole top, shoestring straps . . . made of very sheer nude nylon . . . stretchy and shirred so as to cover you decently where it matters most . . . And to wear over this is a gossamer sheer nylon long culotte jumper with ¾ length sleeves . . . wide, wide pants, high, round neck, tying at the nape . . . $30 for the set, which also comes in blue . . . Or instead of the culotte, you can have the body suit with a short, sleeveless cage for $23 . . . These see-throughs are designed by Andrea, and are available in small and medium sizes . . . Just the thing, we'd imagine, for la vie intime on a balmy evening . . . Another interesting garment is the white nylon nightshirt . . . double layers of sheer nylon . . . with long, pointed collar, and long cuffed sleeves . . . trimmed with narrow brown lace and little satin covered buttons . . . There's a dear little bikini to wear with this . . . and for lounging, you can don a pair of heavy brown nylon tricot slacks with the look of leather . . . Saba Bros Limited, 1130 Douglas St., 384-0561.

Planning a room means taking into account the total effect from floor to ceiling. Effects Combined For the Total Look

By PAULINE GRAVES

The camera catches only a portion of a room at a time, but your eye, with a sweep, sees almost a whole room instantly. Consequently, when you plan a room, think, not only of furniture placement, but of entire walls and play of pattern and plain areas. All too often the interest is at eye level and below.

In this family room, by decorators Hamilton-Howe, dark panelling frames a light wall, and the bold pattern on the sofa repeats on the exterior wall around the windows and on the pleated shade. It is a great balance of light and dark, pattern and plain. And the interest carries up to the ceiling.

Note that the completely contemporary coffee table and bench blend beautifully with the old fashioned accessories.

Microwave Cooking Becomes Practical

By PENNY SAVER

The moon can get a bit boring after a while.

I mean, it's great that man can get there, but will it help get the old wax off the kitchen floor? It most certainly will not, so stop talking about astronauts and let me get scraping.

Needless to say, when I first heard about the oven the Apollo 11 astronauts and their doctor companions cooked their food in while in quarantine, I was less than enthusiastic. I was even hostile.

But not any more. The radarange microwave oven developed for the cramped quarters of the mobile quarantine facilities is practical enough for any housewife.

Microwave ovens have been around for a long time — since 1948 in fact — but they were too bulky for most kitchens, required 220 volts of electricity and cost at least $2500.

They were practical and time-saving for large institutions, but far beyond the average housewife's budget.

The model used in the MQF is the size of a portable television, plugs into a regular 115 volt wall socket and costs $739.95 in Victoria.

That is progress.

Microwave ovens have the advantage of making all foods convience foods, whether you are a housewife or an astronaut.

"The microwave oven was selected for the Apollo mission because it met NASA specifications requiring speed, ease of operation and low level heat dissipation. It is particularly efficient for heating pre-cooked, frozen food, which constituted most of the astronauts' diet aboard the mobile quarantine facility.

Dishwashing Eliminated

"The only heat generated is the slight amount emanating from the heated food itself.

"Dishwashing was eliminated in the MFQ since all food was prepared and served in disposable paper containers or plates."

That is how officials explained their choice of the microwave oven, and the same reasons hold for the housewife.

No more standing over a hot stove because the stove doesn't get hot. Paper, china or glass plates can be used and will not be harmed (metal is completely verboten) so there are fewer dishes to wash.

The unit is easy to use: Two timer dials and three buttons are all the controls. One dial is for 5 minutes, sufficient for most items. The other is for 30 minutes. For roasts or large fowl (it will take up to a 25 pound turkey) the timer may have to be reset.

The oven turns off automatically when set time is up. It can be stopped at anytime with the stop button. A switch turns on a light, so one can observe the cooking meat through the grill in front of the oven.

What can be cooked in it? Almost anything from scrambled eggs to a roast. A hamburger can be cooked on its own in only a minute. Bacon, in four minutes. Frozen lobster tails, five and a half minutes.

Roasts and chickens will brown; smaller items that cook quickly will not.

A cookbook comes with each range to help the confused housewife know how long to leave each dish in.

How does it work? As I understand it, meat and vegetables are cooked by friction. Your hand would cook that way too, but safety catches ensure that as soon as the door is opened, even the slightest bit, the unit stops.

Since it uses ordinary current this oven can be used anywhere: on top of the kitchen cabinets; on its own stand in the living room or on the patio; in a small trailer. All it needs is electricity and a space larger than 15 inches by 23 inches by 18 inches (outside dimensions of the oven putting all fractions up to the next whole number).

Please call me at 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for information on these ovens.

Chases Sirens

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The man I am married to is very intelligent about most things, but he has one very childish fault. Every time he hears a siren he has to follow it. We have been late to more places because this thrill-seeking nut of mine has chased a fire engine, ambulance or squad car. He never misses your column, so maybe if you mentioned this, you'd make an impression. I can't get through to him.—Leona

DEAR LEONA: It's nuts like your husband who make it difficult for firemen, police and rescue squads to reach the scene where they're desperately needed. Many lives have been lost, and buildings burned to the ground because curious spectators and thrill-seeking nuts have created a traffic problem. Tell your overgrown boy that if he doesn't pull over to the curb when he hears a siren, he is in violation of the law.

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I were recently discussing pickups. Do you think it is all right for a woman (age 23) to accept a ride from an attractive, polite man on a rainy evening when she is waiting for a bus?

I have always felt that a man who could pick up a strange woman might get the idea that she was a pickup. My friend says that anyone could tell by just looking at me that I am not that type, so it would be all right to accept the ride. What do you think? —Carol

DEAR CAROL: Anyone who thinks he can tell much by looking should think again. No sensible woman would get into an automobile with a strange man regardless of how attractive and polite he appeared to be. And a man who would pick up a stranger is also taking a chance.

DEAR ABBY: Things like this always seem to happen in someone else's family, but this has happened in mine:

My son and daughter-in-law had a beautiful church wedding. A few days later, my wife and I were told that we are to become grandparents in just four months!

Shocked we were, and still are. This is contrary to our beliefs and teachings. What does one do in such a situation? Should we forgive and forget?

It is difficult to meet our friends and neighbors who came to the wedding and brought such lovely gifts.

Abby, don't you agree this couple should have gone quietly to the Justice of the Peace instead of making a farce of a church wedding? —Upset in Spring Valley

DEAR UPSET: It makes little difference now what this couple should have done. What's done is done. Don't sit in judgment. Forgive and forget. You'll be glad you did.

Dunlop Dungeon: Boutique in a Basement

By JUDI FREEMAN

The Victoria Symphony deals in music.

It also deals in second-hand clothes, discarded jewelry and the occasional antique.

And by its last accounting, both ventures were successful.

Music, of course, is the familiar forte of the symphony. Victoria audiences have listened to Tchaikowsky, Mozart and Hadyn with pleasure, and have enjoyed artists like Steven Staryk and Dimitri Bashkirov.

But the Dunlop Dungeon Boutique with its potpourri of merchandise is a different matter altogether, even if it does have the latest 1927 hits in sheet music.

The boutique is run by the symphony's Women's Committee as a successful venture to raise money to help support the orchestra. In its first year (March, 1968 to March, 1969) it garnered approximately $2,000.

"We hope to double profits this year," says Mrs Harold Thirlwall.

Expenses are practically nil. Led by Mrs. Thirlwall, a volunteer group of women looks after the business in the basement of Dunlop House at 1960 Lansdowne, the symphony's headquarters.

Tucked into a corner of the basement, the boutique is filled to overflowing with just about everything except large furniture.

Racks of women's dresses and men's suits fill a third of the room. Suitcases sit under a centre table piled high with crocheted hankies, silk scarves and jewelry under glass. Against one wall are shelves of blouses, sweaters and shoes.

A small sign tacked to a post reads, "Prices Firm. No Refunds."

Clientele varies from the housewife poking around for bargains to the antique hunter looking for surprises.

"We have people coming back every week to check on what we have," comments Mrs. Thirlwall.

An antique wicker sewing table was snapped up almost as soon as it was priced and a crystal decanter set was quickly sold.

"We even sold a stove just recently," she says.

The articles in the boutique are donated by committee members, symphony players and Victoria symphony ticket holders. Mrs. Thirlwall and her volunteers price separate pieces, put tags on them and set them out.

"We used to hold rummage sales and work so hard," says Mrs. Thirlwall. "Often, many nice articles wouldn't get sold and we would give them away to other organizations."

As a result, profits suffered. Casting about for a solution the committee settled on the boutique and profits have been rising ever since.

Their shop, which Mrs. Thirlwall hopes will move to the centre of town some day, is open Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Miniskirted Co-Eds May Invade Mory's

NEW YORK (AP) — The tables down at Mory's — that hallowed barroom retreat of Yale generations — may soon have girls in miniskirts sitting at them and a soprano chorus in the "songs we love so well" could be the dying refrain of the one-sex school.

This fall, when the ivy begins to crinkle in New Haven, Conn., 240 girls will slip into Yale's sophomore and junior classes as transferes from women's colleges.

Princeton, where the ivy also grows thick, is taking down the Women Need Not Apply sign which went up in 1756 when the school opened.

And Vassar, synonymous with quality education for women, is taking in boys.

In all, about 40 United States schools are considering the abandonment of one-sex education.

There are many reasons for this widespread shift to co-education along the tradition-locked Eastern seaboard — including pressure from students themselves — but all of them seem to be subordinate to one factor: Competition for quality students.

Rev. John E. Brooks, vice-president of Holy Cross College in Worcester, Mass. — which appears set for co-education in 1971 — says "There's no problem about staying in business, but the question is, can you stay in business with quality students? The possibility of a quality school losing its quality students is a real one."

Many other college officials, however, prefer to talk about the more natural environment of a co-ed campus as the reason for breaking down the one-sex tradition.

Daniel Lang, assistant dean of admissions at Wesleyan in Middletown, Conn., where girls will be admitted in 1970, said:

"This is not a naturally happy campus. Men are too introspective. The dedication to scholasticism is too artificial. We are missing the intellectual feminine mystique."

Edward J. Bloustein, president of exclusive and expansive Bennington, a women's college in Vermont, says, "Our No. 1 reason for deciding on co-education is that it is more full and meaningful."

Prof. Frederick Rudolph, one of the leading persuaders in William College's decision to go co-ed in 1971, doesn't agree with this reasoning.

"The idea that co-education is more natural is something we knew 100 years ago. It's perfectly clear that the one-sex institution has been out of style since the founding of Cornell in 1872. Now they realize the risk of being obsolete."

Couple Celebrates Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Drew, 28 Hibberson Crescent, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary today with a small reception.

Married in Swalwell Presbyterian Church, England, by Rev. Ritchie, Aug. 2, 1919, the couple lived in Swalwell until 1948, three years after their only daughter, Lenora, came to Victoria to join her husband.

In England Mr. Drew worked in local coal mines and on what was then Blaydon Railway. He was a sergeant in the Home Guard during the war.

In Victoria he worked for Woolworths and was associated with the Victoria West Football team, both as a trainer and a coach.

They have a daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William McQuillin and grandson, John McQuillin, all of Victoria.

Hemlines Bounce Around the Fashion Salons

The yo-yo game of up and down hemlines has been played in Paris all week, with designers doing their best to make skirts longer and old clothes obsolete.

Times news services reports indicate they're not winning.

An Associated Press report says that Marc Bohan of Christian Dior dropped a bomb at his fall and winter collection, with his hemlines all the way down to lower calf.

"The audience of celebrities and fashion reporters greeted it with stony silence," the report says.

Fashion writer Joan Deppa of UPI phrased it differently.

The audience "sat in respectful, studious silence as he sent out one after another of his models in long coats, suits and dresses that stopped just 14 inches from the floor.

"It was an interesting look, very long, very straight, usually with a zipper straight up the front of the skirt to let the wearer leave a slit as high as she liked.

"But with each successive model, the faces around the grey and cream salon got longer and longer."

It looks like an army trench coat hauled out of a post-war trunk for walking the dog on a chilly winter evening.

Then there's Courreges whose plaid skirt suspended on steel chains over the shoulders is so short he has it worn over a heavy rib-knitted body suit.

Another of his models wore a hip-length vest with pants of synthetic fur and plastic. The effect is similar to a bulky astronaut suit, and about as practical for everyday wear.

Givenchy and Nina Ricci evidently couldn't make up their minds, for both have skirts of all lengths.

An Associated Press report says that Nina Ricci's collection is deliberately versatile, since designer Gerard Pipart caters to women of every age and style. (Blanket coats, patchwork tweeds, belted suits with finger-tip jackets and long stole scarves, two-piece sweater suits.)

Givenchy's message, as deciphered by Joan Deppa, is that hemlines are wherever women want to wear them . . . above the knee, below the knee, mid-calf, over the calf.

"His most unusual hemline was one that stopped just at the top of the calf, but looked longer because of a raised waistline.

"It was interesting for day but really looked more suitable for evening wear, particularly when he used a multi-colored printed and cut black velvet and tied a black ribbon around the high waist. The model wore an Alice in Wonderland hair fall on a black velvet headband."

However, "skirts stayed resolutely short at Pierre Balmain in one of the youngest, gayest and most beautiful collections the couturier has produced in years."

Balmain had a go at long skirts last year, but evidently gave up, for all his clothes were two to four inches above the knee.

He also bypassed the trend towards neutrals like gray and mustard, in favor of bright bold combinations of red and black, royal blue and white, brown and turquoise.

For amusement, Balmain offered polka-dotted mink.

Yves St. Laurent, who "has always maintained that fashion should be fun," had his little joke with hemlines from ankle length on up.

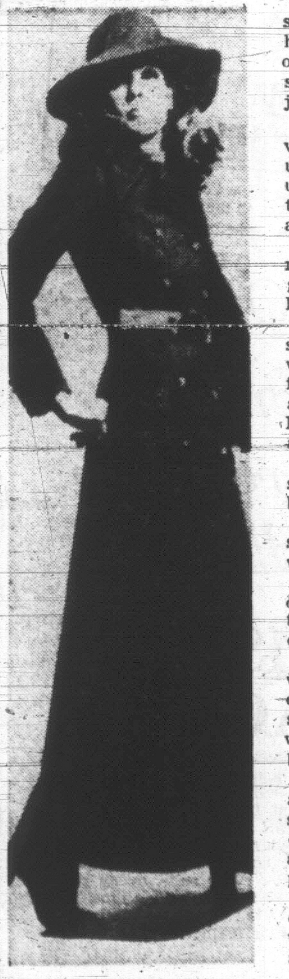
He also amused himself with a hammered gold breastplate worn with a long velvet skirt, a gypsy dress laced up the front, Garbo looks, Dietrich looks and Gone with The Wind looks. The baby doll look has gone, but there was a shepherdess-inspired dress with white mid-length lace skirt.

The length of Louis Feraud's skirts was not mentioned in reports of his Latin American theme.

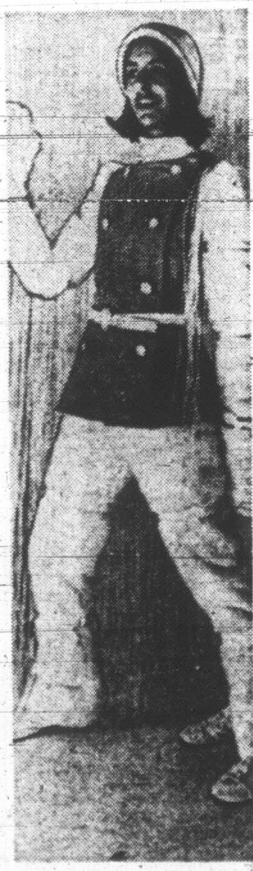
"A sombrero hat topped Feraud's striking white dress with slit sides, bound in black that revealed entire legs covered in black tights.

Also for the Beautiful People, Feraud style, were his fiesta dresses "crocheted of brilliant colors with wide bands of multi-colored flowers bordered by geometric bands, all of which was merely the setting for stunning effects like a rising sun that covered the abdomen and hips of one dress."

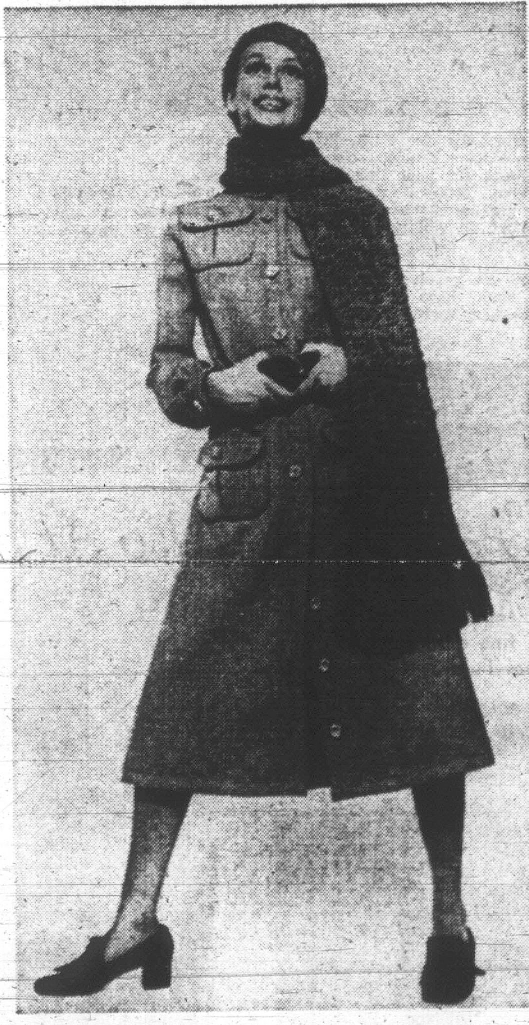
More subdued Beautiful People might prefer the Dior "muted brown or grey shadow plaids," or for "an intimate dinner mood," Bohan's "supple scarfed hostess maxi tunic suits in a shadow-checked chiffon. One is wine, the other brown, all for the woman of today."



It's long and it's lean and it's also the fashion style Paris couturiers are pushing for fall. The ankle-length blue jersey coat by Real is double-breasted although it follows the Rome fashion trend for no-bustline silhouettes. A wide belt and pocket flaps relieve the vertical lines. Chunky high heels are a necessity with this styling. (AP Wirephoto).



Courageous Courreges leapt into space with this outfit. The blue wool vest is hip-length and worn over synthetic fur and plastic pants. Matching sleeves complete the astronaut look for fall. The outfit is finished off with plain stitch knitted muffs and bonnet. (AP Wirephoto)



Gawking girl watchers may wonder where the knees went with this khaki gabardine dress modelled during a showing of Paris couturier Jean Patou's collection. Patou is keen on long stole scarves, as is Gerard Pipart of Nina Ricci. (AP Wirephoto)

Another Trip to Moon Easy for 'Happy Home'

By PAUL RECER

HOUSTON (AP). — The man who circled the moon alone while his fellow crew members made history quietly visited the Apollo 11 spacecraft and said the burned, cone-like capsule could fly again with a few reapairs.

"My happy home," he said, touching its charred surface.

"Just fix up the heat shield and it would be ready to fly again," said astronaut Michael Collins, affectionately patting the ship that he and his mates called Columbia.

Collins, Apollo 11 commander Neil A. Armstrong and the third crew member, Edwin E. Aldrin Jr., all paid homage late Friday to the space ship that carried them on their 500,000-mile moon voyage.

Technicians today finish unloading equipment from the craft and deactivating its systems. The craft is in quarantine in the lunar receiving laboratory along with the three astronauts.

COLLECT ITEMS

The astronauts collected some personal items they had carried to the moon and left in the Columbia. In keeping with the tradition of American spacemen, the astronauts did not reveal just what these items were.

A space agency spokesman sharing in the quarantine station with the spacemen said technicians found an inscription that Collins had left beside the spaceship's guidance sextant.

He said the inscription reads: "Spacecraft 101 alias Apollo 11 alias Columbia. The best ship to come down the line. God bless her."

Officials said the systems of Columbia and of the moon lander, Eagle, worked so well during the mission that a systems debriefing with the astronauts has been cancelled.

Armstrong, Collins and Aldrin continue work today on their pilot's report, the personal and highly-technical commentary that will accompany the official report of the Apollo 11 mission.

Two technicians who joined the astronauts in quarantine Friday after a vacuum chamber leak exposed them to lunar material were found healthy and without ill effects, a doctor in the quarantine said.

GLOVE RUPTURES

Ronald J. Buffum, 27, and George Williams, 42, went into isolation after a glove extending into a vacuum chamber suddenly ruptured.

Buffum, who was working with the glove, suffered a slight bruise from the force of air rushing to fill the vacuum of the chamber. Williams helped him extract his arm from the long glove. Officials said the two showered for two hours after the incident and then were admitted into quarantine.

Buffum and Williams raised to 19 the number in quarantine, counting the three astronauts. Officials said the two technicians would have no effect on the termination date of quarantine, set for Aug. 11.

Meanwhile, astronomers at Lick Observatory in California reported they bounced laser beams off a reflector left on the moon by the astronauts. The success came after 12 days of failures.

Dr. Robert P. Kraft, acting director at Lick, said some 500 laser bursts were fired at the 18-inch reflector and the signals came back in 2.5 seconds each.

HEARING SET IN MBOYA MURDER

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuters) — A man accused of murdering Economics Minister Tom Mboya will appear at a preliminary court hearing Aug. 11, police said today.

Nahason Isaac Njenga Njoroge appeared briefly in a lower court Friday when the hearing date was set, police said. Njoroge was not asked to plead.

The police arrested Njoroge July 21 and accused him of slaying Mboya, shot to death July 5 in front of a Nairobi drugstore.

Early Contract Negotiations Urged by Typographers' Union

NEW YORK (AP) — With eight months to go on their current contract, the New York Typographical Union No. 6 has suggested that contract talks with publishers of the city's newspapers begin at once.

The union said it plans to ask "substantial" wage increases, monthly rather than yearly cost-of-living adjustments and shorter hours.

Union president Bertram A. Powers said he hopes an agreement can be reached well ahead of the March 30, 1970, expiration date to avoid a last-minute crisis that might cause advertisers to switch to other media.

The newspaper involved in the negotiations are the New York Times, The Daily News, the New York Post and the Long Island Press.

Ancient Fish Stirs Interest

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — The new fish at the National Museum of Natural Sciences smells like it's 60,000,000 years old but no one is turning up his nose at it.

It is a coelacanth, caught Feb. 16 in the Indian Ocean and shipped here to have its scales scrutinized by icthyologist Don McAllister.

"There is no living fish like it," he enthused Wednesday hauling the odoriferous 92.4-pound relic out of a freezer for reporters.

"It's the only living member of its sub-class, the crossopteryghii, or lobefins."

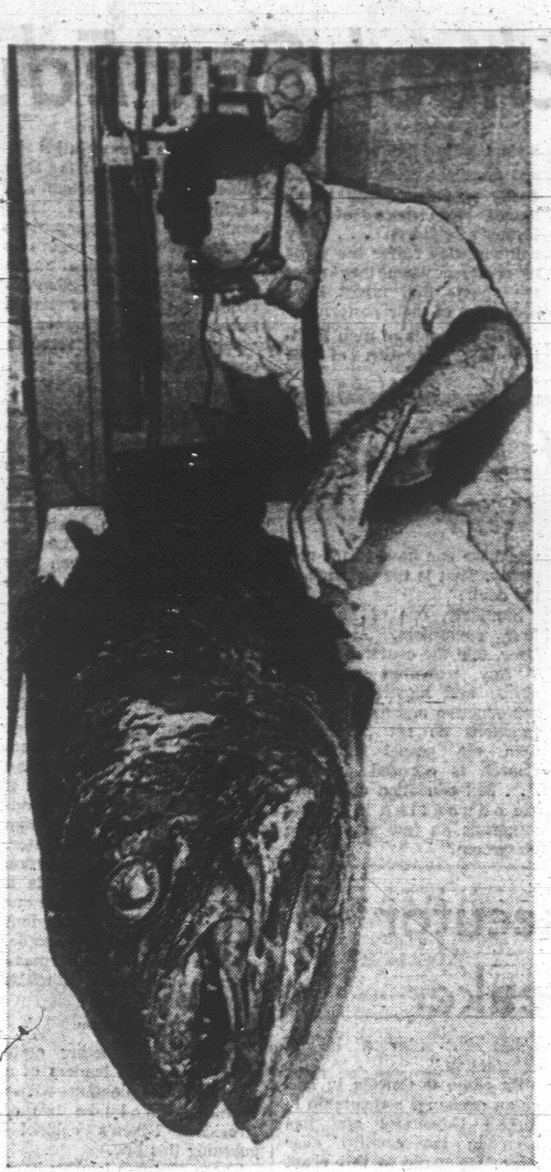
Lobefin tells the story. The pectoral and pelvic fins of he coelacanth flare from muscular lobes that appear to be a primeval move to arms and legs.

Coelacanth fossils have been found for the period between 400,000,000 and 60,000,000 years ago but there they stopped, leading scientists to believe the fish had become extinct.

In 1938, however, a trawler put into East London, South Africa, with one of the fish aboard. A lady recognized it as being unusual.

About 40 have turned up off the volcanic Comoro Islands between Kenya and Madagascar and French icthyologists in particular have studied the rich find.

Dr. McAllister, 34, a native of Victoria, says it is the prize among 140,000 specimens in the museum fish collection.



—CP Wirephoto

WEIRD PRIZE for Victoria native Don McAllister, an ichthyologist with the National Museum at Ottawa, is this 92.4-pound lobefin. Until recently believed extinct, this fish is considered a link between aquatic and land animals because of its unusual pelvic and fin development.

Once-Stately Spas in UK Now Financial Liability

By ANDRE TORCHIA

BATH (AP) — The sparkle is going out of Britain's spas—once playgrounds for the rich and rheumatic but now nearly as out of date as the hoop skirt.

With the valves closed on the 88 mineral springs at Harrogate, there remain only five of the scores of posh watering places where Britons danced and drank their way to health for nearly four centuries.

Two of these may shut down in the next few years.

The likeliest to survive is Bath, the most celebrated British spa, where thousands of patients still slip into steaming, green pools enjoyed by Roman legions 1,900 years ago.

Spas can't make money in devalued Britain. Modern hospitals are taking over their medical services and young vacationers prefer the seaside to salt springs.

Worse still, British spas are losing the government subsidies that keep spa proprietors abroad too busy to dream of the turn-of-the-century days when the sick lists read like rosters of European royalty.

In West Germany, where workers can get the government to pay for a three-week cure costing up to $250, spas drew 3,800,000 visitors in 1967, 58 per cent more than a decade earlier.

COSTS PAID

Belgium's three spas, on a rising attendance curve since the Second World War, gave 256,000 treatments last year. Government pensions pay nearly all treatment costs—up to $4 a day.

Attendance at spas in France is down—fewer than 350,000 last year compared with 450,000 in 1966 but still near the level of 1957, when the government began paying for cures. The French have begun an advertising campaign to regain clients lost to more modern centres in Germany and Italy.

Most of the more than 1,000,000 treatments given annually at the dozens of spas in Italy are financed by workers' insurance plans.

British spas—the name comes from the famous Belgian resort—sprang up in the 16th century around wells whose waters had unusual qualities. At Bath, they come up hot—250,000 gallons a day at 120 degrees. Droitwich's water is said to be saltier than the Dead Sea. The bitter substance discovered at Epsom became known as Epsom salts.

Physicians found that the often sulphurous waters were good laxatives and set patients to drinking up to 10 quarts a day. Lords and ladies who came down with arthritis in their cold castles learned that bathing in hot springs eased the pain, although not everyone enjoyed the treatment.

CURES MANY ILLS

Spa waters gained a reputation for drying out the brain, killing worms, removing fat, increasing sexual desire and promoting fertility, although the babies who appeared probably resulted more from social customs at the rolling resorts. One establishment at Hempstead kept a minister on duty around the clock for on-the-spot marriages.

Spas soon became centres of society outside the royal court in London. Customary diversions included dancing, gambling, flirting and lawn bowling.

Spas took on features that the elegant deemed essential to taking the cure—elaborate gardens for strolling and a "long room" for serving tea.

Quesnel Man Killed

QUESNEL (CP) — Joseph P. La Flamme, 35, of Quesnel was killed in an industrial accident Thursday at a work site 30 miles southwest of this Cariboo community. Police said he slipped and was crushed under a front-end loader.

BOOST FROM MAN . . .

Rare Whoopers Increasing

By JANE SUMBERA

OTTAWA (UPI)—A baby boom has finally hit the ranks of the once vanishing whooping crane, North America's giant of the bird world.

Egg hatching in electric incubators, a joint Canadian-American project begun in 1967 to preserve the species, has been largely responsible for the poulation boost, but the birds themselves are doing their part.

Ten young whoopers have been spotted so far this summer in nests in Canada's northland, a Wildlife Service spokesman said this week.

Every year the cranes fly the 2,500 mile stretch to Canada from wintering grounds on Texas' Gulf Coast.

These newest birds bring the number of whooping cranes in existence to a record total of 81, of which about 25 are in captivity.

Canadian naturalists fly by helicopter over impenetrable marshland to scoop up eggs from the whoopers' washtub-sized reed nests.

One egg from each of 10 nests was collected this June and delivered to the Maryland centre.

A captive breeding flock is the immediate goal of the hatching project, and no young birds will be released into the wild until 1985, the Wildlife Service said.

The battle to save the long-legged whoopers, which stand five feet tall when grown, was started in the early 1930s when their known number dropped to a precarious level of 14.

A pair in the wild state produces only two eggs and in former years not more than a half dozen young birds normally survived annually.

Both the United States and Canada passed laws to protect the birds from shooting or capture, but some years not a single bird was sighted on the regular trips between Canada's rugged muskeg country and the whoopers' southern refuge.

Protective measures pushed the crane population to a shaky high of 54 in 1966, but the following year their number plummeted to 32.

Powerful Mormon Sect Against School Sex Education

'. . . Responsibility of Parent'

By LESTER KINSOLVING

Sex education in schools, long a priority target for the John Birch Society, which has termed it a "filthy Communist plot" and for Billy Janes Hargis' "Christian Crusade," has now come under fire from leaders in the powerful, 3,000,000-member Mormon Church.

John Cannon, co-ordinator of information at Mormon headquarters in Salt Lake City, told this writer that neither the denomination's aged president, David O. McKay, nor its highest governing board, the Council of the Twelve Apostles, had officially taken a stand on the matter.

But one of these Twelve Apostles is former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson. And at this year's 139th Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Apostle Benson informed the faithful that "the church is opposed to sex education in the schools."

The former cabinet member also quoted the denomination's First Presidency (McKay and four "Counselors"—sort of vice presidents) as having issued the following statement:

"We believe serious hazards are involved in entrusting to the schools the teaching of this vital and important subject to our children.

PARENTS' DUTY

"This responsibility cannot wisely be left to society, nor the schools, nor can the responsibility be shifted to the church. It is the responsibility of parents to see that they fully perform their duty in this respect."

Bensen himself provided the conference no hints as to what society should do about the large number of parents who, due to either ineptitude or prudishness, leave their children dangerously ignorant about sex.

Instead, he warned the conference about the "amoral leadership" of the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States (SIECUS).

The board of directors of SIECUS includes Dr. Carlfred Broderick, associate professor of family life at Penn State, and Dr. Harold Christensen, professor of sociology at Purdue—both of whom are Mormons. (Other directors include eleven PhDs, eight MDs, three Protestant ministers, two Catholic priests and one rabbi.)

President Eisenhower's secretary of agriculture also told the conference: "The world teaches birth control.

"Tragically, many of our sisters subscribe to its pills and practices when they could easily provide earthly tabernacles for more of our Father's children . . . they will someday suffer the pains of remorse when they meet the spirits that might have been part of their posterity.

"The precepts of man limiting the population of the world we can have peace and plenty. That is the doctrine of the devil!"

"Any teachings that describe and illustrate human reproductive organs and their functions do not harmonize with the gospel and the Church is opposed to such . . . Sex education or family life education is placing emphasis on raw sex in the classroom."

(Dyer's denunciation included no mention of the Holy Bible's candor in frequent and earthy reference to "raw sex"—such as its comparison of the size of male organs to those of asses (Ezekial 23:20) or the Song of Solomon's erotic description of naked female breasts (Chapter 1: verse 13; chapter 4, verse 5; chapter 7, verse 6).

Dyer further contended: "The misguided fostering of sex education in the classroom on the basis that it will lessen sex ignorance and reduce illegitimate pregnancy, venereal disease and related problems has no basis for sound conclusions. Actual experience has proven the results to be just the opposite."

In a footnote to back up this statement, Counselor Dyer referred to the periodical American Opinion, the magazine of the John Birch Society.

Vehement excoriation of sex education has not been uncommon from the "Christian Crusade," which has found it a source of even more headlines than its campaign against fluoridation of water. (Writes the Crusade's Gordon Drake: "Sex education is a new scheme to demoralize our youth; all part of a giant conspiracy to rape the people, weaken their wills and make them sensuous atheistic slaves!")

QUITE DIFFERENT

But it is someting quite different to find leaders of a major denomination—whose members include two of President Nixon's cabinet—pursuing this line.

These Mormon leaders have denounced a program which has received expressions of support from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare; the National Congress of the PTA., the American Medical Association, the National Education Association, the U.S. Catholic Conference, the National Council of Churches and the Synagogue Council of America.

City Prosecutor Guest Speaker

A senior member of the city's prosecutor's staff will be a guest speaker at the Unitarian Church, 106 Superior, Sunday.

John Macintyre, 45, will speak on "Unitarianism in 2001."

"It's a way-out topic suitable for a progressive church," he said.

Before the talk Macintyre says he will play the currently popular hit record "In the Year 2525" as a "warm-up."

His talk, he says, will dwell mainly on the necessity for present-day Unitarians to be able to adapt themselves and their religion to the next century.

Macintyre, who has been prosecuting for eight years — the last three and a half in Victoria — has been a Unitarian for five years.

He enjoys his work in court, describing it as "a challenging job that has a lot of headaches but also a lot of satisfaction."

He came to Canada in 1953 on an exchange scholarship to McGill University and has been in the country ever since. He came to this coast to be near the sea.

California Nuns to Talk Here Monday

Two American nuns of the Sisterhood of the Holy Nativity will give a talk on their order at St. Barnabas Roman Catholic church Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The order, based in California, is a missionary community.

Sister Mary Joel and Sister Julia Elizabeth will hold a retreat for women at St. Mary's Priory Friday to Sunday and visit Comox and Qualicum Tuesday and Wednesday.

Military Junta Doomed By Political Inadequacy?

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

ATHENS — For the first time since the military dictatorship established itself in Greece more than two years ago, the democratic opposition thinks it sees some light at the end of the tunnel.

Its hope — perhaps more hope than forecast — is that in a year or two the junta will die of its own non-achievement and be toppled from a structure it was never able to cement by other army elements willing to preside over a future return to democracy.

A cautious bettor would want odds on this proposition. The junta possesses complete power and is determined more than ever to freeze its grasp. It barely gives lip service any more to the idea of restoring parliamentary government. Its only immediate challenge comes from rightwing elements in the military forces who think it has been too soft and insufficiently dictatorial rather than from the more moderate officers who were not part of the April, 1967, coup and who have never been particularly happy about it.

Opposition Stirs

Even so, a visitor to Greece today will sense more substantial oppositional stirrings and political movement than at any time since the takeover.

The new hope derives from the conviction that the dictatorship is increasingly being recognized by the Greek people as having outlived its purpose and failed in its ends, that it has lost its momentum, constitutes no vast improvement over its predecessors and has, in short, bogged down.

The prinicpal cause of its difficulties, it is becoming clear, is that it has failed to break out of the isolation, the international Coventy, to which the Western World consigned it. Nor does it possess the kind of nerve and the national acceptance of the policy forcing its isolation that enables the Republic of South Africa to walk alone and spit in the world's collective eye.

Prime Minister George Papadopoulos is no B. J. Vorster, the Greeks are not Afrikaners.

Some of the evidences of that isolation, that failure to win the cachet of "legitimacy":

- The American arms flow remains substantially constricted, a minor fraction of what had been scheduled. Supply of spare parts, a few planes, some artillery and mine sweepers has been resumed but the items the junta most wants — although why is hard to see — is stopped. These are principally tanks and armored cars, the sine qua non for the armies of small countries.

Symbolic Muscle

- The Common Market has not resumed negotiations to bring Greece into a closer relationship with it. A scheduled 35 million dollar loan has been suspended. Looming distantly on the horizon is the prospect that the tariff concessions Greece enjoys for its fruits and tobacco with the Comon Market might be cancelled.
- The Council of Europe, an organization of North Atlantic Treaty Organisation parliamentarians which commands no power but considerable respect and symbolic muscle, is on the verge of throwing Greece out — unless it beats the gun by withdrawing itself.
- Although Greece is getting the European and American bank loans it needs to cover immediate requirements, the flow of developmental capital and credit remains sluggish or worse.

More important than the concrete manifestations of the world's disapproval of the regime are the consequences inside Greece itself.

The single most significant one is that it denies the regime the presumption of permanency. It puts it in the position of the aging or wounded wolf which the rest of the pack do not yet dare challenge, but begin to doubt and deprecate and to cherish the thought of the end of his invincibility.

The psychological effect of such an attitude on the government is devastating; it denies it rest and equanimity. The more immediate practical consequence is its inability to obtain co-operation from a single important political figure from the past — to clothe itself with some historical continuity — or to obtain the services of the qualified professional and technically competent administrators, executives, specialists and decision makers it must have for efficient government.

Instead, it finds itself beleaguered by important elements in the population extending far beyond the old-time politicians and the intellectuals who despised it from the outset;

One element is the judiciary, horrified by the government's flouting of the law, of the tradition of due process and even of its own constitution whenever they stood in its way: the exiling and disbarment of lawyers who defended persons accused of political opposition, the sacking of judges in the highest courts who declined to be lickspittles.

Teachers Fired

Another is the academics, students as well as teachers, seething with the "interventions" of the government in the universities, where political commissars have been installed and teachers fired left and right.

A third is the diplomatic service, aware before anyone else of the damage being done to Greece's foreign relations and, as sophisticated, cosmopolitan, well educated members of the upper-crust, contemptuous of the regime's provincialism and crudity.

Aware of the root of its problem, the regime attempts to fight its way out of its continuing "illegitimacy" by seeking a blessing from its most powerful potential backer, the United States.

The fact, of course, which the more sophisticated Greeks realize — and of which the colonels themselves are furiously aware — is that the American government is giving the regime as frigid a treatment as it dares to a NATO partner in a crucial geographical and military location.

Delay in naming an ambassador and, of course, its cutoff of the military aid that would be appropriate to an ally in good standing are evidence enough that the United States takes a dim view.

So far, the United States has given the regime the stiff arm, and as long as it does, the dictatorship cannot come in from the cold.

NEW AMBASSADOR TO SWEDEN NAMED

MEAGHER

OTTAWA (CP) — Blanche Margaret Meagher has been appointed Canadian ambassador to Sweden, the department of external affairs announced Friday.

Miss Meagher, currently Canadian High Commissioner to Kenya and Uganda, will replace Arthur Andrew whose next assignment has not been determined.

Miss Meagher has been with the department since 1942 and served in Mexico, London and Tel Aviv. In 1958 she was appointed ambassador to Israel and become, concurrently, High Commissioner to Cyprus in 1961.

In 1962 Miss Meagher assumed her duties as ambassador to Austria and began her current assignment in 1964.

Self-Reliance Call Draws Mixed Views

By JOHN RODERICK

TAIPEI (AP) — President Nixon's call for the non-Communist nations of Asia to be militarily self-reliant has provoked some satisfaction and some dismay among Nationalist Chinese.

Many would like nothing better than self-reliance. Others, long dependent on the U.S. military presence, are worried that any change might threaten the country's security and prosperity Since 1954, when the then State Secretary John Foster Dulles persuaded the Nationalist Chinese to conclude a treaty assuring them of U.S. help in case of attack from mainland China, President Chiang Kai-shek has often spoken his determination to land again on the mainland.

But the treaty was a two-edged sword—it prevented Chiang from launching his long-dreamed-of invasion, even though he has promised that once on shore, he could go it alone without the help of a single American soldier.

THERE WERE SMILES

Thus there were some smiles of satisfaction when U.S. State Secretary William P. Rogers, setting foot on Formosa Friday for the first time in support of Nixon's do-it-yourself scheme, promised Washington would honor its treaty commitments.

After 15 years, the issue no longer is as controversial as it used to be. The 82-year-old Chiang continues to make the ritual vow to return, but if nothing succeeds like success, nothing is more deadening than inaction.

Some within the legislative Yuan, the Formosan Parliament, would like the treaty revised to make an assault at long last possible. But a sense of security, growing prosperity, a feeling that perhaps the game is not worth the candle, keep a majority in favor of the treaty as it is.

Wei Yu-sun, spokesman of the foreign office, said in a news conference: "We are confident that Mr. Rogers' visit, though regretfully a very short one, will go a long way toward further enhancing the friendly relations and mutual understanding between our two countries on matters of common concern."

'Active Defence' By Arabs

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Middle East crisis has entered a new stage with Arab armed forces taking a stand of "active defence," the Soviet armed forces newspaper Red Star said today.

A Red Star commentary told Israeli leaders they should bear this in mind or risk finding themselves in "serious trouble."

Observers said the remarks were the most concise elaboration yet of a new propaganda line which has crept into Soviet press comment since recent fierce fighting in the Suez canal area.

There has been considerably less stress than before on the need for a peaceful solution and more verbal support for Arab military actions.

Red Star said the "constant and continually bigger provocations against the Arabs that are being deliberately planned in Tel Aviv are making the situation in the Middle East extremely dangerous and fraught with major military clashes."

SUMMIT FOR ARABS

AMMAN, Jordan (Reuters) — High-level consultations have been taking place to set a date for an Arab summit conference and draw up its agenda, Saed Nofal, assistant secretary-general of the Arab League, announced Friday night.

In a statement, Nofal said the summit was needed because of "the critical situation in the Arab region."

The summit would discuss "Arab action that should be taken to confront the Zionist aggression."

He Lost All But Shirt

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A 25-year-old television repairman has met a gun-moll — and lost everything but his shirt.

The man told detectives Friday he was flagged down by a young woman hitch-hiker who asked for a lift to town — and then pulled a gun and ordered him to park in a vacant lot.

"She ordered me to strip off my wedding ring. Then she said to get out of my clothing. I did that too. She took off everything except my shirt and one sock."

The man declined to be identified.

"If my wife ever hears about this, she'll beat my brains out," he told detectives.

Constantinescu — Hooson

Dr. John Ross and Reverend A. M. Beaton officiated at a double-ring ceremony in Knox Presbyterian Church at 8 p.m., July 11, 1969, when Barbara Janine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hooson exchanged wedding vows with Mr. Corneliu Horia Constantinescu, son of Mrs. Berthe Kleinhenn, and the late Mr. Paul Constantinescue. Mr. John Dunbar, accompanied at the organ by Mr. James Alton, sang "The Lord's Prayer," and "How Great Thou Art."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor-length gown of white silk organza with Venice lace accents, styled with a jewel neckline, the airy watteau train falling from an empire waistline. Organza flowers, bordered in seed pearls and accented with tiny crystal droplets held her chapel veil of pure silk. She carried a bouquet of white trailing roses and baby's breath.

Maid-of-honor, Miss Jane Campbell, and the bridesmaids, Misses Diane Lawson and Rani Mayhew, wore identical floor-length gowns of pale aqua plise, bordered by a hemline ruffle and accented with entone satin bridal bow at the empire waistline. Their nosegay bouquets were of mauve iris and deeper mauve tulling, complemented by shaded mauve tulling headpieces held by tiny mauve iris. The junior bridesmaid, Miss Nona Awren, was delightful in aqua dotted Swiss marquisette with similar nosegay and headpiece.

Mr. Paul Hooson, brother of the bride, attended as best man, and the ushers, Messrs. Eric Kjekstad, Eric Williams, and Richard Impett attended the wedding guests.

A reception was held at the Uplands Golf Club. Dr. Bernhard Kjekstad gave the toast to the bride, and music was played by Miss Vera Critchard and Mr. Harry Piggott. The beautiful three-tiered wedding cake, made especially by Mrs. E. Corbett, topped by tiny mauve tom-thumb roses grown by Mr. Corbett, close family friends, centred the bride's table. Silver candelabra and mauve and white flowers completed the table decoration.

After the reception, the young couple left for a few days at Shawnigan Lake followed by a motor trip to California and on to Dallas, Texas, where they will make their home.

Many out-of-town guests attended from up-Island and the mainland including the bride's grandmother, Mrs. W. W. Goodwin; Mrs. H. L. C. Gregg, a family friend; Mrs. Berthe Kleinhenn, mother of the groom, and a brother, Michael, all from Vancouver. Another brother, and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Constantinescue flew from Toronto to be present at the wedding.

14 ANNOUNCEMENTS

SPECIAL NOTICE

FOR MANY YEARS THE SALVATION Army, through the Salvage of used clothing, old newspapers, furniture, etc., has provided material assistance to multitudes in need.

THE PRESENT PRICE RECEIVED for newsprint makes it impossible for us to handle same. To do so at a loss would be unfair to our many friends who so kindly support us in so many other ways.

EFFECTIVE AUGUST 4TH, 1969, we, will be discontinuing our collecting of newspapers.

WE ARE SORRY FOR ANY inconvenience that such a relatively short notice may cause, but we would solicit your continued interest and support in donations of clothing and furniture.

A thing of beauty is a joy forever. A familiar saying that sums up one of the most beautiful homes ever seen by this real estate man in years of experience. Younger than 3 years. Situated high on a hilltop, nestling amongst stately trees, and well secluded on a large lot. Enter the large entrance hall and you are at once surrounded by panels of rosewood and mahogany. Two spacious rooms flank this hall. An airy staircase ascends to the main living area where you must see to believe. Wall to wall carpeting, the best of electrical fixtures, and construction as well. Five bedrooms. But why go on? Call now for an appointment.

$34,500
Built just five years ago near the Racquet Club and schools, this FIVE BEDROOM home offers you the opportunity to locate a large family in an ideal area. Mature gardens smartly laid out with a profusion of various shrubs and flowers. No traffic problems as this property is on a dead-end street only a block long. Phone now and let me show you the panelled living room with the pink-stoned fireplace. The modern kitchen overlooks more gardens where the children can play safely. Full basement, of course, complete with a dream of a rumpus room — parties galor! And there is also — oh, oh, the sales manager says I've spent enough. Call and you can SEE all this.

Before the Judge

Richard Wilson, 38, of 4888 Davida, was sentenced to one day in prison and ordered to post a good behaviour bond of $250 for six months in central court Friday.

After a trial of an hour and a half he was convicted of assaulting a peace officer by Judge William Ostler.

Court was told he had launched himself at Esquimalt Constable Stuart Walker when he and another officer were carrying him from the lobby of the Gorge Hotel where he had been forbidden to drink for previous misbehaviour.

Douglas A. Toole, of Calgary, was remanded to Aug. 8 to allow him time to obtain legal counsel before facing a charge of trafficking a narcotic.

Bail was set at $2,000.

The man said he had been in Victoria only two weeks.

Rodger C. Craig, 20, of 1445 Fort Street, was remanded to Aug. 8 after his counsel, William Hitch, told Judge Ostler circumstances forced him to withdraw from the case.

Craig was granted the remand to allow him to obtain other counsel.

Charges of wilful damage under $50 were withdrawn against Delbert J. Thibault, 469 Lampson, because the date of his offence was wrong on his summons.

Helena Jane, 2115 Lorne Terrace, was fined $10 for allowing her dog to be at large; Victor Smith, 2290 Brighton, was fined $15 for the same offence.

Patrick J. Watson, no fixed address, was remanded to Aug. 8 for completion of his pre-sentence report.

He had pleaded guilty to attempting to defraud at an earlier hearing. Court was told he had claimed another customer's parcel as his own at Woolworth's July 23, and tried to return it for cash the next morning.

He had told store detectives who apprehended him he had been in a schizophrenic blackout, but their questions had shocked him out of it.

Uncle Miltie In New Role As Producer

NEW YORK (NYT) — Milton Berle, who has been everything from a kid performer to TV's very own Uncle Miltie, is preparing for a new role.

The 61-year-old comedian will join his former press agent, Paul W. Benson, to produce theatrical films, TV spectaculars and an assortment of video series.

Their first movie will be "The Brass Go-Between," based on a novel by Oliver Bleeck which William Morrow will publish in September. Ross Thomas will do the script.

What's it all about, Miltie? "Well, I guess you could describe it as a suspense adventure," he said. "It's set in New York and Washington and the hero is a newspaerman who acts as the go-between for a band of thieves who steal the shield of a new African nation and African diplomats who are determined to get it back. We should start shooting in the fall."

What makes a gag man want to be a production man? "It's simple. I've done almost everything in the business, from 'the Perils of Pauline' in 1915 to 22 years of TV, and I think it's high time to try my hand at producing. But I'll still act in movies and TV and do my shtick at the Fountainbleau." By all means, Uncle Miltie, do your own shtick.

Prairie Hotel Burns

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — Damage is estimated at $400,000 in a fire that destroyed the downtown Cosmopolitan Hotel early today.

Hotel manager Alf Cantalini, who gave the official damage estimate, said the loss was covered to a maximum of 25 per cent and said the fire occurred just as workmen were finishing $60,000 in renovations.

Police said the fire in the 55-year-old three-storey brick structure was caused by someone smoking in bed in a top-floor room.

The only injury reported among the dozen guests was a sprained ankle.

Treasure Found

AUCKLAND (Reuters)—Three New Zealanders claim to have found a treasure estimated to be worth several million dollars in a privateer sunk off Tonga in 1806. They are negotiating with the Tongan government over their discovery, which by Tongan law is the property of the king. Colin Prast, an Auckland company director, said Thursday his group located three iron strongboxes, one of which contained gold and silver coins, plate and other valuables.

Soccer Stars Bid for Spots On Cup Squad

LONDON (Reuters)—The English League soccer program, which gets under way Aug. 9, takes on added significance this season as players try to win World Cup team places as well as domestic honors for their clubs.

League fixtures end in mid-April, a month earlier than usual, to help England prepare for the defence of its world title in Mexico in June.

At club level, the battle for the First Division title and a subsequent place in the European Cup, promises to be highly-competitive with little to separate the leading sides.

More than £1,500,000 ($3,900,000) has changed hands in transfer fees for players since last season as clubs have been spending lavishly to strengthen their teams for the arduous eight-month campaign.

The league title has been monopolized by the North of England for the last seven years and London and Midland clubs, left out in the cold for so long, will be all out to topple Leeds United (1969 champion), Manchester City (1968), Manchester United (1965 and 1967), Liverpool (1964 and 1966) and Everton (1963)

Leeds, which won the title for the first time in the club's history last season, opens its campaign with a home match against Tottenham Hotspur.

The defending champions will by fielding Britain's most expensive signing, goal-scoring forward Allan Clarke, who cost £165,000 when bought from Leicester City in June.

SUPERB DEFENCE

Clarke will add scoring strength to Leeds' superb defence, which includes England World Cup centre-half Jackie Charlton and fullback Terry Cooper, another World Cup probable.

Liverpool, runner-up last season, has not dipped into the transfer market, preferring to rely on its tested players. Its first opponent is the unpredictable Chelsea, capable of upsetting the strongest of sides.

First Division newcomer Crystal Palace faces a fiery baptism against star-studded Manchester United, the 1968 European champions. Derby County, the other promoted team, meets Burnley and the clash marks the return to the First Division of Dave Mackay, the Derby skipper who was formerly with Tottenham Hotspur.

The Scottish season begins with the League Cup, with all-conquering Glasgow Celtic, champion for the last four years, meeting Airdrieonians in its opening clash. Once again Celtic's chief rival for honors is likely to be its Glasgow rival, Rangers.

Reports Hint North Vietnam In Hard Times

SAIGON (AP) — The newspapers published by the Communist regime in North Vietnam must be the dullest in the world. Behind thousands of turgid words, however, they clearly disclose a regime having hard times.

The diplomats, intelligence agents and a small band of Hanoi watchers in Saigon who daily scan this mass of words make only cautious assessments. Nobody predicts any collapse or even that hard times will seriously change Hanoi's policies.

These sources do insist, however, that living conditions in the North—as painted in Hanoi's own closely controlled press—must have some effect on elderly Ho Chi Minh and the men who make the basic decisions.

HEARTLAND

It has been 15 months since the American bombing of North Vietnam's heartland ended and almost nine months since the total bombing halt. Yet the North Vietnamese press still paints a picture of serious manpower shortages, morale problems, low productivity and agricultural and industrial disruption.

The roads and railroads have been repaired and Haiphong's docks are handling as much or more cargo than ever, but the everyday life of the North Vietnamese appears to have changed little.

The most serious problem appears to be well-trained and motivated manpower. Such shortages are repeatedly noted, although no mention is ever made of the soldiers sent to South Vietnam.

The United States claims that about 521,000 enemy soldiers have been killed on the battlefield—not counting those who died in B-52 bombing raids, from disease or from other causes. North Vietnam's military leader, Vo Nguyen Giap, is reported to have recently admitted the loss of 500,000 North Vietnamese in the South.

Complaining of low productivity, the daily Hanoi Moi—New Hanoi—reports:

"Many healthy, experienced workers have gone to meet the new needs of the revolution.

"The numbers of work days and work hours have declined in many places, labor discipline is lax, manpower is wasted. These deficiencies lead to a situation of labor productivity increasing slowly or not increasing at all and in places there is a tendency for productivity to decline."

To combat this, Hanoi's rulers are using the old capitalist solution of incentive pay. They call it "salary according to production."

Littlebitofsugar Pays Sweet Price

VANCOUVER (CP) — Outsider Littlebitofsugar, ridden by Jim Gilbert, just beat favored Ardido to pay a sweet win divident of $104.30 in the third race at Exhibition Park Friday night.

Littlebitofsugar paid $38.80 for place tickets and $10.20 for show bets.

Hasty Judge won the featured eighth race. Grand Bolero was second and Agha Sea was third.

MOUNTIES GET PITCHER

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos have optioned pitcher Don Shaw to Vancouver Mounties of the Pacific Coast League.

TRAIL JUNIORS WIN

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Trail Blazers won the opening game of the Canadian junior baseball tournament Friday, posting a 10-9 victory over Moncton Cubs.

Harness Drivers Injured in Spill

Bob Silliphant, 55, suffered a broken left leg in the spill which also bruised Jim Muttart and Dalton Hodgins.

Yearlings Bought By Conn Smythe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Conn Smythe of Toronto purchased two George Royal offsprings at the British Columbia Breeders' Society yearling sale.

He said he came to Vancouver to purchase George Royal offspring and got the two that were offered.

His purchases were the colt by George Royal out of Honeybloom for which he paid $9,000 and the filly out of Starlight Abbey which he bid $6,000 for.

SAILING CHAMPION

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Felix Moitoreit of Seattle won the North American Geary-class sailing championship Friday. Doug Campbell of Cultus Lake was second in the five-day event for 18-foot craft.

Ontario Junior Loop Back in CAHA Ranks

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — The rebel Western Ontario Junior A Hockey League has decided to rejoin the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, the league's interim president, Vic Symes, said Thursday.

The decision follows an announcement Wednesday at Winnipeg that the eight-team Western Canada Hockey League, which had also broken away from the CAHA and formed the Canadian Hockey Association with the Ontario rebels, was returning to the fold.

Symes' announcement that his five-team league would apply for re-entry to the Ontario Hockey Association came after a meeting at Guelph with OHA president Clarence Schmalz of Walkerton.

He said the teams expect the same concessions from the OHA that was granted the western teams, which the CAHA will allow to use five over-age players this season.

Symes also announced that his league has paid to the OHA a $240 entry fee for six teams, lending weight to his announcement Wednesday that his five-team league would be joined by a sixth this year.

Symes' announcement that his league would return to the OHA followed denials earlier Thursday that this would take place.

Hearing Set On Complaint By Lady Ump

NEW YORK (AP) — The chairman of the New York State human rights division said Friday he would hold a hearing Sept. 15 on Bernice Gera's complaint of discrimination in her bid to become baseball's first woman umpire.

Mrs. Gera of Queens, N.Y., was to have made her debut at Auburn, N.Y., in a New York-Pennsylvania League game Friday night. She was hired after discrimination charges had been filed with the state human rights division.

Thursday, however, she was told her contract had not been approved, and Mrs. Gera said she would take her case back to the division.

Clerk's Mistake Nets Big Bonus

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — A daily-double seller at Fort Erie racetrack found Thursday that every cloud has a silver lining.

Jim Holmes was a bit nettled when he punched out the wrong daily double ticket for a customer and had to keep the $5 ticket himself. No one else claimed it and, under mutuel rules, if an incorrect ticket is punched and not bought, the clerk must pay for it himself.

The "mistake" won Holmes $1,342.25 on Victorian Lady in the first race and Northern Lead in the second.

Caffery Taking Chicago's Offer

TORONTO (CP) — Centre Terry Caffery, 20, a member of last season's Canadian national team, has decided to turn professional with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

Caffery expects to sign a contract with the Hawks this week. The nationals had been hoping to retain his services for the coming season.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Two Doctors Were Our First Farmers

By BOB BOWMAN

Two doctors, Louis Hebert and John Mackay, are said to have been the first farmers in Canada. Hebert cultivated a garden at Port Royal in 1606, and went in for farming more extensively at Quebec from 1617-1627 when he was the physician there.

John Mackay was physician to the James Strange expedition to the Pacific coast in 1786 and spent the winter at Nootka. He grew vegetables not only for himself but for the Indians so he could study the effect on their health. The Indians liked the vegetables and took more than their share. Dr. Mackay was starving and living in rags when he was rescued by the Barkley expedition the following year.

One of the highlights of the Strange expedition was that it claimed the Pacific coast for Britain. Somehow Captain Cook failed to do this when he was at Nootka in 1778. Strange made two claims for Britain. The first was at Sea Otter Cove, northwestern Vancouver Island, on August 2, 1786. He went ashore on a sandy beach raised the flag, and turned some soil with a spade.

A few days later he sailed 40 miles up Goeltas Channel and climbed a mountain from where he could see a vast area which he named "Queen Charlotte Sound" and claimed it for Britain. His method of doing this, apart from raising the flag, was by cutting a deep hole in a tree into which he put copper, iron, beads and a document giving the names of his ships and the date. The copper was found in 1936 and is now in the archives of British Columbia.

Other events on Aug. 2:

1805—Paper was made at St. Andrew's Lower Canada.

1818—Plague of locusts destroyed crops of Selkirk settlers.

1858—Imperial act established British Columbia as mainland colony.

1864—Canadian parliamentary party left for Maritimes to pave way for Confederation conference.

1862—Victoria was incorporated as a city.

1882—Regina was made the capital of the Northwest Territories.

1871—Indian treaties were signed at Lower Fort Garry and Lake Manitoba.

1954—First shipment of iron ore from Quebec-Labrador development left Sept Iles.

1963—Members of Parliament pay boosted to $12,000 plus $6,000 tax-free for expenses.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our skunk, Phew, likes melons, any kind. Is this an unusual taste for a skunk? — F.E.

DEAR F. E.: Au contraire. Melons are a favored food — when available — of wild skunks, too.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our dog, Stubby, just about died last week. It all came about because of a ham sandwich. The sandwich was left over from the picnic and we forgot about it being in a box which we left in the garage. The next day, Stubby got deathly sick and we rushed him into the hospital. He was flushed out and we found out he had found that old ham sandwich and got poisoned from it. We are thankful he's all right now but I want to tell others to watch out for this. Next time we will take Stubby along so he can eat up all the picnic leftovers before they get spoiled. — F.D.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Dolly, our old cat, has been getting mad quite a bit lately. Now I think I've discovered why. I accidentally stuck my finger in her mouth and discovered one of her long fangs loose. She hated me for it, but didn't bite me hard. Maybe it was too sore? Anyway I want to help her get rid of that sore tooth but don't think it's such a big deal that I have to make a hospital case out of it. Is there anything wrong with just tying a strong thread to it and yanking it out? If that's all right, should I yank it forward, downward, or sideways? — E.J.

DEAR E.J.: Don't do it yourself — detooth, Dolly, that is. Not that I think she would let you lasso that tooth with a rope in the first place. Even is she did, you could fracture her tooth, or even her jaw, by yanking before the tooth is properly loosened. Nor can the proper direction be estimated without an actual examination. The doctor would use an anesthetic, unless the tooth were actually ready to fall out. And even if it were, an anesthetic would probably be indicated, anyway. Undoubtedly, the gums and the rest of the teeth need attention, Dolly wouldn't tolerate if she were awake at the time. (Almost any cat past middle age, and a good many prior to middle age, need some degree of dental care.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: Which makes the better pet and talker, a magpie or a crow? — N.H.

DEAR N.H.: I'd say it's a stand-off if room is no object. As far as conversational ability is concerned, crows can't keep up with a magpie though an exceptionally loquacious crow might argue that point. While either makes a fascinating pet, keep in mind that neither is to be trusted around other pets, particularly small ones. With rare exception, both crows and magpies will indulge in murder and meyhem if the opportunity presents itself.

DEAR DR. MILLER Friends shudder when I tell them my young cat, Penelope, likes to sleep curled up next to my feet, under the covers. Somehow she seems to get plenty of air down there, so I don't see how it could be harmful, do you? — N.R.

DEAR N.R.: If you accidentally kick her, she might "accidentally" bite a toe or two in self defence. Beyond that, you both should be reasonably safe. Certainly, Penelope is well protected from the elements. She could have a (different) problem if she was wearing a plastic flea collar. In such close quarters she might inhale enough toxic fumes from the collar to cause depression and/or to cause loss of co-ordination.

NEW HOUSE DESIGN — From the street this house, by architects K. R. D. Pratt & S. E. Lingreen of Winnipeg, does not give the impression of being a 3-bedroom split-level design.

The living room and the combined kitchen-dining room overlook the street and, with the entrance hall, they extend across the front of the house. Similarly the bedrooms extend across the back of the house overlooking the garden. Below the bedrooms are the heating, utility, and recreation rooms. These lower rooms would be at their best on a lot sloping down and away from the street.

The floor area is 974 square feet; the exterior dimensions are 37 feet by 27 feet. Working drawings of this house, know as Design 753, are available from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation at minimum cost.

Who Wants to Clean Up The Old Square Anyway?

By ALFRED FRIENDLY Jr.

MARRAKECH, Morocco — The modernization-minded mayor of Marrakech, second-largest city in Morocco, recently asked local hotel-keepers to set out ledgers in which guests could offer suggestions for "improving" the piazza known as Place Jemaa El Efno.

This concern with the busy spot in the middle of the old part of Marrakech touched off an explosion from Elizabeth Bauchet, a 24-year-old blonde who manages her parents' comfortable new Es Saadi hotel.

"I asked why they would want to improve something that is the major tourist attraction in the city just as it is," she recalled. "I am afraid the authorities think it should all be scrubbed and neat instead of shabby and crowded. The only real improvement the place needs is the removal of those dreary neon lights."

Sign of Progress

Miss Bauchet's own luxury hotel, scrubbed, neat and modern itself, is a sign of the progress that touches all parts of Marrakech. Even in the medina, where dark refuse-strewn alleys teem with playful urchins, new pressures and ways of life are evident.

A British traveler, Sir Joseph Dalton Hooker, had to spend the night in Marrakech 98 years ago and complained about the scorpion holes. Of the city as a whole he wrote:

"It would seem as if the most miserable suburbs of all the other towns of North Africa and Western Asia had been collected together and enclosed within a lofty wall, so that seen from without, the whole might be palmed off on mankind as the effigy of a great city."

Rented Homes

In the last few years, however, such pacesetters for the "beautiful people" as the designers Pierre Balmain and Yves St. Laurent, as well as the millionaire Jean Paul Getty Jr., have bought or rented vacation homes in Marrakech. Hippies are trooping in to cheaper quarters, lured by the promise of lethargic tolerance and easily obtained marijuana.

For the tourists of another kind a Holiday Inn is being built. It will open next fall not far from Es Saadi and the plush French-Moorish elegance of the old Mamounia Hotel.

Veiled Women

The main street into the medina has become so clogged with traffic that wheeled vehicles have been barred from 4 to 7 p.m. to give shoppers and donkeys a chance. There are still thousands of veiled women in the city, but even they, according to one young Moroccan, are more up-to-date than they seem.

"They wear the djellaba and the veil," he said, as a robed girl shot past on a motorbike, "not to keep tradition but to save themselves the trouble of putting on makeup just to go shopping."

The quietest crowds are those that surround the patriarchal storytellers, each of whom recites or reads ancient legends of the Arab conquest of North Africa or of the time seven centuries ago when Moorish power was at its zenith.

On July 7, the Republic of South Africa issued 2½-cent and 12½-cent stamps marking the 47th congress of the Medical Association of South Africa.

The 2½-cent value bears a portrait of Prof. Christiaan Barnard, and a view of Capetown's Groote Schuur Hospital. This stamp is also inscribed with the date on which Dr. Barnard led a surgery team in performing the world's first human heart transplant—Dec. 3, 1967.

Also in Groote Schuur Hospital, Dr. Barnard gave Dr. Philip Blaiberg a new heart on Jan. 2, 1968. A multicolor issued by the Yemen Arab Republic shows Dr. Barnard examining Blaiberg.

Portrayed on the 12½-cent denomination are hands holding a symbolic heart.

Dubai July 21 placed on sale four adhesives depicting a map of the Arabian peninsula and portraits of four noted Arabian explorers. They are: Johann Ludwig Burckhardt (1784-1817), Sir Richard Francis Burton (1821-90), Charles Montagu Doughty (1843-1926), and Wilfred Patrick Thesiger, DSO (b. 1910).

On Sept. 1, Trinidad and Tobago will release a set honoring the July 20 landing of men on the moon. The values are 6c, 40c and $1.

The U.S. today issued a multicolor featuring the state flower (camellia) and bird (yellowhammer) of Alabama. This 6-cent stamp was released in Huntsville, Alabama's first state capital. Also, it marks the 150th anniversary of Alabama's admission to the Union as the 22nd state.

Miss Bernice Kochan, who created the recent W. C. Handy stamp, designed this adhesive. The red camellia is in full bloom, and the yellowhammer, on the right hand portion of the design, is perched on a branch. The format is horizontal, and the colors are red (two shades), yellow and brown.

Aug. 18 is the date of issue of a French pictorial commemorating the 200th anniversary of the birth of Napoleon Bonaparte. This 70-centime stamp features a likeness of Napoleon, and the house in Ajaccio, Corsica where he was born on Aug. 15, 1769.

New Zealand, Aug. 18, is scheduled to release two pictorials showing a view of Kerikeri (4c), and an aerial view of the Bay of Islands (6c). Kerikeri, founded in 1819, is the oldest European settlement in New Zealand which is still in existance. This pair was Delacryl printed by Thomas de la Rue, London.

On July 18, Spain released two stamps depicting views of the British colony of Gibraltar.

A commemorative honoring the centenary of the birth of Mahatma Gandhi (1869-1948) will be issued Aug. 13 by Great Britain. This 1s 6d green, black and orange stamp features a portrait of Gandhi. In the background is the flag of India. The creator of this photogravure printed issue is the Indian illustrator and graphic designer Biman Mullick.

To pay tribute to the successful Apollo 11 mission, Grenada will release an appropriate set. (Values: ½c, 1c, 2c, 8c, 25c, 35c, 50c and $1.)

Mild Climate of Island Dictates 'Drastic' Rule

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

Stop all fertilizing of permanent plants and reduce the watering. That, in a nutshell, is the Pacific Coast gardener's instructions for August.

This may sound drastic in mid-summer, but rules of this kind are not just a whim. Behind them lies experience and reasoning. Once we understand the reason the idea seems less radical.

It all hinges on our widely publicized mild winter climate which is occasionally punctuated by an outburst of frigid arctic air.

These cold air masses are of short duration, yet can do severe damage to plants that never become completely dormant.

Here on the west coast, summers are characterized by little natural precipitation, and temperatures in the 70 to 80 degree range.

Under these conditions growth slows down and plant cells harden. In the wild we find many native plants and trees that are definitely wilting.

This is a natural and beneficial process as far as the plants are concerned, but something the aesthetic gardener cannot tolerate in his home grounds. Since the landscaping of property became a status symbol.

Thus our efforts to maintain appearances by shot-in-the-arm fertilizing and continued frequent watering result in increasing soft growth and unnecessary winter losses.

In past cold winters it has been evident that gardens neglected during previous summer suffered less damage than those receiving normal attention.

Any fertilizer applied now will have effect on plants in September when growth naturally becomes a little more active.

This boost, coupled with fall rains and mild temperatures until Christmas causes normal fall growth to become abnormal to the detriment of the plants.

The gardener's main concern now is to obtain as near a natural maturing, or hardening, as possible. To do so presents problems.

Tips for The Home Gardener

Obviously, there are exceptions to the rule.

It is worth repeating that only permanent plants are involved, that is, shrubs, trees, and perennials that are to remain in the garden year after year.

The only exception is the lawn (also perennial).

Watering of this area is continued as necessary, the 30-day booster feeding is given, and the essential Labor Day complete feeding is needed to strengthen the grass plants for winter, for their growth habit differs from the woody plants.

While we are maintaining the lawn it is important to see that adjacent plantings of shrubs and trees are not included.

Some will have roots under the lawn and obtain more water and food than desirable, but this cannot be avoided.

Annuals (summer bedding plants), the fall flowering herbaceous perennials, and vegetables, must still receive food and water necessary to good growth.

Just how much watering of permanent plants should be decreased depends on many factors that vary considerably from garden to garden.

At this point the gardener blessed with Solomon's reputed widsom has a distinct advantage.

It is not logical to allow plants to suffer from drought. The amount of water needed to maintain life in a sandy well-drained soil will be more than needed in a clay or humus-filled soil.

Another factor will be the adequacy of watering done since end of April.

Majority of gardens have been only surface watered, the mist of foliage and humidity rising from the surface doing more good than the meagre supply of water reaching roots.

Under these conditions, any drastic decrease in watering would precipitate drought conditions.

Plants in gardens that received the recommended one-inch of water every 10 days since April will have received water down to the roots.

These plants could well survive with frequent misting of water over the foilage and less at the roots.

Many gardeners feel that rhodos, and other spring flowering shrubs which are now making buds, should be fertilized.

The point not realized that fertilizer applied now will not affect bud formation. It is the fertilizer applied before the end of April that determines quality and quantity of buds.

So we come back to our first statement. Stop all fertilizing of permanent plants and reduce the amount of water from the beginning of August.

And we can add, use judgement and sound reasoning in the process.

WEEK'S WORK

Wallflowers for fragrant spring blooms are now in seedling stage if sown in June, and should be kept growing steadily. Use a little lime when pricking out and transplanting for they belong to cabbage family and dislike acid peat.

Fall crocuses and colchicums must be planted at once if wanted for bloom this fall.

Cut off old flower stems from kniphofia (Redhot-poker), hemerocallis (Daylily) when all buds have opened, erigerons with their daisy-like flowers, and heleniums.

Some of these plants will produce more blooms in a few weeks time after this treatment.

One last deep watering can be given to peonies. The hairy feeding roots are six to ten inches below soil level.

Bend over onion tops if bulbs have sized up to normal for variety grown.

Once this is done, no more water or the onion neck will continue growing. This spoils flavor and induces rot in storage.

This weekend make last sowing of lettuce, green onions, radish, carrot, beet, purple top turnip; and Flower of Spring cabbage for spring use.

Kale, broccoli and winter cabbage plants should be in now or they miss the chance of taking advantage of cool fall weather for growing rapidly.

Slimming Subjects Sought

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Heart Foundation and the University of Toronto are looking for overweight Canadians for a slim-and-stay-slim diet program to start in October.

The research program will take four groups of 20 men and women — not more than 50 pounds overweight — for a three-month course designed to re-organize eating habits so the individual can lose weight and keep it off.

Dr. Barbara McLaren, dean of the university's faculty of food sciences, said the levels of cholesterol, magnesium and vitamin A in the blood will be checked in an attempt to find out how they are related to heart attacks and dietary problems.

Applicants must be between 20 and 55 years old, 20 to 50 pounds overweight, and have at least Grade 9 education.

The courses will involve one hour a week at the food sciences faculty, with a two-week break at Christmas to observe how well course members stand up to the festivities.

Dr. McLaren said vitamin A levels are being checked because autopsy studies carried out by a Canadian researcher have shown that liver specimens of persons living in major cities across the country have abnormally low stores of vitamin A.

More About Eaton's

EATON 100 1869-1969

This sign tells you it's a banner year for Eaton's. It's the year we celebrate our 100th birthday and it's a time-journey that takes us from a little shop on Younge Street in Toronto to one of the largest retail organizations in the Commonwealth. That first store that opened it's doors for business on Dec. 8th in 1869 carried such nostalgic merchandise as mourning goods, staple haberdashery, velvet bonnets and over 4,000 yards of Winceys from 5c per yard. To customers used to dickering over price, Mr. Eaton's one-price policy was a pleasant surprise and his slogan: "Goods Satisfactory or Money Refunded" was such an extraordinary customer privilege 100 years ago that it was no wonder he won public confidence right from the first day.

Well, here we are in 1969 — the year man walks on the moon and the whole world watches — it's a different life-style, but the merchandising policies that made that first Eaton store so successful 100 years ago are still in effect across the breadth of Canada.

To celebrate, we bring you Century Specials, top quality merchandise that's timely and exceptionally low priced, plus some items specially designed to mark our anniversary. For instance:

the Timothy Eaton Rose

many a Canadian garden is all the prettier for this hybrid rose that blossoms in a profusion of coral-pink blooms.

Centennial Rock Candy

Centennial Yardage

A far cry from the barege, gauze, wincey, tarlatan and sarsenette fabrics that fashioned the polonaises and paletots, the panniers and basques of that Victorian era . . . This cotton Guipure lace (can't you see fashion historians 100 years from now chuckling over that one) is dyed a special clear apricot-pink colour to mark our Birthday. It's a fashion inspiration for the woman who sews . . . 36" wide for 14.95 per yard.

Bomb Throwers Are 'Bums' PM Tells Quebec Audience

ST. GEORGES DE BEAUCE, Que. (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau wound up a successful half-day visit to this community Friday mixing his usual carefree elan with some hard words for a minority of "bums" who throw bombs.

It was a date Mr. Trudeau was more than a month late in keeping.

The local St. Jean Baptiste Society had invited Mr. Trudeau to attend its June 24 celebrations after the society branch in Sherbrooke withdrew its invitation in the face of terrorist threat and a bomb explosion.

"You don't back down because of a few thugs who set off bombs and that's why I wanted to meet you," the prime minister said in French.

The people here were obviously keen on meeting Mr. Trudeau. More than 3,000 turned out to cheer when he was introduced by Richard Busque, president of the local branch of the St. Jean Baptiste Society.

Mr. Trudeau later flew to Roberval, 100 miles north of Quebec City, to open a 25-mile marathon swim today at Lac St. Jean.

He was showered with kisses, smiles and handshakes as he drove in an open convertible to the arena where he was to speak in St. Georges de Beauce, about 55 miles south of Quebec City.

One incident was noticed.

PULLED KNIFE

Mr. Trudeau turned and the man pulled what appeared to be a hunting knife from his pocket, lifted it and glared at the prime minister. The event passed unnoticed by five Mounties in a car close behind.

In his speech, Mr. Trudeau said:

"We need you and Canada needs Quebec. Quebec is the heart of Canada. Without Quebec, Canada will not have its heart and Canadian life will end.

"As long as we have people like you in this country, it will be safe."

He added, however, that when elected politicians permit a small minority of "bums, a small minority of maniacs" to push them around, freedom is on the way out.

No Chance for Diplomacy As Long as Mao in Power

By HARRISON SALISBURY
New York Times

Premier Tsedenbal of Mongolia, whose country is on the front line of the Sino-Soviet dispute, spoke openly with me of Chinese attempts to overthrow his regime and of actual Chinese aggression along his frontier.

He believes Mao is determined to bring Mongolia once more under Chinese sway, and he thinks there is no longer hope of resolving the quarrel by diplomatic means.

Mao is not to be reasoned with. So long as he remains in power, the danger to Mongolia, to Russia, to all of China's neighbors, will continue.

Tsedenbal—a veteran of the war against Japan—recalls the similar threat that the Japanese posed to Mongolia and the Soviet Union in the heyday of Japan's Kwantung Army.

And he notes how that threat was met by the savage defeat inflicted on Japan's Sixth Army by Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov in the summer of 1939, and then eliminated by the lightning thrust of Soviet and Mongol forces in a two-week campaign in August, 1945.

Last in a Series

Tsedenbal's thinking is echoed in Moscow, where books, military studies and memoirs pour out about the Zhukov campaign at Khalkhin Gol River in eastern Mongolia, and about the Soviet blitzkrieg against Japan by Marshals Vasilevsky and Malinovsky at the end of the Second World War.

It is no coincidence that Russia's tank forces today are deployed in the same positions they occupied in August, 1939, and August, 1945.

MORE GLOOMY

Will there be a new Khalkhin Gol? That is the question debated behind the scenes in Moscow.

The party leaders are more and more gloomy over the chance for a peaceful or diplomatic solution with China. They share Tsedenbal's view that there is no hope as long as Mao lives.

Whether the situation might improve with Mao's death is a question for argument.

Some of the older leaders, men no longer in power like Anastas I. Mikoyan and Nikita Khrushchev, are said to believe there is a chance that, once Mao is out of the way, China will moderate her policy and some kind of modus vivendi might be worked out.

MAJORITY

But younger leaders, possibly a majority of the Politburo, seem to have lost hope for a peaceful solution.

Nixon Cheered By Romanians

Bucharest Visit Irks Russians

BUCHAREST (AP) — President Nixon arrived in this Communist capital today to the most enthusiastic welcome of his world tour, with thousands lining the streets.

He told them the United States is ready to help set up a Europe "free from the fear of war or threats of war."

So great was the outpouring of Romanians that the motorcade carrying Nixon and President Nicolae Ceausescu was stopped three times en route from the airport to downtown Bucharest. Nixon left his car to shake outstretched hands.

Along the route he called out in Romanian: 'Long live Romanian-American friendship' and there were cries of 'Hoo-rah' while others tossed bouquets at him. The throngs waved U.S. and Romanian flags.

Ceausescu had welcomed Nixon on his arrival from Pakistan stressing peaceful co-existence as "a safe way of building a climate of confidence."

Nixon, the first American president to visit a Communist capital, was once or twice shoved off balance by the people pressing around him, but he never lost his footing.

CAME IN FRIENDSHIP

Nowhere in the six Asian nations Nixon visited earlier on his 25,000-mile tour did the greeting crowds seem so genuinely friendly. Some Romanians appeared moved to the point of tears. Nixon obviously was elated.

In his airport speech, Nixon declared: "Let us agree at the outset to be frank with each other . . . but nations can have widely different internal orders and live in peace. The United States believes that the rights of all nations must be equal."

In his welcoming remarks, Ceausescu said he recalled with satisfaction the meeting he had with Nixon two years ago.

He said the frankness of those meetings will prevail during their talks today and Sunday.

He stressed the necessity for the development of friendly relations and peaceful coexistence as "a safe way of building a climate of confidence."

U.S. WILL RESPOND

With his words translated into Romanian as he spoke, Nixon began reading from a prepared text for the first time on the trip. He said, the United States stands ready "to respond firmly and positively to sincere and concrete initiatives that others make."

The road from the airport to Bucharest 12 miles away was lined with soldiers armed with automatic rifles. Above them the American Stars and Stripes

Papal Visit, Peace Bid Concluded

KAMPALA (AP) — Making no announcement of success in his efforts to arrange peace talks for war-torn Nigeria, Pope Paul left for Rome today after spending three days in Uganda on his eighth trip abroad as Roman Catholic pontiff.

The Pope talked with a three-man delegation from the secessionist Nigerian state of Biafra just before ending his visit but there was no announcement of any progress toward peace.

Augustine Okwu, Biafra's diplomatic representative in East Africa and one of three Biafran representatives who are here to help Pope Paul get peace talks going, said he had a "friendly, fruitful and understanding" meeting with the pontiff Friday.

Okwu said he thought the Pope's efforts had been helpful, but added that "nothing has been excluded and nothing has been decided yet" on the possibility of peace talks.

Pope Paul also met with a federal Nigerian delegation and with a Ugandan team led by President Milton Obote, who has taken a leading role in trying to get talks started.

Fish Strike Ordered

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's 4,000 salmon net fishermen have voted in favor of a strike Aug. 9, by a 70 per cent margin, the Fishermen's Union announced Friday.

The decision was the result of a coast-wide ballot which began July 23 among the fishermen, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Native Brotherhood of B.C.

The fishermen have turned down several offers for salmon prices made by the Fisherieries Association and said Friday all salmon net fishing will cease Aug. 9 if an agreement is not reached.

Romanians give U.S. President Nixon enthusiastic welcome.

McGEER'S PLEDGES DRAW PICNIC CHEERS

He made the pledge while meeting with youngsters at a picnic here on his election campaign tour of the Interior to build support for the August 27 vote.

Later, he promised a finance authority to enable municipalities to market bonds and called for a study of education in independent schools in B.C.

Today he was scheduled to stump in Kimberley, Fernie and Cranbrook.

Old Faithful Rise —With Difficulty

KELOWNA—They rose to give him a standing ovation as he entered the Elks' Hall here, and for many it was a physical struggle to get up.

These were about 100 old friends gathered to give "Cece" Bennett his 10th nomination as a candidate in South Okanagan.

This was not a young crowd.

Many had been at the first nomination 28 years ago.

The candidate looked campaign-fit as he made his way to the platform. Giving no evidence that age has any justification as an election issue, he flashed the smile as brightly as ever, and on cue.

Handling a barrage of questions after the meeting and enjoying his own election answers, he appeared fresh and eager for battle.

Premier Bennett will be 69 on Sept. 6.

No matter who wins the election Aug. 27, Friday may have marked the beginning of the end of an era in British Columbia.

If a majority government is returned in August, Bennett could be 74 at the next election.

This could be his last campaign.

When asked last week if he had any thoughts about retiring, Bennett quickly replied "as long as God gives me the strength, I'll continue to serve the people of this province—it's my life."

Friday his speech betrayed

Bennett Promises Pension Increase

By Times Reporter

KELOWNA — Opposition election promises paled Friday before Premier Bennett's offerings for everyone in the province if Social Credit is returned to power Aug. 27.

"Dividends of progress" he called the vote-catching program, which he promised would be included in the next budget.

Before about 100 of his hometown supporters at his nomination meeting, Bennett's enticements for another term included:

- Grants to people who want to buy older houses.
- Increased old-age pensions.
- Increased social assistance allowances.
- Increased educational grants on all levels.
- Increased funds for health services and hospital construction.

"This will all be done without any increase in taxes," he said.

After the meeting Bennett refused to elaborate on how the new schemes would affect the 1970 budget.

"More will be said during the

50-Year Veteran Leaves City Hall

CIGAR IN HAND, James Marrs, all-time, longest City Hall employee leaves building for last time as retirement winds up 50-year job that began in 1919 and ran through 13 administrations.

By SUSAN RILEY

James Marrs jabbed out his cigar and walked out of Victoria City Hall Thursday just as he has done every day for 50 years and five months.

But this time he wasn't coming back.

The all-time, longest, City Hall employee retired at 64, ending a career which took him through 13 administrations and several different bosses and co-workers.

"At one time I knew everyone here," said Marrs before he dashed off to a farewell ceremony Thursday.

"Now I don't know many of the office girls. They seem to come and go."

Marrs was Collector of Water Rates, the third the city has ever had. In some murky, unwritten legend Marrs' former boss is supposed to have held the job a long time.

But not as long as Marrs has.

When he started in 1919 at the age of 14 he wasn't a rookie kid, straight out of school. It was his third job. He started working when he was 12.

City Hall was different then. Quebec heaters were used to heat the building. Tax notices and water bills were written by hand, and there was no Centennial Square.

"I remember when they brought in the first cash register," said Marrs.

It was around 1921 or so. One old fellow said it was the beginning of the end and quit in protest.

Marrs, who lives at 723 Selkirk, isn't a person who discusses only the past and he isn't laying down the pencil and heading straight for the golf course either.

He is managing director of Holyrood House and will make that a full-time job now.

"Ah, I've travelled and lay around beaches many times in the past," he said. "I don't want to rest now—you become inactive."

"I have lots to do and now, I got some time to do it."

with confidence of their ability to deal with China quickly; a swift strike, as was carried out in 1939 and 1945; a pre-emptive nuclear blow at the Chinese nuclear facilities; the seizure of Peking within 10 days or less; and the replacement of the "mad" Mao regime with one a genuine Communist, friendly to Moscow.

It is a tempting scenario for statesmen weary of polemics and worried about the population and growing nuclear swat of China, not to mention the unresolvable ideological struggle.

It is the kind of temptation that Japan's military men dangled before their government in the days before Japanese involvement in the Chinese morass.

No one knows for sure whether there are those in Moscow who recall the Japanese adventure—the brave Japanese hopes and the disaster that followed—or who realistically relate a Soviet blitzkrieg to China's population of 800 or 900 million; to the highly politicized Chinese masses; to the militarized leadership of the Mao regime; to the patriotic chauvinism that war with Russia would stimulate; to the existence of Chinese plans to fight a 100-year war, if necessary, against a nuclear power; to the ability of China to absorb and contain the elite Soviet missile and armored forces; to the potential that China possesses for nuclear retaliation.

And what about the ease with which a "short, swift war" on the Mongolian frontier might escalate to embrace all of Aisia and the world?

The Russian peoole, with their deep instincts and profound abhorrence for and fear of war, have shown that they do not trust the Kremlin's ability to abstain from military adventure.

When reports of the Ussuri fighting reached Moscow last spring, there was a brief but poignant panic. Ordinary Russians suddenly became possessed of the fear that war with China might be at hand.

Some rushed to the stores and bought canned goods and sausage — war has always mant a food shortage in Russia. Others rather pathetically sought out Americans and asked whether the United States would stand with Russia in the event of war with China.

It is a question that may demand an answer sooner than many Americans think.

SETTLE DIFFERENCES

Washington has explored the dilemma only in superficial terms, although Russian diplomats have, for at least three years, urged that the United States and Russia settle their differences so they can present a united front to the "China danger."

The United States occupies a key position in the Sino-Soviet conflict. Both Russia and China have indicated (the Russians bluntly, and the Chinese in very subtle fashion) that, if it comes to war, they would like the United States to be on their side — or at least neutral.

Continental war between Russia and China, employing nuclear weapons, would place North America in grave peril of fatal nuclear fallout. The U.S. would face direct involvement in the conflict if, as would seem likely, it spread to other Asian states, notably India, Pakistan and Japan.

An increasing number of Washington specialists have begun to urge that the United States employ its diplomatic and military weight, not to give favor either to Russia or China, but to try to avert the conflict and halt the prospect of a world catastrope.

To do so would require radical changes in U.S. policy vis-a-vis China. At present, the United States has virtually no contact with the Chinese Communists, and, if American influence is to be utilized effectively, it will have to be felt both in Moscow and Peking.

No one understimates the difficulties this presents. But the results could make the difference between continental Armageddon and global security.

He explained the new home-owner grant was designed to assist the renter who can't afford a new home and wants to buy an older house.

"There will be an option between a cash grant and a second mortgage at less cost than the federal government's first mortgage rate."

The government now offers a $1,000 grant or a $5,000 second mortgage but this is restricted to people buying new homes. "That program has been a fantastic success," said Bennett.

Bennett described his announcements as "a peek into some of our policies for the 70s."

"We're in the financial shape to do it," he said.

He claimed B.C. is the only government in North America that doesn't owe money to banking institutions.

OWE MONEY

"Banking institutions owe money to you through us," he said.

He said the debt-free Socred government receives 8.22 per cent on short terms loans and this interest is being used to carry out programs.

During his 40-minute nomination speech, Bennett ridiculed criticism of his election call during the third year of a five year mandate.

"They call it a snap election. How can they call it a snap election if it comes regularly every three years?"

"The other parties later said to stop playing cat and mouse and call an election.

"They were bluffing when they asked for an election and they'll be bluffing election day too."

Bennett said the NDP policy of taking over the B.C. Telephone company indicated that leader Tom Berger is "either stupid or politically dishonest."

"Because it's a federal corporation he can't take it over, and if he does he couldn't finance it."

Berger would be unable to sell bonds anywhere, Bennett predicted. "I've occupied the pasture in that field."

Glancing at his watch Bennett said it was exactly the same time, 8:45 p.m., 17 years ago that he was gathering his group of "untried people" and hustling them up to government house to be sworn in as his cabinet.

"Looking back over 17 years not even the most ambitious Social Credit member would have believed we could accomplish so much."

Bennett recalled the days before Social Credit when the province had "wonderful pioneers, resources and location but no government leadership."

He then listed the achievements during Socred rule, winding up with the establishment of $130 million in trust funds during the last legislature.

"And after we had done all that we still had $50 million in cash."

WORKINNG MAN

Bennett issued the oft-repeated warning against socialism. "If you let those NDP people in, who are they going to hit first — the working man, and right in his pocket book."

He said the opposition has priased his government for past achievments but keeps insisting a new age has dawned.

"This is a new day. And that is why we have asked for a mandate for the great thrust into the decade of the 70s."

Bennett speaks again tonight in Vernon that rally to climax the Socred 17th anniversary celebration there. Sunday he flies to Quebec City and a three-day provincial premiers' conference.

Thursday he is back in Vancouver where he is expected to unveil plans for his campaign tour.

. . . NIXON

and Romania's red, yellow and blue national flag fluttered.

Romanian authorities had prepared a friendly, but not over-enthusiastic welcome, apparently hot wanting to irk Moscow more than necessary.

But workers were let off today three hours early to see Nixon. All hotel rooms in Bucharest were reported full, and the Nixon schedule appeared geared for maximum public exposure.

The Soviet Union has indirectly criticized Nixon's visit in its official newspapers. A Soviet naval detachment recently visited Cuba in what was generally regarded as the Kremlin's response to Nixon's "intrusion" into Eastern Europe.

Nixon will hold lengthy talks with Romania's Communist party chief, Nicolae Ceausescu, whom he last met on a 1967 visit to Bucharest as a private citizen. On that fact-finding tour Nixon was cold-shouldered in Moscow and was refused a visa to Poland.

no hint of retirement. But it was laced with reminiscences all the way back to 1941.

"Years ago I found it difficult to speak in public," said Bennett. "Years later I found it too easy.

"I still find it difficult to speak here in Kelowna. I'm not going to let go tonight or my emotions will get the best of me.

"I've been in public life since 1941 and you have continued to support me even though I've changed once or twice."

Grey heads nodded silently. He recalled 1951:

"When I walked across the floor of the legislature I came home to Kelowna to report. We had to hold two meetings in the old Empress Theatre and both passed resolutions unanimously supporting my stand."

MORE NODS

They remembered with applause and more nods.

He recalled 1952 when he first ran as a Socred. "A friend told me that with four names on the ballot there's 'no room for you Cece'."

That was the year the Socreds made their stunning appearance on centre stage in the B.C. political theatre.

"We are the reform movement within the free enterprise system. That's why we've lasted so long," said Bennett.

Then he was off again, the dam builder, innovator, talking about bigger projects for the 1970s.

His nominator, Henry Mohr, a Summerland truck driver, was applauded several times as he talked of "the good job our premier has done all these years."

The grey heads leaned forward as Bennett's local campaign manager since 1948, Ted Dobb, warned them about apathy.

BIG INCREASE

"There has been a 45 per cent increase in the voters list in this riding since the 1966 election," he said.

But the people at the meeting were not worried abouth South Okanagan, where in 1966 Bennett polled four times the number of votes of his combined opponents.

When the Premier accepted the candidacy by acclamation, the people who had been with him through 10 nominations stood for another ovation, and most of them took some time to get to their feet.

Perfect Gift For Wedding

When Abel Rosal and Ruth Maria Vieira arrived home after their wedding ceremony, they discovered a cardboard box with holes punched in it among a pile of presents waiting to be opened.

Inside was an infant boy and a note reading: "Present from a mother in no condition to educate this baby."

The couple decided to adopt the boy.

New Jersey Couple Selected

Victoria Jaycees today named Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Green from Newark, N.J., tourists of the week.

Green, 25, is an aeronautical engineer.

He and his wife, also 25, will stay at the Red Lion Motor Inn, eat at the Victoria Room, the Oak Bay Marina and the Douglas Hotel and be escorted around the city by Miss Victoria, Laurie Paul and Jaycee President Stan Wallis and his wife.

Swimming Lessons Set

Lessons will be offered for children six years and over who want to learn to swim at the YW-YMCA.

The classes will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings or Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. Cost is $5 for six lessons.

TRAWLER MISSING AFTER EXPLOSION

ROEDBYHAVN, Denmark (Reuters) — The 14-ton Roedbyhavn trawler Tabor disappeared after hitting a mine five miles southwest of this southern Danish port today, police said.

Trawlers from the area put to sea in search for the crew of two reported missing.

The crew of another ship only 500 yards away said they heard a terrific explosion and saw a huge cloud of smoke billowing up from the sea. When the smoke disappeared there was no trace of the Tabor, they said.

The area is studded with mines and official warnings have been issued to shipping to enter it with caution.

U.S. Farm Pesticide Crippling Thousands

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pesticide he said was first developed as a German nerve gas in the Second World War has crippled thousands of American farmers and migrant workers, the president of a research firm told the Senate on Friday.

Jerome B. Gordon, head of Delphic Systems and Research, testified before the Senate subcommittee on migratory labor about parathion and related pesticides.

More than 50,000,000 pounds of the pesticide are being spread unchecked on farms and gardens in the United States, Gordon said.

"The result is that uncounted thousands of the nation's migrant farm workers, farmers and suburban homeowners have been fatally overcome or seriously crippled," he said.

Charles C. Johnson, administrator of the consumer protection and environmental health service of the department of health, education and welfare, said studies indicate that in general workers using pesticides are exposed to relatively small fractions of what is considered toxic dosages.

He said that when use of pesticides result in residues on a crop, the department withholds registration until a safe tolerance has been established.

Dr. Samuel Simmons of the food and drug administration told the senators that 150 to 200 persons may be killed by pesticides each year and an estimated 100 times that number may be injured.

Gordon said that big users of what he described as the nerve gas sprays are commercial fruit-crop growers in California and cotton producers in Mississippi and Texas.

Gordon said the pesticides are called organic phosphors and appear under such trade names as parathion, methyl parathion, TEPP and—in less lethal doses—as malathion. He said they are first cousins, chemically, to the nerve agents GB and VX involved in the current chemical and biological warfare controversy.

Fast-Braking Policeman Thrown on Car

Gerald Cox, a Victoria motorcycle constable, was injured Friday evening when he skidded after braking sharply to avoid an abruptly-braking car.

He is in "fairly good" condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital with a fractured right pelvis, two broken ribs, and back injuries.

He was pursuing a car driven north on Fernwood by Robert Caldwell, 2624 Fernwood, when Caldwell braked sharply for an amber light at the intersection of Gernwood and Bay.

When Cox hastily applied the brakes on his motorcycle, it went into a skid and he was thrown head-first on the trunk-lid of Caldwell's car.

The motorcycle itself did not come into contact with the car, police said.

Damage to the motorcycle was estimated at $150, and to the car, $50.

Two small girls are in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today as the result of an accident at Friday afternoon.

Scholarships To Americans

TORONTO (CP) — American students received one of every 12 graduate fellowships granted last year by the Ontario government, a department of university affairs official said Friday.

The fellowships are for $1,500 each and about a quarter of those issued went to landed immigrants, said Lin Peebles, the department's director of information. He said about a third of the landed immigrants were Americans.

The government spent $4,511,000 last year on graduate and supplemental fellowships and $376,000 of the tatal was paid to Americans, Peebles said.

The figures were announced by the department after a report was released charging that several departments at the University of Waterloo have become too greatly Americanized.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

All the proof my family and I will ever need about air pollution from autos we have obtained by the device of moving from one area to another within the city limits of our town. Our former house was once situated 100 feet from a hidden country road that became a roaring six-lane defence access highway. Over the 13 years we lived there, we were aware of the gradual increase of auto engine exhaust fumes, to say nothing of the traffic.

Then we built a house two miles closer to downtown, but two miles north of the way the population trend was moving. Our new place is an enclave of 16 blocks of 10 acres each, divided by dusty, unpaved streets for horse riding. There is, of course, little traffic from the outside.

Our weather, in spite of the dust, is better than the weather in the place from which we moved. We don't smell auto fumes. When we visit our old neighborhood our friends say they're so used to the smell of hydrocarbons they don't notice it any more, though they breathe it.

TWICE AROUND NETS GOOD HAUL

MIAMI (AP) — "Hey buddy, we're back again," a gunman announced the second time he robbed bartender Ed Gardner Friday in two stickups netting about $13,000. Gardner, manager of the Harmony Lounge, said two men with pistols robbed his bar of $100 around 8:15 a.m. About 2 p.m., Gardner said he looked up and saw the same two men with guns. Gardner said he opened the safe and dumped some $13,000 in small bills into a cardboard box held by the robber.

Toronto Market In Puppet Role

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets played the puppet this week, Wall Street the puppeteer and the United States economy the strings.

Following New York markets, Canadian markets continued their June-July slump Monday and Tuesday. But a combination of rumors and fact gave investors their first glimmer of hope in about a month.

The rumors — that a major U.S. bank was about to lower its prime rate — were floated Wednesday and picked up enough believers to turn what looked like another sharp setback into a small advance.

Although the rumors were denied, the momentum carried over into Thursday when tentative approval by the U.S. Senate of a six-month extension of the 10-per-cent tax surcharge was reached.

The surcharge could help bring inflation under control, and possibly enable lowering of record-high interest rates in the U.S. and, in turn, Canada.

The battle on inflation by both Canadian and American governments created a tight money situation which sent North American markets on their two-month plunge.

The upswing of prices attracted courageous bargain-hunters who snapped up blue-chip stocks at relatively low prices.

Hopes were that markets had reached their bottom and now would move into a sustained rally.

But volume, although heavier than the previous week, was light. Many still remembered the fate of the markets' previous attempt at a rally in the first week of July.

However, there have been signs of a slow-down in the rate of inflation.

Statistically, on index at Toronto, industrials gained 1.92 to 171.40 and western oils 2.31 to 230.43. Golds fell 31.04 to 172.32 and base metals .11 to 101.45. Volume was 11,658,000 shares, compared with 9,763,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 454 to 313. On the Canadian and Montreal exchanges, the composite index gained 2.50 to 168.97. Combined volume was 3,643,000 shares, compared with 2,894,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 212 to 114.

OTTAWA ANNOUNCES BUDGETARY SURPLUS

OTTAWA (CP) — The finance department Friday announced a $32,000,000 budgetary surplus for June, compared with a $142,000,000 deficit in the same month last year.

Budgetary revenues in June this year were $903,000,000 and expenditures $871,000,000.

In June, 1968, government revenues totalled $630,000,000 and expenditures were 762,000,000.

The surplus for the first three months of the year was $648,000,000, an increase from the $13,000,000 surplus for the same period last year.

Wall St. Volume Shows Big Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Sliding easily through an important psychological level, the stock market appeared headed for another steep loss. But it turned abruptly in midweek and rallied briskly the rest of the way to finish the week a winner.

The Dow Jones industrial average, after two days of loss that saw it close Tuesday at its lowest level since Jan. 4, 1967, slid through the 800 level in the first half-hour of trading Wednesday.

Analysts said the 800, like other hundred levels on the Dow indicator, was "important psychologically to some because when you penetrate such a level it has a bearish significance to some investors, and you get selling."

By noon that day the Dow Jones was off more than 9 points, then turned, overcame its loss, and finished the session with a small gain. It then went on to gain more than 11 points in each of its next two sessions and finished the week up 8.53 at 826.59, compared with a 27.86 point loss the week before. It was the first time the Dow Jones had finished ahead since the week ended July 4.

How long or how far the advance will carry is not sure, but some analysts think it might go to the 860 level on the Dow Jones before running into resistance.

Turnover for the week on the Big Board totalled 70,261,890 shares, compared with 41,036,990 shares the week before. The volume was the heaviest since the week ended May 2, when 72,666,410 shares were traded.

Of 1,720 issues traded on the Big Board during the week, 857 advanced, 759 declined, and 104 were unchanged. The previous week saw 1,340 declines, 238 advances, and 116 unchanged.

There were two new highs for the year and 1,096 new lows, compared with five new highs and 727 new lows the week earlier.

The five most-active stocks on the New York Exchange during the week were:

GM Leads Fight Against Steel Hike

WASHINGTON (WP) — General Motors Corp. Friday indicated that it would resist the steel price increase of 4.8 per cent announced Wednesday by U.S. Steel, but the U.S. government remained silent, awaiting a decision by President Nixon on whether to press for a rollback.

Meanwhile, Bethlehem Steel Corp., second largest producer, announced increases similar to Big Steel's, while other industries chimed in with price boosts in copper, aluminum and gypsum that promised further complications for an already worrisome inflation problem.

GM's surprise move was in the form of a telegram from its Fisher body division to U.S. Steel, instructing that processing and shipment of its steel orders be suspended "pending re-evaluation of the competitive situation with respect to steel prices."

The potential impact of GM's resistance was difficult to evaluate. The Ford Motor Co. later said that it was "studying the effects" of the price increase, while Chrysler Corp. said it was buying at a normal pace.

GM, which consumes about 10 per cent of total steel production, sent similar suspension orders on its purchases to other steel companies that raised prices.

Although Vice-President Agnew said this week that the Nixon administration was "not happy" with the price increase in steel, there was nothing to suggest Friday that the government was preparing background material or memoranda to support the notion of a rollback.

Informed officials indicated there was no change in the basic position frequently outlined by economic council chairman Paul W. McCracken that "jawboning" against price increases is neither morally defensible nor much real use in controlling inflation.

In view of Agnew's statement that any rollback decision would await President Nixon's return, however, it was thought likely that there would be some kind of White House statement later on.

Meanwhile, Rep. Henry Reuss (D—Wis.) charged that the administration had a blind spot in its refusal to consider some kind of wage-price guideposts. He introduced a bill that would direct the economic council to formulate wage-price guidelines.

So far, in addition to U.S. Steel and Bethlehem, Inland Steel, Kaiser Steel Corp. and the Armco Steel Corp. have raised steel prices. The price boosts on sheet steel widely used in the auto industry are about the same, but some of the increases on galvanized steel were less than U.S. Steel's hike.

Pipeline Net Income Shows Drop

TORONTO (CP) — Net income of Trans Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. for the six months ended June 30 was $5,012,000, or 61 cents a share, about 28 per cent down from the $7,047,000 or 86 cents a share, earned in the comparable 1968 period.

The company said the decline was caused by the shut down of the northern Ontario section of the Trans-Canada pipeline this spring for testing and upgrading.

However it said the effect of the closure on the year's results will not be significant.

The plan to improve efficiency of the line, which brings natural gas from Alberta to eastern Canada, will cost about $8,000,000 this year and require total added facilities worth about $45,000,000.

REVENUE UP

The company said its operating revenue for the first six months of this year was nearly 15 per cent more than in the similar 1968 period, total sales for 1969 are estimated at slightly more than 600,000,000,000 cubic feet compared with 516,000,000,000 cubic feet last year.

It said it plans to submit an application for "just and reasonable rates" to the National Energy Board soon, since present return on gas sales is not sufficient to finance future expansion.

"The adverse effects of increasing costs, particularly that of borrowed funds, can no longer be offset by increased efficiency alone," J. W. Kerr, chairman, said in a statement.

Price Co.

Price Co. Ltd. and subsidiary companies have reported net earnings of $4.7 million or 48 cents a share for the first six months of 1969 compared with $3.1 million or 32 cents in the corresponding period last year.

Sales for the six-month period this year totalled $81.4 million, a gain of $9.5 million or 13 per cent over the corresponding 1968 period.

Jones, Laughlin

Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp. says second quarter earnings for 1969 slumped $3,600,000 from the same period last year.

The company said second quarter net income for this year was $9 million, or 62 cents a share, compared with $13.5 million, or 84 cents a share, for the second quarter of 1968.

Sales also were off, from $305.3 million last year to $281.8 million this year.

Ottawa Aids Venezuelan Development

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal mines department will help Venezuela in its minerals development through provision of technical advice and general information, a mines department official said this week.

Venezuelan Mines Minister Hugo Perez la Salvia, who visited Canada earlier this summer, announced in Caracas that Canadian government and private enterprise interests will join in a fresh approach to the development of Venezuelan mineral resources, so far heavily concentrated on petroleum.

The mines department official said the principal problem to be overcome in Venezuela is diversification of its mining industry. While Venezuelan mineral output is much greater in value than Canada's, 95 per cent of it is in oil. Canada has a wide diversification, producing 60-odd minerals commercially.

One of the principal avenues of Venezuelan mineral development is in iron ore in the Orinoco region, which Candian officials said is much like Labrador and northern Quebec in its mineralization.

DISPLAYED MATERIALS

While Perez was in Canada, mines department officials gave him introductions to the heads of major Canadian mining exploration and development firms and any deals he made with them are commercial ventures, of which the government disclaims any knowledge.

The Caracas announcement said Canadian private interests along with the Canadian government would be involved in the development.

General Dynamics Reports Big Loss

NEW YORK (AP) — General Dynamics Corp. reported Friday a loss of $19,372,000 for the six months ended June 30.

The company said the loss was caused by the writeoff of excess costs of $59,044,000, after taxes, on long-term surface ship and submarine construction contracts.

Of this amount, $53,144,000 was charged against 1969 earnings and the remainder to a previously established reserve.

Here Is the Choice for Area Voters

Nomination of Liberal candidates for Victoria riding Friday night gives the three major parties full slates in the four capital-area ridings.

All members of the last legislature are running again. Area candidates are:

VICTORIA: (two seats) Social Credit, Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings and Public Works Minister William Chant; Liberal, Ian Stewart and Mel Couvelier; NDP, Peter Bunn and Phillip Fawcett.

Nominations for the Aug. 27 election officially close Aug. 13 with advance polls scheduled for Aug. 21 and Aug. 23.

ALDERMAN, BUSINESSMAN

By STEVE HUME

Last-minute decisions played a major role in the nominations of Liberal party candidates for the twin-seat riding of Victoria Friday night.

STEWART
. . . individual first

Alderman Ian Stewart, undecided two hours before the nominating meeting, came around at the 11th hour and let his name stand. And 26-year-old party-worker Jim Bigsby chose not to run when two other names were put forward.

Couvelier's nomination came as a surprise to many. His name had not previously been mentioned among those likely to run.

Run is owner and managing director of Maplewood Poultry Processors Ltd. and lives on Campus Crescent in Saanich. He told association members he was not prepared to make a speech, but that next time he would have his "homework done."

Couvelier and Stewart, who lives on Beach Drive in Oak Bay, were the third and fourth lower Island Liberals to be nominated by acclamation. The others were Allan Cox, member of Oak Bay in the last legislature, and lawyer Louis Lindholm who is running in Saanich and the Islands.

Liberal candidate in Esquimalt is Fred Phillips.

LIBERALS FIRST

"I wanted to see this seat go Liberal very badly," Bigsby told association members at the Inn, 1588 Cook St.

"I decided not to run when I saw the calibre of the candidates you have tonight.

"I am more interested in this seat being Liberal than in running myself."

Stewart, a lawyer who has served 2½ years on city council, said his decision to run came after consideration of the alternatives left to voters if the Liberal party did not make a bid.

"The polarization that will result if the Liberal party does not go before the voters will mean the end of individual expression in this province," he said.

. . . running mate

"The government bigness on the right, and the NDP bigness on the left is already excluding the individual."

He accused Bennett of making a "callous decision" in calling the Aug. 27 election when people would be most disorganized and vacationing.

MOTION OF WEAKNESS

"It was a motion of weakness, not of strength, and it's a motion that is going to be turned on him at the end of the month."

Stewart said that, as an alderman, he came to recognize changes taking place in society as "automation, technology, big business and big labor" posed a threat to the individual man.

The government should be insurance to make sure the individual is not forgotten and lost in the shuffle, he said.

For 36-year-old Stewart, it is a second crack at a provincial campaign. In the 1963 election, he ran fourth behind John Tisdalle's 10,657-vote Social Credit sweep in the old riding of Saanich.

The NDP ran second in that election and the Progressive Conservatives third. Stewart got 3,049 votes.

Saanich Signed As New Democrat Bright Spot

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich is sign country—New Democratic Party signs.

They dot the landscape of the peninsula, principally on front lawns and the backs of cars.

This is the constituency the NDP has high hopes of winning Aug. 27, and party leader Tom Berger spent the day with local candidate Don Johannessen.

During five hours of campaigning Friday afternoon, not one Liberal sign was seen and only half a dozen in support of the Socred's John Tisdalle, who has held the constituency since 1953.

It takes more than signs to win elections, yet plentiful signs were the hallmarks of NDP victories in byelections in Nanaimo and Vancouver South—coupled with heavy door-to-door canvassing.

Berger met Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and held a press conference at his office in the legislature, before heading into the riding after lunch.

First stop was in the neighboring Esquimalt constituency —where his sister Mrs. Susan Brooks and his mother Mrs. M. T. Berger both of Colwood, are helping NDP candidate Jim Gorst at his campaign headquarters on the Old Island Highway.

Well-Prepared for Election

Party workers were still putting the headquarters office into shape—nailing up orange and black signs.

Then over to Saanich headquarters on Brunswick Place—quiet, well-organized and well-prepared for the election.

A well-paced tour through the Peninsula took him to visit Mayor Archibald Galbraith of Central Saanich, Mayor J. B. Cumming of North Saanich and Mayor Arthur Freeman of Sidney.

The visits were brief—half an hour or less—and the mayors were guarded in their comments later.

"They are very nice, pleasant people—you can't say much more than that, can you," said Mayor Cumming—the man who nominated Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm in Saanich constituency Thursday night.

The mayors and Berger taked about local problems and municipal affairs.

In Sidney, they dropped into the offices of the weekly newspaper, mainstreeted along Beacon Avenue and table-hopped in the beer parlor of the Sidney Hotel.

This is the new-style campaingning—no big public meetings (or not many anyway), but plenty of person-to-person contact with the people, where they work, where they relax where they live.

A Priority Constituency

The people he met along Beacon Avenue and in other places reacted favorably—not just politely—to him and his party. A good number of them came right out and said they would vote for the NDP.

In the evening, he chatted with shoppers at Town and Country, which marks the southern end of Saanich and The Islands constituency.

This morning he headed up-Island—with stops at Parksville and Alberni, Courtenay and Campbell River on Sunday, Nanaimo on Monday and then back to Vancouver before heading to Prince Rupert and the northland.

As he munched a supper of hamburger and french fries Friday evening, he said Saanich and The Islands constituency is a priority one.

"It is one of the seats we have got to win if we want to form a government," he said. "I think we will win it."

But to win, the NDP must roll back the strong showing by Social Credit in the 1966 provincial election.

At that time, Tisdalle polled almost twice as many votes as the NDP, with the Liberals only 420 votes behind the NDP.

Against this is the fact that Johannessen not only kept the NDP vote intact in the Trudeau sweep of 1968, but increased his party's vote by nearly 2,000 over the 1965 showing.

Teachers to Give Election Stance

The B.C. Teachers' Federation will announce details of its participation in the Aug. 27 election campaign at a press conference in Victoria Tuesday.

The federation has drawn up a platform of what it considers are the most vital issues in education today. Past-president Bob Buzza and general secretary Charlie Ovans will be present.

DIPLOMATIC . . . BUT EVASIVE

Dr. Bruce Partridge, making his first public appearance Friday as president of the University of Victoria, proved a diplomatic but evasive speaker.

Dr. Partridge appeared before some 200 students and faculty members taking part in a two-day symposium on The Learning Society.

Speaking of the "legitimacy of the university," he said universities must function by steering a compromise course between two extremes: those for whom change is not coming fast enough, and those who would like to keep the rate of change at a minimum.

"We will continue to satisfy some of the no-no people and some of the go-go people, and somewhere in between the university will achieve some kind of legitimacy."

But some listeners felt the new president was playing it safe.

Commented one faculty member:

"From what you're saying, you could say the war in Vietnam is legitimate because it fails to satisfy either the doves or the hawks."

Several students tried to get him to say what kind of role the university could play as a source of social change.

The audience seemed frustrated as Dr. Partridge countered questions with questions, asking for definitions of such generalized terms as "Ivory tower," "liberal-arts degree' and "social change."

"To the extent that any institution fails to satisy the needs of a society, that institution dies."

He said change in universities comes not from large, earth-shaking decisions, but from hundreds and thousands of little decisions made by individuals in the schools.

"If it could be changed overnight this would be good — but in five years when the dust settled a whole generation of students would have been sacrificed."

Ask the Times

Q.— How big is the capital region, what is the regional district board, and the regional hospital district?—R.C.

A.—Generally speaking, the Capital Region stretches from Port Renfrew to Sidney with the foot of the Malahat acting as its northern boundary. The Capital Region Planning Board is available for planning advice in all areas of the region but is mostly used by unorganized areas or small communities lacking their own planning staff.

The Regional District Board is a level of government, now in its third year. It is responsible throughout the area for financing regional parks, new sewer construction and firecracker control.

The Regional Hospital District is responsible for all new hospital construction throughout the area, plus hospital construction in the Gulf Islands.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Arthur Mayse . . .

LIKE MANY ANOTHER Victorian who pilots a car and hopes for the best, I have watched what started as a minor traffic nuisance grow to problem proportions. This is hitch-hiking, and I think it's high time the laws against a dangerous intrusion on street or highway were enforced.

I am not prepared to be sentimental about this infestation, and like most drivers, determinedly ignore the juvenile or older person who seeks to hitch a ride.

This isn't always easy to do, since non-interference has encouraged the ready-thumb brigade to dangerous boldness. On several recent occasions, I've had to swerve wide to avoid hitch-hikers who were well out on the blacktop.

I have every sympathy for the kid whose parents can't or won't supply him with transport where necessary.

But driving is tough enough, and getting tougher, and past experience with the hitch-hiker has convinced me that I'd much sooner not have him riding with me.

It's most unlikely that the thumber will break a car door handle, as one little old lady managed to do when alighting after 30 miles of bitter complaint against the state of the world. Nor is there much chance that he'll turn distinctly sinister, as did one young man whom I contrived to leave behind at a coffee stop. Still, I prefer to shun his company.

The best way to make the law work—and save our amply occupied policemen a further load—is to keep the right-hand door closed to the hitch-hiker.

SOMEHOW, I EXPECTED better of Mars than another batch of craters. But such evidence as Mariner 6 has picked up in its lonely mission through space doesn't indicate the presence of life on the warrior planet.

Disturbing though I find the thought, it may turn out that in all the universe, earth alone has been dowered with life-forms.

If we knew that dismal supposition were true, perhaps we'd get on with some of the things we should be doing here below. Like outlawing war, for instance, and tending our dear green orb like a very garden.

However, by a projection that out-ranges the spaceships, let us suppose that future exploration brings man to a planet most remarkably like earth.

Its atmosphere, vegetation, and all else matches ours, and it has a humanoid population whose technological development hasn't yet advanced from the stone age.

Now comes man, by comparison wise and powerful as a god, to this planet that offers him a second chance.

How would he use that chance? Would he prove that history does repeat itself, or would he proceed to crowd the original inhabitants into reserves, foul the rivers, shrink the lakes, smog the sky, and shed his brother's blood?

It's an interesting question. And who knows but what one day our species will be given a chance to answer it?

FROM THIS DEPARTMENT, a warm hello to our American visitors, and a hope that you're getting the kind and courteous treatment that I've unfailingly received in your country.

If you want a fine view of this city, and its surroundings, enquire your way to the top of Mt. Tolme, which is not really a mountain, but a hill.

If you'd like to buy one of the finest sport sweaters made anywhere, shop around for one of the bold-patterned beauties made by Indian knitters and sold locally.

If you enjoy an evening of live theatre, a university sponsored comedy, 'Tartuffe,' will be playing at our McPherson Theatre on Tuesday, August 5. Curtain time, 8 p.m., and reservations at the box office. Phone 386-6121.

When you're home again, you might like to take pen in hand and give me your impressions of our city—what pleased you, and also what didn't.

Have a good trip, and accept my assurance that you're welcome here.

TELEPHONE VOTE KNOWN MONDAY

A decision on whether or not the B.C. Telephone strike will end will be known Monday.

That is the day when ballots will be counted in Vancouver following votes by members of the Federation of Telephone Workers of British Columbia.

Close to 400 of the 500 Victoria strikers voted Friday night at a meeting in the Victoria Curling Club where general secretaries of the plant, traffic and clerical division explained a settlement proposal.

Local president Ken John said he would "hate to hazard" a guess at the vote, calling it a "complete toss-up." He said there was "a lot of feeling against" the settlement proposals.

B.C. Tel has increased its across-the-board salary increase offer to 19.8 per cent, as well as other features, in a new two-year agreement with the union, following renewed negotiations urged by federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

No Bids On Refit Draws Ire

The two major West Coast shipyards have protested to Ottawa about the $3.3 million conversion job on the destroyer-escort HMCS Gatineau which will be handled in the navy's HMC Dockyard.

J. W. Hudson, executive vice-president of the Burrard-Yarrows Group with yards in North Vancouver and Esquimalt, said the government decision is "almost unprecedented."

He said the government dockyard is taking work normally handled by commercial shipyards "without the commercial shipyards being given a chance to submit a bid. We are certain that we can do the job in a more efficient manner and at a competitive cost."

He said he had been informed by the minister's executive assistant that the protest has been considered and cannot be accepted.

Dockyard is also to overhaul the submarine HMCS Rainbow.

Hudson said that four years ago, the federal government forecast future government requirements in the shipbuilding field which would enable commercial shipyards to plan ahead.

At the time, the government made a commitment that the first three of six planned destroyer-escort conversions would take place in West Coast yards, he said.

Eighteen months ago Burrard Dry Dock submitted the low tender on the first of the conversions, but the work was then postponed.

HMCS Gatineau is to arrive here in mid-August. She will be provided with variable-depth sonar, a rocket-assisted homing torpedo system and improved radar and electronic equipment.

Between 300 and 400 workers will be needed for the refit which should take 15 months. Work on the Rainbow is estimated to take eight months.

The destroyer refit is part of a $50 million modernization for four ships of her class.

The first, the Terra Nova, has rejoined the Atlantic fleet after being refitted at Halifax dockyard. Contracts for the other two, the Kootenay and Restigouche, will be awarded after tenders are called on a nation-wide commercial basis.

CITY LOGGER KILLED IN RUNAWAY TRUCK

Dead is James Maurice Moreno, 103 Pine, an employee at the Franklin River division of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.

Lake Cowichan RCMP say the accident happened after Morena had driven a load of logs to the top of a hill around noon. He turned the truck and was on his way down the hill when he lost control. The truck rolled down a 140-foot embankment.

Moreno was thrown out and died instantly. He is survived by his wife, Linda.

Before the Judge

Richard Wilson, 38, of 4888 Davida, was sentenced to one day in prison and ordered to post a good behaviour bond of $250 for six months in central court Friday.

After a trial of an hour and a half he was convicted of assaulting a peace officer by Judge William Ostler.

Court was told he had launched himself at Esquimalt Constable Stuart Walker when he and another officer were carrying him from the lobby of the Gorge Hotel where he had been forbidden to drink for previous misbehaviour.

Douglas A. Toole, of Calgary, was remanded to Aug. 8 to allow him time to obtain legal counsel before facing a charge of trafficking a narcotic.

Bail was set at $2,000.

The man said he had been in Victoria only two weeks.

Rodger C. Craig, 20, of 1445 Fort Street, was remanded to Aug. 8 after his counsel, William Hitch, told Judge Ostler circumstances forced him to withdraw from the case.

Craig was granted the remand to allow him to obtain other counsel.

Charges of wilful damage under $50 were withdrawn against Delbert J. Thibault, 469 Lampson, because the date of his offence was wrong on his summons.

Helena Jane, 2115 Lorne Terrace, was fined $10 for allowing her dog to be at large; Victor Smith, 2290 Brighton, was fined $15 for the same offence.

Patrick J. Watson, no fixed address, was remanded to Aug. 8 for completion of his pre-sentence report.

He had pleaded guilty to attempting to defraud at an earlier hearing. Court was told he had claimed another customer's parcel as his own at Woolworth's July 23, and tried to return it for cash the next morning.

He had told store detectives who apprehended him he had been in a schizophrenic blackout, but their questions had shocked him out of it.

Uncle Miltie In New Role As Producer

NEW YORK (NYT) — Milton Berle, who has been everything from a kid performer to TV's very own Uncle Miltie, is preparing for a new role.

The 61-year-old comedian will join his former press agent, Paul W. Benson, to produce theatrical films, TV spectaculars and an assortment of video series.

Their first movie will be "The Brass Go-Between," based on a novel by Oliver Bleeck which William Morrow will publish in September. Ross Thomas will do the script.

What's it all about, Miltie? "Well, I guess you could describe it as a suspense adventure," he said. "It's set in New York and Washington and the hero is a newspaerman who acts as the go-between for a band of thieves who steal the shield of a new African nation and African diplomats who are determined to get it back. We should start shooting in the fall."

What makes a gag man want to be a production man? "It's simple. I've done almost everything in the business, from 'the Perils of Pauline' in 1915 to 22 years of TV, and I think it's high time to try my hand at producing. But I'll still act in movies and TV and do my shtick at the Fontainbleau." By all means, Uncle Miltie, do your own shtick.

Prairie Hotel Burns

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — Damage is estimated at $400,000 in a fire that destroyed the downtown Cosmopolitan Hotel early today.

Hotel manager Alf Cantalini, who gave the official damage estimate, said the loss was covered to a maximum of 25 per cent and said the fire occurred just as workmen were finishing $60,000 in renovations.

Police said the fire in the 55-year-old three-storey brick structure was caused by someone smoking in bed in a top-floor room.

Treasure Found

AUCKLAND (Reuters)—Three New Zealanders claim to have found a treasure estimated to be worth several million dollars in a privateer sunk off Tonga in 1806. They are negotiating with the Tongan government over their discovery, which by Tongan law is the property of the king. Colin Prast, an Auckland company director, said Thursday his group located three iron strongboxes, one of which contained gold and silver coins, plate and other valuables.

Soccer Stars Bid for Spots On Cup Squad

LONDON (Reuters)—The English League soccer program, which gets under way Aug. 9, takes on added significance this season as players try to win World Cup team places as well as domestic honors for their clubs.

League fixtures end in mid-April, a month earlier than usual, to help England prepare for the defence of its world title in Mexico in June.

At club level, the battle for the First Division title and a subsequent place in the European Cup, promises to be highly-competitive with little to separate the leading sides.

More than £1,500,000 ($3,900,000) has changed hands in transfer fees for players since last season as clubs have been spending lavishly to strengthen their teams for the arduous eight-month campaign.

The league title has been monopolized by the North of England for the last seven years and London and Midland clubs, left out in the cold for so long, will be all out to topple Leeds United (1969 champion), Manchester City (1968), Manchester United (1965 and 1967), Liverpool (1964 and 1966) and Everton (1963)

Leeds, which won the title for the first time in the club's history last season, opens its campaign with a home match against Tottenham Hotspur.

The defending champions will by fielding Britain's most expensive signing, goal-scoring forward Allan Clarke, who cost £165,000 when bought from Leicester City in June.

SUPERB DEFENCE

Clarke will add scoring strength to Leeds' superb defence, which includes England World Cup centre-half Jackie Charlton and fullback Terry Cooper, another World Cup probable.

Liverpool, runner-up last season, has not dipped into the transfer market, preferring to rely on its tested players. Its first opponent is the unpredictable Chelsea, capable of upsetting the strongest of sides.

First Division newcomer Crystal Palace faces a fiery baptism against star-studded Manchester United, the 1968 European champions. Derby County, the other promoted team, meets Burnley and the clash marks the return to the First Division of Dave Mackay, the Derby skipper who was formerly with Tottenham Hotspur.

The Scottish season begins with the League Cup, with all-conquering Glasgow Celtic, champion for the last four years, meeting Airdrieonians in its opening clash. Once again Celtic's chief rival for honors is likely to be its Glasgow rival, Rangers.

Reports Hint North Vietnam In Hard Times

SAIGON (AP) — The newspapers published by the Communist regime in North Vietnam must be the dullest in the world. Behind thousands of turgid words, however, they clearly disclose a regime having hard times.

The diplomats, intelligence agents and a small band of Hanoi watchers in Saigon who daily scan this mass of words make only cautious assessments. Nobody predicts any collapse or even that hard times will seriously change Hanoi's policies.

These sources do insist, however, that living conditions in the North—as painted in Hanoi's own closely controlled press—must have some effect on elderly Ho Chi Minh and the men who make the basic decisions.

HEARTLAND

It has been 15 months since the American bombing of North Vietnam's heartland ended and almost nine months since the total bombing halt. Yet the North Vietnamese press still paints a picture of serious manpower shortages, morale problems, low productivity and agricultural and industrial disruption.

The roads and railroads have been repaired and Haiphong's docks are handling as much or more cargo than ever, but the everyday life of the North Vietnamese appears to have changed little.

The most serious problem appears to be well-trained and motivated manpower. Such shortages are repeatedly noted, although no mention is ever made of the soldiers sent to South Vietnam.

The United States claims that about 521,000 enemy soldiers have been killed on the battlefield—not counting those who died in B-52 bombing raids, from disease or from other causes. North Vietnam's military leader, Vo Nguyen Giap, is reported to have recently admitted the loss of 500,000 North Vietnamese in the South.

Complaining of low productivity, the daily Hanoi Moi—New Hanoi—reports:

"Many healthy, experienced workers have gone to meet the new needs of the revolution.

"The numbers of work days and work hours have declined in many places, labor discipline is lax, manpower is wasted. These deficiencies lead to a situation of labor productivity increasing slowly or not increasing at all and in places there is a tendency for productivity to decline."

To combat this, Hanoi's rulers are using the old capitalist solution of incentive pay. They call it "salary according to production."

Littlebitofsugar Pays Sweet Price

VANCOUVER (CP) — Outsider Littlebitofsugar, ridden by Jim Gilbert, just beat favored Ardido to pay a sweet win divident of $104.30 in the third race at Exhibition Park Friday night.

Littlebitofsugar paid $38.80 for place tickets and $10.20 for show bets.

Hasty Judge won the featured eighth race. Grand Bolero was second and Agha Sea was third.

MOUNTIES GET PITCHER

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos have optioned pitcher Don Shaw to Vancouver Mounties of the Pacific Coast League.

TRAIL JUNIORS WIN

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Trail Blazers won the opening game of the Canadian junior baseball tournament Friday, posting a 10-9 victory over Moncton Cubs.

Harness Drivers Injured in Spill

Bob Silliphant, 55, suffered a broken left leg in the spill which also bruised Jim Muttart and Dalton Hodgins.

Yearlings Bought By Conn Smythe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Conn Smythe of Toronto purchased two George Royal offsprings at the British Columbia Breeders' Society yearling sale.

He said he came to Vancouver to purchase George Royal offspring and got the two that were offered.

His purchases were the colt by George Royal out of Honeybloom for which he paid $9,000 and the filly out of Starlight Abbey which he bid $6,000 for.

SAILING CHAMPION

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Felix Moitoreit of Seattle won the North American Geary class sailing championship Friday. Doug Campbell of Cultus Lake was second in the five-day event for 18-foot craft.

Ontario Junior Loop Back in CAHA Ranks

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — The rebel Western Ontario Junior A Hockey League has decided to rejoin the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, the league's interim president, Vic Symes, said Thursday.

The decision follows an announcement Wednesday at Winnipeg that the eight-team Western Canada Hockey League, which had also broken away from the CAHA and formed the Canadian Hockey Association with the Ontario rebels, was returning to the fold.

Symes' announcement that his five-team league would apply for re-entry to the Ontario Hockey Association came after a meeting at Guelph with OHA president Clarence Schmalz of Walkerton.

He said the teams expect the same concessions from the OHA that was granted the western teams, which the CAHA will allow to use five over-age players this season.

Symes also announced that his league has paid to the OHA a $240 entry fee for six teams, lending weight to his announcement Wednesday that his five-team league would be joined by a sixth this year.

Symes' announcement that his league would return to the OHA followed denials earlier Thursday that this would take place.

Hearing Set On Complaint By Lady Ump

NEW YORK (AP) — The chairman of the New York State human rights division said Friday he would hold a hearing Sept. 15 on Bernice Gera's complaint of discrimination in her bid to become baseball's first woman umpire.

Mrs. Gera of Queens, N.Y., was to have made her debut at Auburn, N.Y., in a New York-Pennsylvania League game Friday night. She was hired after discrimination charges had been filed with the state human rights division.

Thursday, however, she was told her contract had not been approved, and Mrs. Gera said she would take her case back to the division.

Clerk's Mistake Nets Big Bonus

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — A daily-double seller at Fort Erie racetrack found Thursday that every cloud has a silver lining.

Jim Holmes was a bit nettled when he punched out the wrong daily double ticket for a customer and had to keep the $5 ticket himself. No one else claimed it and, under mutuel rules, if an incorrect ticket is punched and not bought, the clerk must pay for it himself.

The "mistake" won Holmes $1,342.25 on Victorian Lady in the first race and Northern Lead in the second.

Caffery Taking Chicago's Offer

TORONTO (CP) — Centre Terry Caffery, 20, a member of last season's Canadian national team, has decided to turn professional with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

Caffery expects to sign a contract with the Hawks this week. The nationals had been hoping to retain his services for the coming season.

Tartuffe Can Launch Fair Into Orbit

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Tartuffe may just be the booster to put Victoria Fair into orbit—for years ahead.

At mid-point in the seven-week trial operation, that's an opinion formed on the basis of close observation, a weighing of achievement against intent and a sampling of public reaction.

Entry into the repertory Tuesday, of the Moliere comedy, Tartuffe, could turn out to be the deciding factor. Of the two plays that have alternated since July 11, the tragedy Hamlet has been dragging its feet on the popularity path.

Merchant of Venice, has been first choice for people planning on taking in one or the other and has been catching raves on all sides.

Does this mean, if box office is to be the main criterion, that the name of the game is comedy?

I'm afraid it does. "Afraid" because such a restriction imposes artistic limitations, always an unfortunate factor.

Unless we decide to make our festival a sort of high-falutin laugh-in.

Hamlet was chosen for the repertory in the first place on the basis that it was one of the best known Shakespearean plays and that Christopher Newton was available for the role.

There was some wrong-guessing there which could and probably would happen to any newcomer to the city, for theatre audiences in Victoria aren't like those found elsewhere.

In Victoria life generally is pleasant, soft, relaxing. Possibly people who go to the theatre—being among the average-and-slightly-above intellects and therefore a bit on the sensitive side—have somewhat guilty consciences about this good life.

This leads to a general desire to close eyes and ears against the harsher aspects—sorrow, catastrophe, sordidness, injustice, ugliness.

On the other hand, for the minority who are more profound in their theatre tastes and less squeamish, Hamlet was too trammeled an offering and would only attract their attention if a great, or controversial, artist was playing the Dane

To be fair, Newton brought some fine qualities to the role. He is clearly a gifted young actor, intelligent and in many aspects well trained for the classical theatre.

But neither his artistic stature nor his reputation—as yet—have reached a point to make him a commanding Hamlet for the connoisseur or the truly dedicated theatre-goer, for whom the tragedies and the serious plays must be slanted in this town.

Much more to the taste of Victorians and visitors has been the charm, the light mood and short span of Merchant of Venice.

People are loving it and talking about it, debating the differences in interpretation, excited to find so high a level of professionalism finally adorned their playhouse.

Whatever mis-step may have been made, whatever valid criticism can be leveled concerning the productions, there are sure and certain aspects that make Victoria Fair worthwhile, justifying the University of Victoria's initial venture in promoting it.

Uvic fine arts chiefs had in mind in planning this rather narrowly budgeted "first", a trial run testing the suitability of the Victoria climate for a major fine arts festival.

To my mind they have been answered affirmatively. For among residents and visitors who have seen the shows, there is talk, attention has been arrested, there is a thrill of discovery and surprise.

Inject some more high-powered (green tinted) fuel in the tanks of Victoria Fair and watch the attention grow and spread over the next couple of years.

HYPOCRITE and imposter, Tartuffe, played in Victoria Fair production by Carl Hare, has taken possession of the mind and heart of wealthy, good-natured Monsieur Orgon, dominates his household and nurses villainous plans to dispossess him of family and wealth.

OPENING SCENE from the lively French (English version) comedy, Tartuffe, reveals magnificent setting, handsome period furniture, both designed by Robert Cothran and executed in Uvic workshop. Tartuffe joins Victoria Fair Repertory Tuesday, at McPherson Playhouse.

On-Campus Experiment Wednesday

An on-campus, somewhat experimental production, involving students and faculty in the theatre division of University of Victoria will have the first of six performances in the Phoenix Theatre, Wednesday.

Joel Miller, stage manager for Victoria Fair, who is assistant to artistic director Christopher Newton in Theatre Calgary, is directing a piece of "metaphysical vaudeville" entitled Tilt.

The play involves some improvisation and has in its cast, Allan Granstrom (chief of costume design), Marti Maraden (Jessica in Merchant of Venice), and Jim Leard and Jim Netherton, third year Uvic theatre students.

Tilt performances, after Wednesday, will fall on Aug. 8, 14, 16, 18 and 22.

Summer Music Making To Climax in Concert

The trend toward Victoria becoming the scene of action as far as summer music making is concerned has taken on greater emphasis than ever this season.

On Friday an interesting concert will climax five weeks of study by an international group of students who have attended Victoria Summer School of Music sessions on the campus of St. Margaret's School.

Instructors Clayton Hare, violinist and conductor, and his wife, pianist Dorothy Swetnam, have prepared a versatile program to be presented at 8:15 p.m. in the Newcombe Auditorium.

Among Victoria students taking part will be violinist Ronald Comber and pianists Linda Marshall and Heline Barker.

Younger performers will include Gwendy and Desmond Hoebig of Vancouver, the exceptional young brother and sister who astonished adjudicator and audiences at last spring's Victoria Music Festival.

An orchestra, two string quartets, a piano ensemble and string and piano solos will be featured.

A composition for orchestra and a piece for piano by the Russian-American composer, Vladimir Padwa, recent winner of the ASCAP award in New York, are included.

The orchestra will also play a Concerto Grosso by Corelli, the great Fugue in G minor by Bach arranged for strings, and a rarely performed work by Mozart—an entracte from his incidental music for the drama, Thamos, King of Egypt.

Piano compositions by Bartok, Groule, Bach and Chopin are included among solo numbers.

Students attending the summer school in its fifth year have come from Massachussetts, Maine, Oregon, Washington, Ontario, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

The concert is open to the public.

'Gleason the Great' Eyeing Competition

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The word from the camp of CBS-TV's Jackie Gleason is that The Great One will be going all out to fend off the new competition of NBC-TV's Andy Williams this fall.

Gleason has been a rock of ratings consistency and power for CBS-TV for years, and the NBC-TV move of confronting him head-on with Williams' variety hour will be watched closely by the trade as well as the public.

A Gleason spokesman says the comedian will offer at least 10 new one-hour musicals based on The Honeymooners characters that are the anchor of the series.

This means clearly, says the spokesman, that Art Carney, Sheila Macrae and Jane Kean will be back with Gleason. The Carney confirmation, which seems solid at this point, according to the spokesman, is pivotal to the success of the series.

For there is little doubt that without Carney the series would be severly weakened, and that the Williams competition would become even more formidable.

In addition to The Honeymooners musicals, says the spokesman, there will be at least 10 other programs, original, in the musical-comedy style, in which Gleason will offer some of his other characters — such as Reggie Van Gleason, Rum Dum, Fenwick Babbitt, The Poor Soul and The Loud Mouth.

POWERFUL

Changes in the cast of Tartuffe, bring John Krich into the role of Cleante, the brother-in-law of wealthy Orgon (Richard Galuppi).

Rod Symington who played the part in the original four-night run in March, is now on a Sabbatical in Europe.

Krich, a polished and powerful actor who this semester becomes a faculty member in Uvic's theatre division, is now appearing in all three Victoria Fair productions.
